SUMMARY.

The Kaiser is reported to be displaying remarkable energy. He is attending meetings of generals everywhere.

After each big fight he makes a personal valuation of victory and of the acts of the commanders.

He then dismisses the untalented and hesitating commanders for the smallest peccadilloes.

The withdrawal of the Russians from the Vilna position has been completed. The Germans lost 250,000 men.

A German communique says: We penetrated the Russian advanced positions west of Dvinsk, capturing 2000 prisoners.

The enemy is redoubling his efforts against Dvinsk, and is attacking from three sides with heavy artillery.

The enemy's persistence shows his determination to precipitate events on the Dwina.

The secretary of the Bulgarian Legation in London has been interviewed.

Roumania and Greece, he says, are mobilised, and there is nothing astonishing in Bulgaria following suit.

There is a panic among the Mussulman population owing to Karagach and other districts having to transfer to Bulgaria.

Numbers have taken refuge in Adrianople, which is also in a state of panic.

It is stated that Bulgaria's mobilisation is due to the fears of German violation of her territory.

The Turks are reported to be preparing for another attack upon Egypt.

German officers in Syria are training an army intended as the second expedition to Egypt in the middle of November.

All Christians except Germans have been disarmed, and are completely terrorised.

In the Budget debate in the House of Commons Mr. G. N. Barnes, on behalf of the Labour party, approved of Mr. McKenna's proposals.

The total enlistments at the city recruiting depots during the week numbered 901.

The men who had been passed as fit for positions in the new Remount Unit were tested on the old rifle range yesterday.

The city recruits failed to reach the rough-riding standard, but the countrymen handled the animals in a masterly way.

At the conclusion Captain Bell advised a crowd of onlookers of military age from the country to enlist.

As the result of last week's rain the outlook in the South Coast district is brighter. The milk yield is rapidly increasing.

The real estate market was fairly active during the week. Indoor sales were the principal feature.

Business on the Stock Exchange yesterday was restricted, most of the transactions recorded showing a slight decline in prices.

The Mining market was extremely quiet; values generally were unaltered.

AUSTRAL SUITS FOR MEN,
READY TO WEAR.

"AUSTRAL" SUITS Ready to Wear for Spring and Summer illustrate to the full our leadership as outfitters to men. Every garment is actually tailored, and, with fabrics of a quality to show good workmanship at its best, these splendid Suits will prove a genuine surprise to men who as yet are unacquainted, and have the usual conception of ready-made clothes.

"Austral" Suits, ready to wear, are in a class by themselves . . . . better tailored, in better fabrics, and better finished than the ordinary.

We show the garments from dust-proof cabinets, pressed, ready to put on.

They are neither creased nor crushed, and don't need to get the continual brushing to keep them free from dust, which takes the newness out of the cloth.

Come in and see them; let us show you how well we can fit you . . . . with half, quarter, and regular sizes it is not at all the difficult matter you might imagine.

Carriage Paid on all Country Orders.

Mr. J. M. Kingwell, of the Bellita Transport Co., Ltd., Mackay, N.Q., to whom we supplied a 12 h.p. "STANDARD" Engine four years ago, writes as follows:—"The Engine is still going good; we have carried over twenty-four thousand (24,000) passengers without a miss; pretty good."

the Girl with the Voice of Gold.
Her First Appearance on Any Stage Other than the Concert Platform, of SYDNEY'S CONTRALTO, who was Chosen Out of all the Musical Students in London to Sing at A COMMAND PERFORMANCE
at the Royal Alexandra Palace, with a
CHORUS and ORCHESTRA of ONE THOUSAND.

READ THIS:—
Seldom is the musical portion the most important feature of the Tivoli Theatre programme, but it certainly was on Saturday evening, when a rare treat was afforded music-lovers. The appearance on any platform of Miss Ella Caspers, a Sydney contralto, who has won for herself an enviable reputation abroad, would have been an important event, but the programme also included Mr. Hector Goldspink, who is well and favourably known to Melbourne audiences. Both of these artists were distinctly successful at their debut at the Tivoli on Saturday evening before a crowded audience. The chief features of Miss Caspers' voice are its beautiful and even quality, but little less noticeable is her masterly production. Her most important number was "The Enchantress" (Hatton), in which she at once proved her artistry; while "Coming Home," composed specially for her prior to her departure from England last year, was even more loudly applauded. Miss Caspers, who achieved a triumphant success, was obliged to give two extra numbers and bow her acknowledgments several times. Mr. Goldspink, whose voice has improved considerably of late, also received a double encore, and, even after he had contributed a good selection of operatic songs and ballads, the audience wanted to hear him longer. The "Argus."

VITAL TO CAR BUYERS.
Do not abuse the gears of that nice, new car which you have purchased. Those gears are very expensive, and you might easily damage them to the extent of £10 or more in a few minutes.

Acquire the necessary experience ON OUR CARS, then you will step into your own purchase with that pleasant confidence in yourself which will save you many a hair-raising fright and your gears many a damaging jar.

GOODYEAR

YOUR JOYS ARE AT STAKE ON YOUR TYRES.

FOR YOUR OWN SAKE, KNOW THE GOODYEAR.

The facts are in favour of Goodyear tyres. The verdict of Motordom favours them. For years they've outsold any other. And their users this year have increased by the thousands.

WHY NOT ALL MEN?

Then why don't all men use them when they stand for what all men want?

The main reason is lack of comparison. Men start with one tyre and cling to it. When troubles come they think that all tyres suffer like misfortunes.

Of course, no tyre is exempt from mishap and misuse. But in average service tyres differ very widely.

NOTE THESE FACTS:

Goodyear Fortified Tyres have five great features which no other tyre employs. These combat loose treads, punctures, and skidding in matchless and efficient ways.

They have other features adding strength and wear which few makers now embody.

These extras will cost us on this year's output £227,000. Our 1915 betterments alone will cost us £100,000 this year.

Our anti-skid tread—the Goodyear All-Weather—is double thick and tough. We add an extra tread instead of roughing our regular. And that, on our output of All-Weathers this year, will cost us £250,000.

Yet this year's Goodyear price reduction will save our users some one million pounds. And that was our third reduction in two years, totalling 45 per cent.

Fortified Tyres is more than a name. It's a fact—a very costly fact to us. It's an economical, trouble-saving fact to you.

We are saving tyre users many thousands of pounds by building tyres in this way. We are winning new users faster than ever before. May we not, through good service, have a chance to win you?

ANY GARAGE WILL SUPPLY YOU.

THE CAR BUICK. THAT GLIDES.

1916 A REAL MOTOR CAR. 1916

A few years back motorists were content with a single-cylinder puffing billy, and later on the better-class car had two cylinders.

When the Buick Co. in 1907 introduced a four-cylinder car people thought it was too much, and might cost something enormous in upkeep, as they were comparing it with four-cylinder cars of other makes, weighing about two tons, etc.

WHAT REALLY HAPPENED.

The truth is, the 1907 four-cylinder car actually costs less to own than the old single-cylinder car, because it worked so smoothly in comparison.

BUICK PROGRESS.

To-day Buicks are further advanced, and we are now getting a light-running six-cylinder car. Do not confound this car with other six-cylinder makes, which cost a lot to own. The new Buick is a light car of small horse-power—economical to own. It averaged 22 miles per gallon to Jenolan Caves and back. It looks as if it is going to be lighter on tyres—and so it should, as it is easier riding—jolting is not known—engine vibration is not there—change of gear is just about unnecessary. This alone means long life to everything.

AFTER A YEAR OR SO OF BUICK SIX-CYLINDER SATISFACTION OTHER FIRMS WILL BE MAKING SIXES.

SPECIFICATIONS.

BODY—Roadster type; stream line body and hood, with deep cowl and instrument board.

BODY—Five-passenger Touring type; stream line body and hood, with deep cowl and instrument board; extra wide seats and doors.

FRAME—Reinforced pressed steel, extra heavy, with 3½-inch drop, with exceptionally deep side members.

REAR AXLE—Full-floating type, with double row ball bearings throughout. In the full-floating type of axle the weight of the car is carried on the housing, the live axle shaft simply transmitting rotation to the rear wheels. The driving pinion and ring gear with which it engages are the spiral type, specially cut, insuring unusually smooth action and reducing friction.

WHEELS—Wood, artillery type, with demountable rims. Extra large hub flanges and twelve heavy spokes.

TYRES—815 x 105; with spare Tyre.

WHEELBASE—115 inches.

MOTOR—Three-point suspension unit power plant; six-cylinder, four cycle, Valve-in-head type. Cylinders, semi-steel; four bearings crank shaft with bronze backed bushings and die cast babbitt linings. Exceptionally large bearing surfaces. Valves, Tungsten steel; valve mechanism exceptionally quiet. Noiseless ball end adjustable push rods working in ball-socketed rocker arms, with felt oil retainer. Bore 82 M.M., Stroke 114 M.M.

Pressed steel fan, running on noiseless bearings, flat belt, driven from cam shaft pulley; centre distances of fan pulleys easily adjusted to take up stretch in belt.

CARBURETTOR—Automatic float feed with concentric float, supplied by auxiliary gravity feed vacuum system from 16-gallon gasoline tank, suspended from rear end of frame.

LUBRICATION—Self-contained, constant level circulating splash system, with distributing pipe cast integral with crank case; oil circulated by gear pump; special flush sight feed on instrument board.

CLUTCH.—Extra large leather-faced aluminium adjustable cone of special design. Expanders under leather to prevent harsh action. Controlled by brake insuring quiet and easy gear shifting.

TRANSMISSION—Sliding gear, selective type, three speeds forward and reverse. Heat-treated nickel steel transmission gears. Clutch gear and sliding gear shaft running on double row annular ball bearings; counter gears running on bronze bearings.

DRIVE—Direct to spiral bevel gears in rear axle; nickel steel, heat-treated propeller shaft fully enclosed, running on annular and double row ball bearings. Differential gears, double heat-treated nickel steel. Universal joint relieves all driving and torsional strain by universal bearing of Buick design on front end of third member.

BRAKES—Emergency, internal expanding; service, external contracting. Very effective and positive, but entirely eliminating dragging and grabbing; anti-rattling; easily adjustable for wear.

STEERING GEAR—Improved type, with one-piece housing; semi-irreversible, split nut and worm type, fully adjustable, ball thrust bearing, eighteen-inch corrugated steering wheel with inserted spider, special design horn button located in centre of steering wheel.

CONTROL—Friction-retained spark and throttle levers on top of steering wheel. Independent foot accelerator and muffler cut-out. Pedals for starter, service brake and clutch.

FINISH—Handsomely painted. Deep cushions, luxuriously upholstered in genuine black leather over curled hair and deep coil springs. Running boards and floor boards oil treated, linoleum covered, aluminium bound, Khaki hood.

STARTER—The Delco single-unit system of electrical cranking, lighting, and ignition as an integral part of the motor, complete with combination high-grade ammeter and switch on instrument board.

(No allowance will be made for any part of standard equipment omitted by customer's order.)

20 REASONS WHY YOU SHOULD PURCHASE A METZ CAR FOR £190.

1. IT IS ECONOMICAL. In the country you will average 30-33 miles per gallon. In the City you will average 27-30.
2. IT IS LIGHT ON TYRES. Our records show an average of 5000-6000 miles per tyre. Tyres cost 79/- per cover and 22/- per tube.
3. IT IS SIMPLE. So simple that no car built has fewer working parts. Reduce working parts to a minimum, and wear and tear and maintenance charges are reduced in direct ratio.
4. IT IS RELIABLE. Simplicity and high-grade steel construction must mean Reliability. The fewer parts there are to "go wrong" the more Reliable is your car.
5. IT IS SPEEDY. If you want to travel at 40 miles an hour—buy a METZ.
6. IT CAN CLIMB HILLS. Do you know of any car that can climb hills faster than a METZ? There are very few.
7. IT HAS BOSCH MAGNETO IGNITION. Fully 90 per cent. of the cars you see have BOSCH Ignition. The METZ has BOSCH Ignition.
8. IT IS COMFORTABLE. So comfortable to ride in that a buyer having a Trial Run never fails to remark on it.
9. IT IS HANDSOME. We presume you want a car to not only run well but look well also. Your friends will compliment you on your METZ. It has a full torpedo body.
10. IT IS EASILY CLEANED. Fittings are in nickel—no brass polishing to worry over.
11. IT SEATS 3 COMFORTABLY. Not only this, but there is ample leg room, because if a standard body isn't comfortable we build you a body at no extra charge.
12. IT IS FULLY ESTABLISHED ON THE MARKET. Hundreds are in daily use all over Australia.
13. IT HAS PROVED ITSELF TO BE A GOOD CAR. Not only in the hands of regular users, but in all the Reliability Contests in which it has competed in the last 4 years.
14. IT NEVER WAITS FOR A RENEWAL PART. A full range of spares is ALWAYS kept in stock, so YOU are not kept waiting.
15. IT IS BUILT THROUGHOUT IN AMERICA. It is manufactured in Waltham, Mass., U.S.A.
16. IT IS GUARANTEED FOR 3 YEARS FROM DATE OF PURCHASE. We have sufficient confidence in the METZ Car to hand you a 3 years' written Guarantee with it.
17. IT IS SOLD COMPLETE WITH FITTINGS, ALL READY FOR ROAD SERVICE. The price is £190. There is no need to pay another £10 and £15 for this, that, and the other thing.
18. IT HAS A LONG WHEEL-BASE. Front and rear axles are 8 feet apart, giving the car a long, low, graceful appearance.
19. IT IS SOLD FOR A REASONABLE PRICE. £190 is a most moderate price for the METZ, as it is a car that will do the work of cars costing double the money.
20. IT HAS 7 FORWARD SPEEDS. The gearless transmission is an ideal drive, giving 7 forward speeds, and entirely eliminating clutch, gear-box, live axle, universal joints, etc.

WHY THE "OVERLAND" PUTS OTHER 4-CYLINDER CARS OFF THE MARKET.

When a manufacturer has made a 4-cylinder car of "Overland" quality at the Overland price, that is the car he will continue to offer to his customers, provided it gives satisfaction in competition with the Overland—but when he cannot make a 4-cylinder car of Overland quality and sell it at the Overland price, then he is forced sooner or later to make another type of car so he will be able to get some business in competition with the Overland.

Watch the new models of other makes and you will see—new sizes—new eights—new anything, in fact, in an effort to compete with the Overland. Do not let a salesman bluff you into paying extra money for six cylinders when the quality cannot be equal to the Overland.

The Overland Factory is the largest factory in the World making a full-sized quality car. Over 100,000 Overland cars will be made this year—that's why the other factories cannot compete, and are resorting to new untried models in order to get the extra money they must ask for inferior cars.

JERVIS BAY

MACLEAN'S POINT SUBDIVISION,
On St. George's Basin, is the most attractive in the locality.

ST. GEORGE'S BASIN.—A magnificent sheet of water, many miles in extent, runs out via the Channel to the South Pacific Ocean; numerous Bays and Points encircle the Basin, yet none can match MACLEAN'S POINT.

An early, wise choice of grant in the far back days, when all around was available for selection. It is connected with the mainland, leading to Nowra in one direction, and to Victoria in another.

THE SOIL IS GOOD FOR GARDEN CULTIVATION, and from any part of this Subdivision is commanded a wide stretch of water view over the capacious Basin, and right on to the distant Mountains of Monaro.

Situation of Maclean's Point Estate is only a few miles from the
and will be in close touch with all the environing developments to occur therefrom, more especially when the expected Railway shall be provided.

Comparatively few know of the charming beauties of St. George's Basin, with its clean sand or clear pebbly bottom, and on whose bosom sail and steam, chiefly for pleasure, innumerable boats and launches, affording pure, healthful enjoyment and fishing, whilst from the rocks, etc., of Maclean's Point Subdivision, the angler can beguile his time by profitable catches. As population grows

HOW A 1½d TRAM FARE
SAVED THREE £5 NOTES.
'Twas afternoon, and the clocks near the Railway had just chimed the hour of 3, but still the waiter waited on. Young, good-looking, with the happiness and air of a bride-to-be. The sound of those chimes had caused a frown as of annoyance. SOMEONE expected—evidently very late. Together they had arranged to visit O. K. ELLIOTT'S FACTORY SHOWROOMS AND there goes the BALMAIN CAR, which would carry them RIGHT TO THE DOORS OF THE SHOWROOMS. Ah, here he comes!
Inexperienced, they had searched the Town for FURNISHINGS, collecting lists here and there, but all without satisfactory results. Now they were acting upon the advice of friends who knew, visiting the house of THE BEST FURNISHINGS, resolved upon a thorough inspection of the O. K. ELLIOTT FURNISHING SCHEMES, about which they had heard so much—THE SCHEMES WHICH DIFFER FROM THE REST ELSEWHERE.
INSPECTION resulted in SATISFACTION. An O. K. ELLIOTT £50 FURNISHING SCHEME proved to be just what they had been looking for. But how about comparison with elsewhere? Behold, looks of surprise and pleasure when as a result of their visit to O. K. ELLIOTT'S they found that they had SAVED £15—THREE £5 NOTES BACK TO THE BANK FOR A RAINY DAY, and without accepting lower grades or less furnishings. Won't you come along, too, next time furniture is required? EVERYTHING STOCKED, FROM A CLOTHES PEG TO AN ORGAN, at lower prices than elsewhere.

LIFE IN LONDON AND THEREABOUT.

(CHRONICLED BY SIR HENRY LUCY.)

Reported Peace Overtures—German Emperor's Stupidity—Pending Movement in Flanders—A Branch Bank—The Star and Garter—New Lease of Life.

WESTMINSTER, Aug. 14.

Report, coming from various quarters, that the German Emperor has through the agency of the King of Denmark made peace proposals to the Czar would be incredible if earlier experience had not made the world familiar with Wilhelm's innate stupidity. The word is not here used in the ordinary sense of denseness of apprehension. The disposition is the result of supreme egotism breeding in his mind belief in his personal supremacy. What he wants he wills, and having willed it he expects, as a matter of course, it shall be forthcoming. Evidence of this hopeless, hapless, mental habitude was forthcoming at the moment that seemed to him opportune for springing war on unsuspecting neighbours. He convinced himself—and this was the chief impulse to his pending downfall—that Great Britain would not fight. If she did, he was certain she would be fatally handicapped by revolt in Ireland, rebellion in South Africa, armed sedition in India, and desertion by the colonies. These things duly coming to pass, as they needs must since he ordained them, he would be in a position to smash Russia, tread France under heel, as did his grandfather forty-five years ago, and then at leisure, with infinite satisfaction, devote himself to the conquest of Great Britain.

None of these things happening, he, though in somewhat chastened mood, has willed a new turn in the campaign. If he could get only one of the Allies to turn traitor it would be a welcome break in the chain of steel circling from east to west, from Italy in the south to the British Fleet in the North Sea, which, drawing closer in, threatens to crush him and his Austrian victim. The fact that Russia is solemnly pledged not to make a separate peace is a circumstance not deterrent to a mind which regards scraps of paper at their precise commercial value. What he does not realise, and it is here stupidity asserts itself, is that the Czar, not being a born fool, is not likely after the peril escaped and the enormous sacrifice in blood and money incurred to halt on the road to Berlin, where matters can be settled once and for all.

The Emperor evidently counted on the fall of Warsaw as a fitting opportunity to make a bargain with the enemy on his eastern frontier. By this time he will have learned that, whilst the loss of the Polish capital is lamented, so far from having a disheartening effect upon Russia, it has deepened the resolve to see the fight out to the finish. A similar influence is recognisable upon public opinion alike in this country and in France. It is regretfully admitted that this German success in Poland will have the effect of lengthening the war. It may be six months before Russia is able to resume the offensive. In the meanwhile, Britain, France, and Italy will go on doing their best, scouting any idea of peace that would leave unfinished the work a year ago forced upon their hands.

Officers home from Flanders on short leave are severely reticent about the state of things in that unidentified quarter. Whether or not they are pledged to secrecy by War Office instruction, they certainly observe it. This made more noteworthy a significant remark casually dropped by one I talked with yesterday. He said things were very quiet at the front, and had been for a week or two. This, he added, was welcomed by the troops as indication of a big movement close ahead. In preparation for this reinforcements daily arrive. Few can speak with authority of the actual number of the British force now in the field. At the front, observation and stray bits of information spread the belief that it closely approaches a million. With respect to the prevalent vague but confident belief in a forward movement, it will be remembered that in one of his speeches recently delivered the Minister of Munitions made cryptic reference to a conference which had taken place between the commanders of the Allied armies, which promised a new departure that would try to the utmost their military force.

Among the palatial commercial offices that adorn the metropolis those where banking establishments are housed hold pride of place. During the last 25 years the fashion of building commanding bank premises has appreciably spread. This morning, visiting one of the camps that front the English Channel, I came upon what is, I suppose, the smallest banking establishment in the world. It is just a shed, in size, appearance, and colour of paint, like the ordinary motor garage annexed to country villas. Yet it is the representative of a bank of world-wide reputation, with a paid-up capital of £4,780,792 and a reserve of four millions sterling. Its staff consists of a single clerk, who attends to the financial business of a couple of thousand men in khaki here hutted. The men are Canadians, most of whom have brought with them a plentiful supply of money, which they are accustomed to spend freely in the neighbouring town. The enterprise shown in the establishment of this "new branch" would be natural enough in a newly-developed mining district in the United States. It is a notable incident in the development of a staid London bank.

The transformation of the Star and Garter Hotel, which crowns the summit of Richmond Hill, is a noteworthy incident arising out of the war. Well within the memory of the present generation this famous hostelry was one of the most popular in suburban London. Its only rival was The Ship, at Greenwich, which a year or two ago, also foundered in the sea of faded fortune. During the summer months it was a favourite jaunt to ride or drive to the Star and Garter, dine, and return home in the cool of the evening, preferably by moonlight. The building and its grounds have been in the market for some time. The property has been acquired by the Auctioneers and Estate Agents' Institute, who have presented it to the Queen for the purposes of a hospital for paralysed and otherwise permanently disabled soldiers. It is understood that the freehold alone cost £23,000. A further large sum will be required for necessary alterations, and for the upkeep of the hospital. The Auctioneers and Estate Agents are not daunted by this necessity, confidently counting upon the opening of the hospital in full working order early in November.

The presentation of the splendid gift to her Majesty has a special appropriateness. The greater part of her girlhood was spent at White Lodge, in close neighbourship with the Star and Garter. There her father and mother, Duke and Duchess of Teck, lived, the latter devoting her time to the comfort and consolation of those in trouble and distress. Her Royal Highness was president and active manager of an institution of voluntary workers and generous donors, who provide clothing for a class of the community gently reared who have fallen upon evil times. The last time I was at the Star and Garter was on the invitation of Mrs. Craigie (John Oliver Hobbes) to lunch there. I remember a large desolate dining-room, of which we were the only occupants, engrossing the sole attention of a solitary waiter. Decadence had already severely set in. After luncheon we, by appointment, paid a visit to White Lodge, with whose royal mistress Mrs. Craigie was a special favourite. We found the Duchess in an underground apartment, busily engaged with the assistance of the daughter, who is now Queen of England, superintending the making up of parcels of suitable clothing for desirable recipients. The fundamental rule of the companionship, which includes some of the best known ladies in the land, is that once a year a member should despatch to White Lodge, the Imperial Institute, or other headquarters, two articles of clothing. I had not been in the presence of the energetic Duchess ten minutes before I found myself enrolled in full membership, and pledged to make the annual dual tribute. I meanly proposed to send a pair of shoes, or a pair of trousers, pleading that a pair meant two. The Duchess would have no trifling of that kind, and up to the time of her lamented death, which brought sadness to many humble households, the annual contribution was duly made. Queen Mary, affectionately loyal to the memory of her mother, has since, amid all the cares and duties of Royal state, personally filled her place in the management of the society.

LONDON'S WAR-TIME VARIETY.

SATURDAY NIGHT IN THE EAST END.

LONDON, Aug. 12.

There are many ways of spending a Saturday night in London. There are worse ways than that which takes one to the East End. It is a curiously unexpected place, this East End of London. You may walk within it often, and be never at real touch with it. You will go to it first, no doubt, in an anxious tremble of anticipation, agape for all the misery of the slums, of which you have heard so much—and you will find yourself adrift in miles of broad and cheerful thoroughfares, and lost in the whirl of their happy-seeming crowds. In search of poverty-sodden hopelessness, you will come upon a breezily prosperous people, vastly spread, active, light of heart, exuberant. You will go again, and many times, and always you will see the East End in a so inconstant flux and change that only with difficulty will you be able to sum it up as this or that. The one easy thing about the East End is its quick disposal of your old ideas of it. The idea, for example, that it is a place of unmitigated wretchedness. That is shattered at a stroke. The East End is too huge a place to be an unmitigated anything. Its variety of life is endless. The mean streets of it, the traditional East End streets of poverty, and vice, and crime, are still within it. But you must look for them. They are only one of its phases. They are tucked away at the heart of the maze. They exist surely enough, and despite a marvellous array of ameliorating influences, but they exist merely as a detail in the mass of an East End life, which includes not only Jewish colonies and alien colonies of all the races under heaven, but tens of thousands of quite Christian persons, and of true-blue but entirely inoffensive cockneys. People go hungry in the East End, and people make fortunes there—and that is the way of it.

It is not to be supposed, therefore, that a Saturday night in the East End—or many Saturday nights—will exhaust the possibilities of it. But it will fringe them, and even to fringe them is worth while. Your way out of the west is by motor-'bus, the magic of which translates you, a whirling, eddying atom in the throng of London, through any of a score of routes, to your remotest eastern objective. Somewhere behind the bank the change of surrounding begins. At least from Hyde Park to Bishopsgate, and Liverpool-street, bigness and breadth and majesty are the unceasing expression of London. Then, suddenly, You run out of the region of palaces and mansions, and the solid mass of London's central business area. You run, too, out of the region of cars and taxis and universal motor-'buses, and you come upon the terminals of tramways. A swerving turn, and your own solitary motor-'bus is monarch of a highway in which is no reasonable vehicle to dispute its place. For itself, however, your motor-'bus has now to dispute the place of unreasonable vehicles. A curious flotsam and jetsam of transport hovers into view. Barrows and donkey-shays float among streaming distant lights. The streets melt and change. Far off, low reverberations grow into a thunder of noise. The motor-'bus slows down, its horn hoots into the night, itself sways into the kerb's edge and wheels and turns, and a whole new mile of highway opens out—or would open out if it were not a crowded highway—a highway choked in all its length by a dense movement of people, through whom, and the spinning, capering spray of their children on the outskirts, a motor-'bus can do no more than lumber warily. A swirl of lights, and a tumult of voices, and the crowd opens a reluctant passage for you, and closes behind you as you pass. Ahead are other miles of other similar streets, all crowded, all riotous in a noise of shouting, and a glitter of lights, and a ceaseless ocean-roll of movement. You are in the East End.

This is war time, and Saturday night in the East End should reflect the fact. It does so, but not quite as one would suppose. There is little outward sign of war in these joyously energetic streets. Now and then a soldier comes casually into view, and now and then a young widow, passing within the throng, tells of some or other soldier who will come into view no more. By this time there must be many East End soldiers and many East End widows. They make no showing in this Saturday night. Like so many other details of the East End, they are where they are—hidden and unseen. War time, in truth, is at its most evident incongruously—in the roaring prosperity of these East End streets. It is now well-known that by virtue of the war-time separation allowance, which assures to them at once regular money and an absent husband, the womenfolk of the East End are more affluent than they have ever been. The signs of it are all about one. Sometimes they are distressingly obvious. The East End swarms with public-houses, and on Saturday night every public-house groans under the weight of its trade. Every public-house is crowded to its doors, and beyond its doors, for the overflow of the bars is out upon the pavement, a sprawl of drinking women.

There are other and less objectionable signs and tokens of the East End's present prosperity. Penny picture-theatres are seen to be positively bursting under their patronage Thousands of amusement-seekers are about the theatres. My way took me past the Shoreditch Olympia, and the Hackney Empire, East End music-halls. It was nearly 9 o'clock, the hour for the "second house," and the queues awaiting entrance stretched for hundreds of yards along the footways. But, most of all, it is the business activity of the streets that is the best evidence of the good time which is the war time of the East End. Activity, did one say? It is a poorly inadequate word. It assists little toward vision of the roaring turbulence of this emporium of the streets, the shouting of these hundreds of hawkers, who stand in lines about their barrows of infinite variety, the flame and smoke of their flaring lights, the massed mountains of goods that are the merchandise of universal providers, and the surge of the crowds around them, and their unceasing bargaining and chaffering through hour after hour of the day and night. There are shops on the sidewalks and barrows on the kerbs. They sell everything, and the crowd buys everything. From furniture to fruit, from ice-cream to ironware, their offer is inexhaustible. Butchers' shops, with roaring attendants and a blaze of lights, jostle with dim and silent barbers' shops, which merely signal from their windows the difference that is between haircutting with clippers for a penny, and haircutting with scissors for twopence. Fried fish and sausages reek upon the windows, not only of their own establishment, but upon those also of next door, which may be the windows of a piano store, or a hat shop, or a shop for the sale of birds and beasts. And the shops are crowded in the very face of the mammoth display of the barrows at their doors—barrows which sell, indiscriminately, whelks and watches, ducks and dishes, flannel and flowers.

Yes, there are flowers on sale in the East End streets, fragile plants and dainty blooms of the sweet of the year; and they are bought there without doubt, as one could see from the steady diminishing of them. For the East Ender is not wholly, as he is sometimes thought to be. In those swarming lesser streets behind these highways is many a room that will not go ungraced by a flower while a few pence can be spared for its purchase. There is other quality, too, in these street marts of the underworld. The East End does not starve on inferior food. There were goods on sale there on Saturday which only differed from the goods of the comfortable streets of the West End, in the prices asked for them. Quality, indeed, abounds in the East End, abounds more than ever in this time of war, when money is less a problem of the East End householder than ever it has been, and when the press and the clamour and the energy of the multitudes that fill the streets on a Saturday night, just for the purpose of buying and spending, are such as exalt the East End to the level of a war-time astonishment.

ESCAPE FROM BRUSSELS.

BY AN ENGLISH DOCTOR.

(IN "GUY'S HOSPITAL GAZETTE.")

We had heard that the Germans were interning all the Englishmen in Germany, and there were constant rumours that the Kommandantur were preparing to do the same thing in Belgium, but they left us in peace until the end of November. They were evidently quite aware that there were still Englishmen in hiding, and they issued an order that every member of an enemy nation was to register himself at the Kommandantur. Up to this time I had remained unsuspected, and really thought that I should be able to "stick to it" and see the triumphal entry of the Allies. But when the German inhabitants of Brussels, who had fled at the beginning of the war, commenced to return to their homes, the risk of recognition made it dangerous for me to go out in the daylight. Also, the Government had imported civilian spies from Germany for the express purpose of hunting out suspected persons. Fifty marks was the reward offered for every Englishman denounced, and the chase became very keen, not only amongst the Germans, but also the scum of the town, who were always ready to gain a dishonest franc or two. To add to our discomfort, the Germans had forbidden the payment of any money to members of enemy nations, and, as a visit to the bank was out of the question, I began to find myself in sore straits. Under the circumstances life became intolerable, and I determined to clear out as soon as an opportunity presented itself.

Owing to the hurried nature of my departure from Brussels, I had not been able to make any preparations for the journey, but fortunately I had prepared my route some weeks previously in anticipation of a like emergency, and it was my intention to be out of the town and through the German guard lines by daylight.

I found very little difficulty in passing the guard at Laeken. It was bitterly cold, and the sentries were huddled round a brazier near the guard house. One of them shouted a greeting in German as I passed. I replied in Flemish, and they took no further notice.

The military blockhouse at P—— is situated in a large open space on the main road, about one kilometre on the Belgian side of the frontier post. It consists of two low wooden sheds bounded on either side by immense hedges of barbed wire stretching as far as the eye can reach. These hedges are not more than 4ft high, but in some places are as much as ten yards deep, and are very unpleasant obstacles to negotiate. The road is barred fore and aft by heavy sliding bars, so that any vehicle passing through finds itself in a kind of enclosure. At the moment of my arrival a motor car was being examined, and they did it pretty thoroughly, even to the extent of emptying the petrol tanks.

The garrison consisted of a lieutenant (who might well have been the original of some of Hansi's caricatures), two sergeants, a dozen soldiers, and two female searchers. One of the sergeants, addressing me in execrable French, invited me to advance and explain my business. I told him that I wished to go to B——, in Holland, and handed him my identification paper. He showed me into one of the sheds and disappeared into the other with my paper. Inside, the shed was divided by a low partition, from behind which came the indignant voices of the two women occupants of the motor car, protesting against the ministrations of the female searchers. If their ordeal was as severe as mine, and, judging from their disarrayed toilets and hair when they emerged, it had been, they have my sympathy. I was seized by two burly ruffians in stained uniforms, one of whom helped me out of my garments, and the other turned out the contents of my pockets and heaped them on the table.

When they had reduced me to a state of nature, the humorist of the party inquired if I had any books or papers concealed on my person. Having satisfied them that I had no secret pockets in my skin, they handed me back my clothes, but before I could resume them the two women travellers were turned out of the adjoining compartment There was no separate exit, and I felt embarrassed.

By the time I was dressed, the sergeant appeared from the other shed and informed me that I could not pass with that paper. I must go back to Antwerp and get a proper passport from the Kommandantur. Protestations were useless; he could or would not understand my arguments, and walked off, leaving me in a state of despair. Then the other sergeant appeared and addressed me in excellent English, strongly flavoured with an American accent. He explained that he had spent ten years of his life in the States, and admired the Americans immensely. He hinted that it might be possible to pass me through, and told me to go back to the village and wait for him in a certain "estaminet." He would come and chat to me about America when the Herr Lieutenant had departed. I found the "estaminet," and, after waiting half an hour, he arrived. He explained to me how, in company with a hundred other reservist officers he had been recalled to Germany some two months before the war, and incidentally stated that on his arrival he was sent to Antwerp, a business house in Antwerp, with special instructions, and only recrossed the frontier two days before the outbreak of the war with Belgium. Then he asked me if I was willing to give a little contribution to the hard worked soldiers. I answered that I was willing, within reason, and the sum was fixed at 30 francs. Then he explained that, although it was impossible to pass me through the post on account of the other sergeant, whose conscience was more expensive, he would direct me to a "braconnier" (poacher), who would for a small sum show me the way under the wire. He himself would meet me on the other side and return me my paper properly "gepruft," without which I could not pass the Dutch frontier. As a guarantee of his good faith he agreed that I should withhold the contribution until I was on the other side of the wire.

By this time it had become quite dark, and my tame sergeant told me it was time to start. He was good enough to conduct me down the road until we came to a "clariere," or pathway through the treees. Here he gave me instructions to walk on till I came to a cottage, and then he said "au revoir" and left me to find my way. It was pitch dark, and I stumbled through the "clariere" for nearly two kilometres before I came to that cottage. In answer to my knock the door was opened by the longest specimen of humanity I have ever seen. The door was nearly the average height, but the lintel hid from my view his head and neck.

I explained in indifferent Flemish that I needed his help to pass the barbed wire that night, and for answer he held out his hand. Knowing the Belgian partiality for shaking hands, I wrung his most cordially, but I found that I had mistaken his motive when he continued to hold out his hand and mentioned "teen franken." When I had paid him his ten francs he asked me to come inside and wait, as he would not be starting for quite another hour. He told me that a party of 17 Belgian recruits were attempting the passage that night. I was not pleased with the news, as I anticipated difficulty with my sergeant on the other side if I arrived in company. However, he explained that they were not going "en masse," but were divided into groups of four, each group being led by a different guide. For his share, he was only taking one other besides myself, and that other was an experienced wire crawler. Then he went out and left me in the cottage.

At the end of an hour he returned with my fellow-passenger, a thin and wierdly shaped youth from Antwerp. I afterwards learned that the bulges on his person were due to innumerable packages and letters. He departed and returned three times a week with this forbidden correspondence, and reaped an abundant harvest in fees from the senders. The "braconnier" had strapped on his back an empty petrol tin. I inquired the reason of it, and he explained that if we were in danger of discovery we were to hide in the bushes whilst he went forward and showed himself. Now, the export of petrol from Holland is strictly forbidden, and, as the Germans are very short of it, they connive at the smuggling of even small quantities, and are only too glad to aid the smugglers.

It was bright moonlight when we started out, and was beginning to freeze. We followed our guide for about five kilometres through innumerable copses and plantations, always avoiding the open spaces and high roads. Presently we came to a banked-up road which crossed our path, and on the other side we could see the moonlight glistening on the field of barbed wire.

Here our guide went forward and told us to hide in the undergrowth until his return. He instructed me to remove my overcoat and tie it over my head so as to hide my face and also to protect my neck from scratches when passing under the wire. He also instructed us to tuck the ends of our trousers into our boots, as we should have to wade through a marsh which was notorious for its leeches. A truly pleasant prospect!

He disappeared over the bank, but in a few minutes was back again telling us to lie flat and keep quiet. His reason was soon apparent. Along the road came a patrol of soldiers. We could hear them some distance away as they were making an appalling noise with their heavy boots. Probably "parade marching" to keep their feet warm. When they were nearly opposite us their attention was attracted by a distant rifle shot followed by a small volley. They halted to listen only five yards from where we were crouching in the grass, and we hardly dared to breathe. Presently their officer gave them an order, and they started off again at a quick pace, making more noise than ever.

They were hardly out of sight before our guide signed to us to follow him, and we crawled quickly over the road and dropped into the marsh on the other side. The water was icy cold and in some places above our knees, but we had to wade through it for some distance before we reached the high ground in the centre where the wire crossed the marsh. Here, thanks to our guide's previous experience, we found a place where the level of the wire was raised eighteen inches above the ground, and we wriggled under it, flat on our stomachs. Even then I felt an occasional hook ripping into my clothes, and my gloves were in tatters when we arrived on the other side.

The guide having pointed out the road, we bade each other good-night and separated. I walked across the fields to a point where I could see the main road shining in the moonlight, and as I dropped over the fence into the road a figure stepped out of the shadow and challenged me. Fortunately it was my sergeant, and after an exchange of compliments, and other trifles, I started on my way to the frontier post. There, on production of my "gepruft" document I was allowed to pass into Holland without further trouble.

SOCIALISM AND THE WAR.

FROM FRENCH OFFICIAL DOCUMENTS.

(TRANSLATED BY GEO. COLLINGRIDGE.)

In view of recent events and peace pourparlers between Germany and the United States, the following correspondence makes interesting reading, and shows how utterly subservient to the military classes all other classes in Germany have become.

Extract from a letter of Mr. Vandervelde to the German socialist Scheidemann:—

. . . You say, first, that had I spoken in Paris to an audience of socialist workmen a contradiction would have been given to my utterances, and perhaps a violent one.

I think I am dreaming when I read such things, for they reveal that you have not the slightest idea of the formidable unanimity that exists among the French working classes as well as among the Belgian working classes against the responsible authors of this frightful war.

Then you are astonished that a socialist, a pacifist, and internationalist, should be in favour of "war to the bitter end." Those are not exactly the words I used, but if by "war to the bitter end" is meant war until William II. is beaten, as Napoleon III. was, then those words faithfully render my thoughts. At any rate, in expressing myself in that way I have only been repeating what all the socialists of the allied countries said at the London meeting, including, don't forget it, MacDonald, Keir Hardie, and the other delegates of the Independent Labour party.

My attitude, however, produces an exceedingly painful impression on you, "because Vandervelde is not only a member of the Belgian Government, but President of the International Socialist Bureau." Do you, then, really believe, Scheidemann, that the latter title condemns me to silence?

Notwithstanding your moral support in favour of war loans, the armies of the Kaiser have violated, against all law, Belgian neutrality, invaded, martyrised my poor country. Our "Homes of the People," at Tamine, at Andennes, at Louvain, have been reduced to ashes. Our members of Parliament, our provincial deputies, have been taken as hostages—like ordinary citizens. Thousands of workers, banished from their homes, have been driven into exile. Our soldiers, poisoned by asphyxiating gases, vomit blood and die, after frightful suffering, in the hospitals of Flanders. If my wife had returned from the United States one fortnight later than she did she would have perished, treacherously murdered with the Lusitania passengers.

All those whom I love suffer. All those whom I detest endeavour to crush us, and when I am on the side of those who fight, on the side of those who suffer, on the side of those who die, in this war that we Belgians are waging in legitimate defence of our country, as you yourself have acknowledged, when all these things stare you in the face, you say, my attitude produces a painful impression on you? What, then, must I think of your attitude?

But, perhaps, some of you will say to me, why then do you preach "war to the bitter end?" Why do you scorn the overtures of your comrades of Germany, why will you not "work with them to effect a reconciliation that will shorten as much as possible the duration of this war and secure a lasting peace?"

Why? Because it is not with the social democrats that we have to deal but with the Kaiser and his armies.

Oh, I doubt not. I do not wish to doubt, if it were only between me and you, German socialists; if an understanding could be arrived at between ourselves the matter might be possible, notwithstanding all our griefs.

But who is there that does not see that if peace were to be settled now neither the German nor the Austrian socialists would be consulted in the matter.

As long as Belgium and Poland are occupied, as long as France remains invaded, as long as German militarism is not crushed, peace would be, according to the words of Guesde, the most dangerous of armistices, and, I add, the most crying injustice.

Some time ago, some American pacifists asked one of the most respected of American citizens, the late president of the Harvard University, Charles Elliott, to pray with them for peace. Elliott answered:

"I cannot conceive a more dire catastrophe for humanity than peace in Europe at the present time. Those who pray for that assume a heavy responsibility. If peace were settled to-day Germany would be in possession of Belgium and aggressive militarism victorious. It would be the triumph of those who have committed the foulest crime that a nation can commit: the violation of the faith of treaties and of the sanctity of contracts."

That is, Scheidemann, what impartial judges think, who love peace, but who do not desire peace without justice.

How could we think otherwise, we who are the victims? We have been unjustly attacked; we fight desperately for our liberty and our national existence.

It is not only our right, it is our duty, and a sacred duty. We shall fulfil our duty "to the bitter end."

Perhaps, Scheidemann, I may see you again some day, at the convocation of the "International," in our "House of the People," where long ago Haase and Jaures signed together our supreme appeal in favour of peace. But in order that that event may come to pass it will be necessary that your soldiers do not block the way, that Belgium be free, that reparation be given to my country, and that, by the union of all the forces of Europe, German militarism be vanquished.

THE HORROR OF WAR.

The Rev. Arnold Boyd, M.A., of Gilgandra, has received a diary compiled by his brother, Lieutenant Boyd, of the A.M.C., who is serving in France with the British forces. One extract reads:—"If Krupps, or any other individuals, are responsible in any degree for this war, they ought to be made to spend a few hours in a hospital where cases come in straight from the firing line. It is pretty ghastly. Remember that a piece of shrapnel is sometimes bigger than a hen's egg, and jagged at that, and you will realise that when it hits a man in the face it is apt to make a mess. Under such circumstances, all the talk about the glory and glamour of war is rather apt to stick in your throat.

CURRENT LITERATURE.

THE SOUL OF EUROPE.

Since the outbreak of war theorists have been busily occupied in an endeavour to determine the national psychology and the powers engaged. It is a pleasant and a lucrative pastime, and it has the advantage that no one is in a position to deny the conclusions which the theorist reaches. For the fact of the matter is that not until the war is over will we have any sure basis for forming an estimate of national character. At present all we can say is that hitherto certain peoples have possessed certain tracts and certain habits of thought, some of them bad, some of them good. Whether these will endure, whether the qualities and defects we are used to ascribe to these peoples will carry them through this test, whether our conventional ideas are all wrong or all right, cannot yet be ascertained. If the map of Europe is being redrawn, our prepossessions about the nations of Europe are also in the melting pot. However, in the meantime it is interesting to formulate our ideas, and "The Soul of Europe," by Mr. Joseph McCabe, has much to recommend it. Mr. McCabe has a facile pen and a knack of putting things effectively. He has also a habit of generalisation, which sometimes leads him astray, but he is always readable and always sensible.

He is also cautious. He is careful not to include Britain in his psychological analysis, presumably because Britain defies psychological analysis. The boldest man might shrink from the task of defining the soul of an empire which for a century has dispersed its interests, and lived in a safe seclusion, that permitted it to indulge in all manner of foibles and caprices. It is much easier to define the soul of a people which has been dominated by a conviction (like Germany) or a tradition (like France), or a hope (like Italy), or a memory (like Turkey). Mr. McCabe does justice to these. He approaches the question from rather a different standpoint from that of the ordinary international psychologist. He will not admit that there is any such thing as racial antagonism or attraction. He points out that in recorded history Europe has been swept time and again by invading hosts, that the intermingling of blood must have been very complete, and that to-day for all practical purposes the old ethnological catchwords have lost their significance. He illustrates his point by the term "Latin," which we apply broadly to the French, the Italian, and the Spanish peoples. We use it generally as implying certain pronounced affinities; actually it covers many pronounced differences. Mr. McCabe jettisons ancient and medieval history for the purpose of ascertaining the modern national type, and depends upon more modern factors, such as the religion and the form of government and the social conditions enjoyed by various peoples.

It cannot be said that he has anything particularly new to offer, but he dresses his thoughts in an attractive guise, and more often than not he contrives to hit the right nail on the head. He admits that at the beginning he was one of the large number who could hardly believe in the reality of Germany's iniquity. At first he was not disinclined to sympathise with the statesman who, convinced that he knew Germany, resigned office because he could not credit her guilt. "Presently we began to distinguish between the Emperor, with his military and commercial supporters, and the mass of the people. To-day we regretfully yield to the impeachment of an entire nation. The leading representation of each section of it—of its scholars, its Churches, and its workers—has approved the initial outrage, and hardly one of them has raised a protest against the general applause of successive outrages and against the increasing frenzy of hatred. There is an ancient and respectable maxim, 'No one becomes utterly base in a day;' and on that principle some are concluding that the soul of Germany is inherently malignant, cruel, and selfish. It is not so. We have the books of several generations of travellers, and none has ever approached so harsh a verdict on the German people." Mr. McCabe recalls many pleasant visits to Germany, where he met with nothing but kindliness and hospitality, and from which he formed the impression of a pleasant, easy-going race. Then, to his surprise, he found that one of his most charming hosts, a distinguished professor, was foremost in justifying the deeds of the German army in Belgium on the plea of necessity." It appears to be a case of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde. Mr. McCabe comes to the conclusion that there are two Germanys, the national and international. The former is a decent soul; the latter knows neither pity nor scruple. He has been taught from his cradle upwards that the Germanic ideal is paramount, that Germans are the chosen people who are to hand on the torch from the remote past to the future—a future dominated by the German spirit. Ethnologically, this is quite wrong, but that does not worry him in the least. His pundits prove that every notable figure in history, from Christ to Shakespeare and onwards, was Teutonic. His children are told from the day they enter school that their minds and bodies are consecrated primarily to the Fatherland, and, secondly, to their own concerns. We are apt to think this a new thing; we attribute the growth of Pan-Germanism to such men as Treitschke, Bernhardi, and, perhaps, Nietzsche, whose names we are constantly repeating parrot fashion to account for the new spirit of Germany. We forget that the spirit is not new at all, and that long before these men were ever heard of there was a coterie as active and, perhaps, more influential in preaching the gospel of Prussian world-dominion. Indeed, as soon as Prussia recovered from her hammering by Napoleon, the movement began under the auspices of Germany's pastors and masters, and has continued with the endorsement of the German people. The German people have not been duped; they have duped themselves. They have voluntarily followed a false ideal, and in defeat alone lies their hope of the moral purification of the nation.

Mr. McCabe discusses in a similar way the national characteristics of the other belligerents. We in Australia are perhaps most interested in his analysis of Turkey. For the Turk collectively the author can find no excuse:—"None threatened his dominion or his commerce, and he had no just interest in the grounds of the quarrel. From sheer cupidity to recover the lands he had forfeited by a long career of crime and folly he associated himself with one whom he believed to be a powerful and invincible adventurer. He gambled and lost; and one may assume that he will now take back across the Bosphorous the tattered banner which he brought into Europe fresh and triumphant more than five centuries ago." Yet individually the author finds much that is likeable in the Turk. His is pre-eminently a case where the Government and not the people is to blame for the sins laid to the country's charge. Left to himself the Turk is a decent self-respecting fellow; when you hear of him massacring Armenians or Macedonians you may be sure that the Government's instructions are behind it. The Turk, with all his faults, is by nature a gentleman, and he does not consider such outcasts worthy of his steel. Mr. McCabe's estimate seems to accord with that which our own men have formed at Gallipoli. They have found the Turk a brave man and a fair fighter, and it is possible for them (unlike the troops in the other theatres of war) to revive the expression "our friend, the enemy."

In conclusion, Mr. M'Cabe makes some sensible remarks about the futility of trying to re-draw the map at this or any stage of the war. Whoever wins, the map has been already re-drawn. Germany's schemes are already cut and dried, and no doubt the Allies have a perfect understanding among themselves with regard to the rearrangement of boundaries which no academic discussions are likely to alter. In particular Mr. M'Cabe doubts very much whether such a pious device as a referendum by the inhabitants of territories to see whether they wish to be incorporated into a new allegiance is likely to be adopted by anyone concerned. And Mr. M'Cabe is still more sceptical about the possibility that this conference—apparently so far away—will come to any agreement about the limitation of armaments or the methods of diplomacy. It will have other things to occupy its mind. If the representatives of the Powers secure from each other guarantees of just treatment of subjects and of economic facilities, "they will recognise that these are particularly the kind of guarantees which come within the German definition of treaties. The soul of Europe may look forward not to a period of profound peace, but to a period of grave danger. The natural storm of rejoicing in the victorious nations and of anger and humiliation in the fallen nations will obscure the memory of recent horrors, and reconcile men to militarism." Mr. M'Cabe takes his leave with the gloomy reflection that this war so far from being the one that ends war, will simply ring up the curtain on an interminable series of new wars. One is inclined to doubt his conclusion, for, whichever side wins, no one will have much energy or money left to indulge in further embroilments for a very long time. (Fisher, Unwin.)

EARLY AUSTRALIA.

The third volume of "The Historical Records of Australia," edited by Dr. Frederick Watson, brings the tale down to 1801 and 1802, in Governor King's regime. These were uneventful years on the whole. Europe was still engaged in the Napoleonic War, but neither this nor the Peace of Amiens, declared in 1802, seemed to have much effect on the fortunes of the young colony. We hear occasional echoes of the great convulsion on the other side of the world, but that is all. Meanwhile the outposts of the tiny settlement were steadily pushed further south and west; the settlers of the Hawkesbury had their annual antithetical grievances—which have, indeed, endured till to-day; in winter they complained of the floods, in summer of the droughts; there was the usual bickering and intrigue among the authorities; the military and civil authorities were, as usual, at loggerheads. An event of considerable importance was the arrival of the "Lady Nelson," for many years the maid of all work for the colony. It was now possible to undertake exploration in a systematic way, and the Lady Nelson, with Bass, Flinders, and Barrallier, began that series of voyages of discovery which so added to the contemporary knowledge of the continent. Familiar names, both of places and of persons, commence to make their appearance. But this volume is less interesting than its predecessors. The fault lies not with the editor, but with the nature of the documents with which he has to deal. It was a period of petty affairs. The official despatches of the time are concerned with the trivial squabbles of the garrison, grants of land, inventories of stores and supplies, accounts, and, though they must necessarily have a place in such a compilation as this, they cannot by any stretch of imagination be called entertaining. At this distance perhaps the most interesting incident described in the whole of the 800 pages is the visit of the Geographe and the Naturaliste, the ships of the French exploring expedition under Baudin. Britain and France were at war, but war was waged in a gentlemanly fashion in those days. Science was considered to be an international affair, and ships engaged on scientific missions were immune from capture. When Baudin reached Port Jackson he was welcomed and given every facility for repairing his ships and obtaining provisions. He has placed upon record his appreciation of "the high-minded hospitality and liberality" shown to him. Only one small contretemps threatened to disturb the harmony of the visit. An indiscreet officer accused the French officers of selling rum to the people of the settlement. This, of course, was forbidden, and the charge (which was totally unfounded) was equivalent to accusing a visiting naval officer to-day of abusing our hospitality by keeping a sly-grog shop. The French naturally resented this, and King insisted upon the officer in question offering a written apology, which was handsomely and courteously accepted. The editor does not form a very favourable opinion of King, who, he considers, owed his position entirely to the fact that he was the protege of Phillip. He came ill-equipped to his task. As Lieutenant-Governor at Norfolk Island, he had been imbued with a great idea of his own importance, but the community there was so small that he had gained little experience in administration. In Sydney he loudly proclaimed his intention of being the new broom to sweep the colony clean of various abuses, and in the first three months of office he certainly issued an extraordinary number of orders. Some of these were excellent in their object and their result, but Dr. Watson thinks that it was a mistake of tactics to attempt in so short a time so many reforms which revolutionised the daily life of the people. Moreover, he utterly failed to deal effectively with the greatest abuse of all, the traffic in spirits. Here, again, he declared that he was going to cleanse the Augean stables, and issued a flood of general orders which sought to regulate the importation, sale, and consumption of liquor. But the net result of his efforts seems to have been that, while he sent away large quantities, he permitted enormous quantities to be landed, and that he did not materially lessen the amount consumed. Still, in fairness to King, one should remember that often the reformer fails at first to appreciate the magnitude of his task, and one should not necessarily accuse him of inconsistency because his achievements do not square with his promises. The evil was very deeply rooted, as his predecessors and his successors found, and King may have come to the conclusion that, so far from extirpating it, the most he could reasonably hope to do was to prevent it from getting worse. AUSTRALIAN VERSE.

Although the late J. P. Bourke was a native of New South Wales, it is safe to say that few on this side of the continent are familiar with his work. In Western Australia he had achieved some local reputation as a writer of verse which the posthumous publication of "Off the Bluebush" should do much to extend. In an appreciative foreword, Mr. A. G. Stephens contends that the distinguishing mark of western poetry is its virility, a quality in which it surpasses the eastern poetry of the day; that "for vigour and versatility the east has at present few writers to rival this little comradeship," and his claim is not unjust. The school to which Mr. Bourke belongs represents a phase through which eastern poetry passed twenty years ago. It makes little pretension to formal correctness or to the airs and graces of literary craftsmanship or to artistic finish; it is conspicuous for its manliness, its sincerity, and its unconventional outlook upon men and things. Mr. Bourke's verses are very characteristic of this school. As often as not they were scribbled down by the light of the camp-fire between two long long days' tramps. In phrases, racy of the soil, they describe the strenuous vivid life of the west. They are informed by a cheerful cynicism, by a pessimism which in its blackest moments can see the humorous side of things. The philosophy of the pioneers of the west is a simple one: it is to stick to your mate, to get as much fun out of existence as you can, and to take what comes to you without whining. Mr. Bourke reflects it faithfully, and while his verses may not be of great account as literature, they are the genuine expression of life. One feels that if Mr. Bourke had had the time and the inclination to do so, he might have written something of absolute value which does not depend for appeal on the local or accidental. For the most part he seeks inspiration in the hectic diversions of the mining camp or themes equally matter of fact. But when he chooses, he can strike quite a different note. For instance, there is this stanza from "Our Limitations":—

If I could take that rosebud from its stem
  And weave its petals in a simple rhyme,
So you could hear the bells of springtime chime,
  And you could see the flower-soul in them—
Or else, we'll say, a magpie on a limb
  Greeting the sunrise with its matin song—
To catch the music as it floats along
  And link its spirit to a bushchild's hymn.

The man capable of writing those lines might have confidently essayed the peaks of Parnassus instead of contenting himself with remaining on its slopes. (Tyrrell's, Ltd.)

In the preface to "Souvenirs of the Sunny South," Mr. W. J. Wye declares that this collection of horse verse has no pretentions to elegance or literary polish. It has been compiled expressly for our soldiers, and it has been "woven entirely while riding and handling horses, most of them while actually in the saddle." In point of fact, Mr. Wye's modesty is quite misplaced, because these verses are really excellent of their kind, a kind which proverbially appeals to the Australian, and which the Australian writes better than anyone else in the world. The author is himself a noted horseman, and these verses are obviously the real thing. They describe in breezy, vigorous language incidents of bush life, breaking in outlaws, droving, mustering, and particularly racing. Indeed, Mr. Wye is at his happiest when he sings of a hard finish, or a win against overwhelming odds, and, though we are sometimes told that "horse-poetry" has gone out of fashion, there is little doubt that this volume will be popular. (Fraser and Jenkinson.)

NEW NOVELS.

In "Jaffery" Mr. W. J. Locke has added two striking characters to his gallery of cleverly-drawn portraits. Liosha, in particular, is an original conception. She is an Albanian, who has spent her childhood in America, and has learned to talk fluent and forceful American. But she has not been there long enough to cover her primitive instincts with even a veneer of civilisation, and when she returns to Albania she appears for what she is, a beautiful barbarian, speaking the language of the Chicago stockyards. Jaffery is a quixotic exuberant, and boisterous individual, a wanderer over the face of the earth, whose heart is as big as his frame. When he is travelling with a friend in the Balkans they come across Liosha seated beside the ashes of her home, and the bodies of her kinsmen. It appears that the family has been the victim of a vendetta in the pleasant Albanian way, and the travellers can see nothing for it but to take her along with them. The situation solves itself from Jaffery's point of view by his friend falling in love with her and marrying her, but soon afterwards an attack of enteric carries him off, and Jaffery uncomplainingly assumes the responsibility of her future. It is no light one, for this Amazonian child of nature requires delicate handling. He takes her to London, and introduces her to his circle of intimates. At first her appearance creates rather a sensation, but everyone ends by liking her, and at last Jaffery is free to pay attention to his own affairs. By the law of the attraction of opposites, he succumbs to the charms of a dainty little lady, who is engaged to one of his oldest friends. He realises that his passion is a hopeless one, but Adrian conveniently dies, leaving the widowed Doria not wholly averse to the idea of receiving consolation from so devoted and persevering an admirer. However, Liosha once again unwittingly intervenes to alter the course of destiny for Jaffery and herself. She runs away with a dissolute rascal, and Jaffery, who still regards her as his peculiar charge, pursues her to save her from herself. An unexpected chance leads them to one of those picturesque vagabondages on which Mr. Locke so dearly loves to send his characters, and when the pair have knocked around the coast of Africa as supercargo and cook's mate in a crazy tramp, Jaffery awakes to the belated recognition of the fact that Liosha and not Doria is his true affinity. This is by no means the best of Mr. Locke's stories, but it is eminently readable. Most of the people are very pleasant souls—the worst thing that anyone does is to take credit for a novel which he did not write—and Mr. Locke describes their actions with as much sympathy and kindly humour as ever. Liosha herself is a delightful person. At first we laugh at her, then we are interested in her, and we end by paying her our whole-hearted admiration for Mr. Locke has traced her transformation from an undisciplined half savage child into a great-hearted woman, fit mate for Jaffery, with his usual subtlety. Sir Arthur Quiller Couch has made Cornwall his own for the purposes of fiction, so the mere name of "Nicky Nan Reservist" gives promise of excellent entertainment. War has set the stage for this book: no echo of the far-off days of the Napoleonic wars, whose effect on the snug Cornish villages has been the theme of some of this author's stories; but the war in which we are now engaged. When the news comes to Polpier, most of its able-bodied males, fishermen in times of peace, are called out with the Naval Reserve for active service. But Nicholas Nanjivell does not accompany them, for he has what is generally known as "a bad leg." This is not his only affliction. He has an empty purse as well, and he is in danger of being turned out of his tumble-down lodging. Suddenly he acquires funds; though the reader knows the explanation, the gossips of the village do not, and, ably headed by Mesdames Policy and Charity Oliver, they wag the tongue of scandal with industry and success. Poor Nicky has rather a bad time of it. He receives threatening letters and white feathers. He is accused of being a malingerer and a German spy, and in many other painful ways he is made to realise the contempt with which public opinion (as represented by the gossips of Polpier) regard them. Fortunately Nicky is not thin-skinned, nor is he vindictive. At the appropriate moment the whole affair is cleared up—though it would hardly be fair to describe the manner and the matter of the explanation—and Nicky can afford to treat his persecutors with a charity which they denied to him. Nicky is an admirable creation, but he is only one of many. Pleasant, or unpleasant, Sir Arthur Quiller Couch has endowed all his characters with those quaint Cornish eccentricities which he can so well describe. His humour has no sting in it; we can even forgive the scandal-loving Miss Charity Oliver most of her sins on the score of her priceless observation on the Derby. She had heard it described as "The Blue Ribbon of the Turf." "I didn't know," remarks Miss Oliver, "they ran any of those meetings on teetotal lines." (Blackwood.)

"Foiled; the Enemy in our own Land" is the title, and "The Thrilling Experiences of Detective Dunnett in his fight against the German spies in Australia" the sub-title of a book in which Mr. W. G. Henderson gives free rein to a vivid and even a riotous imagination. It recounts the exploits of a gang of German secret-service agents, established in Sydney, under the leadership of a suave individual who, in the ante-bellum days, had been welcomed by society as a harmless and affable indentor. This gang stopped at nothing. No sooner had war broken out than its members attempted first of all to steal the scheme for the defence of the Pacific from Admiralty House when the admiral was at dinner, and second to smuggle a member of the fraternity with an infernal machine on board the Australia before she left port. Both attempts were foiled by the incomparable sangfroid and sagacity of Inspector Dunnett, whose arm is as long as his way with spies is short. Not content with these failures, the survivors elaborate a scheme for mining the transports when the first convoy sailed. Again they have been foolish enough not to make sufficient allowance for the astuteness of the admirable Dunnett, and the only consequence of their enterprise is that they are laid by the heels, and find themselves one cold dawn at Victoria Barracks with a blank wall behind them and a firing squad in front. To these stories Mr. Henderson has added an appeal for vigilance against possible espionage, and a number of pictures which should stimulate recruiting. The cover bears the statement "Passed by Censor," which should allay our anxiety. (The Australasian News Company.)

MUSIC AND DRAMA.

Fate, or a lack of foresight, is bringing three classic concerts within a period of five days, since to-day's Symphony matinee will be followed on Wednesday by the Royal Sydney Liedertafel, and on Thursday by the Madrigal Society. Mr. W. Arundel Orchard will conduct important novelties on these two later occasions. The Liedertafel will introduce the last of the four groups from 14 verses of the "Rig Veda," translated and composed by Gustav von Holst. "Rig" means a verse, and "Veda" a sacred record, and these 10,500 verses are to Brahmin families in India what the Bible is to us. The first rough translations were made by H. J. Colebrook, who, on his return from the East in 1805, published an essay thereon. In 1836 a German named Rosen translated one book of the "Rig Veda," and then a brilliant Frenchman, named Burnoup, took in hand the next book. Professor Max Muller, of Oxford University, also furthered the work, and declared the Sanskrit original to be 3000 years old. The new composer, Gustav von Holst, was born at Cheltenham in 1875. His father was an organist there for many years before that, and his grandfather was a Dutch painter of some note. Holst was at the Royal College of Music for three years, during which Fritz Hart, of Melbourne, was a class-mate, and later in the Scottish orchestra, though he did not "play on the marine parade" like Nanki-Poo, he so far resembled the Mikado's son as to play on "a second trombone." The Sydney Madrigal Society will also achieve an important first performance in Brahms' Clarionet Quintet. This was originally composed in 1892 for Richard Muhlfeld, a renowned clarionetist much admired by Brahms, and is considered by the musical world in general, and by Mr. Orchard in particular, "one of the most exquisite examples of its genre in existence." Dr. R. H. Todd, a fine player, though an amateur, will handle the principal instrument, and the four strings will be Messrs. Henri Staell, W. J. Grieves, T. H. Kelly, and Bryce Carter.

John Webster and Fanchon Campbell arrived here by the Arawa from Capetown on Wednesday. With them were Herbert Leigh and various other artists of the J. C. Williamson Company, appearing to-night at the Criterion in "Stop Thief!" The two American artists, of whom Mr. Webster is the head of the new combination, have toured South Africa for 38 weeks in "Seven Keys to Baldpate," "Never Say Die," "Officer 666," "Fortune Hunter," "Stop Thief!" "It Pays to Advertise," and "A Pair of Sixes." The last three, which are new to Australia, amply sustained their American reputation. Mr. Webster began his stage career whilst late in his teens, supporting the famous comedian Stuart Robson in Bronson Howard's mining comedy, "The Henrietta." At the end of the long run the beginner had proved himself so apt that he was allotted leading business! He remained with Robson for six years as Young Marlow in his Tony Lumpkin (in which the comedian rivalled the late Lal Brough), and in other classic pieces, including "The Comedy of Errors." Mr. Webster then played lead with such stars as Mary Mannering and Henrietta Crosman. More recently he created his present role of Jack Doogan in "Stop, Thief!" at Atlantic City, and then at New York and on tour. He was starring in "Nearly Married" when Mr. Hugh J. Ward (October 21) secured his release for the Cape.

Miss Fanchon Campbell has been on the stage since she was three years of age, as both her parents were of note in the profession. Her father, J. K. Campbell, was one of the shining lights of Haverley's Minstrels when they took London by storm at Her Majesty's Theatre in 1879. For some time this artist, who is probably in the American vernacular "a beauty actress," has played lead under David Belasco's management in New York and on tour, where she played for two years the name-part in "Sweet Kitty Bellairs" to the Sir Jasper Standish of Mr. Webster. Charles Hammond, a Hobart man, made his debut as juvenile lead. Miss Campbell was also engaged by Liebler and Co. for "The Littlest Rebel," in which she played lead in New York and Chicago, and she was in a big revival of "Way Down East," a piece as popular in the States as "Struck Oil" has been here in Australia. The new actress possesses an engaging personality off the stage, which should successfully materialise on it.

The new Director of the State Conservatorium is now taking advantage of the months free for that purpose, between now and next February, to diligently ascertain the public art-standard of the city, by going to all the available concerts at night, whilst he devotes the great part of the day to hearing teachers and their pupils. He has found a number of teachers who are specialists in certain directions, and are apt to overlook the general principles on which the art must be pursued. He hopes all such may find the Conservatorium a means of bringing them, one and all, more closely in touch. Mr. Verbrugghen's own aim will be to co-ordinate to the same end the various systems he encounters, and he is daily discovering much sound, artistic talent, which, for various reasons, does not seek platform notoriety. Meanwhile, he would like it known, both here and in Melbourne, that he is forming an absolutely independent opinion of all that he hears. He has not yet made a single selection for his staff beyond the three artists for the Verbrugghen Quartet. When he does, he has little doubt that his choice will fall upon musicians resident in Australia.

The Sydney Symphony Orchestra's concert at the Conservatorium this afternoon will doubtless prove one of the most romantic and tuneful ever presented by this fine body of professional players, since the principal item will be Mendelssohn's "Symphony in A Major," generally known as the "Italian Symphony." The composer so named it himself in his wonderfully vivacious letters to his sister Fanny during his visit to Rome in 1831. He then wrote the "Walpurgis Night" and the "Hebrides Overture," whilst he also began the "Hebrides Overture" during the same period of astonishing activity. Mendelssohn described the Italian Symphony as "the gayest thing he had ever done, especially the last movement," but he declared that he would not write the slow movement until he had seen Naples. He did see Naples; but his Andante did not reflect the merry uproar of that city. As a programme note explains, it rather suggests "some solemn evening in the gathering shades of St. Peter's at Rome, or the mouldering, quaint grandeur of the Vatican gardens." Christian Hellemann's new setting of Mrs. Heman's poem, "The Hero's Death," will be sung by Mr. Arthur Appleby; and Mr. Gustave Slapoffski will conduct his band in Ernest Truman's "Lasca, La Mexicaine," described on the composer's score as an "Impression Poetique."

Mr. Gordon Lavers, junior, returned here by the Moldavia from London during the week, after three years at the Royal Normal College of Music for the Blind at Norwood, near London. It will be remembered that young Lavers showed himself a highly sympathetic pianist at his farewell concert at Paling's on April 16, 1912, at which time an influential committee furthered his musical education by raising about £350. Mr. Hollins, the famous blind organist of Edinburgh, whilst visiting Sydney, advised him, since he had already secured the L.A.B. by examination here, and showed talent as an organist, to risk the dangers and difficulties of travel, and enter the Norwood College. He entered under the late Sir Francis Campbell, and then took up piano, organ, and composition, under famous teachers. This year Mr. Lavers secured the associateship of the Royal College of Organists, and he passed on the executive side for the Fellowship. The paper examination is prodigiously difficult, and occupies a whole day, involving scoring for full orchestra, harmonising a melody for string quartet, and arranging music for a full chorus. A blind candidate has to take the questions and examples on the Braille system, and dictate back again, an almost hopeless task, yet Mr. Lavers only missed the diploma by five marks! He now returns here as a welcome addition to the ranks of our resident artists.

Engagements of interest will restore two favourites of talent to the stage next month in Melbourne, where Florence Young will resume the role of Paul Jones in Planquette's comic opera, and Grace Palotta, who has resigned her Melbourne millinery business, will be allotted a strong part in "Nobody's Widow." This is an American comedy with a reputation for brilliancy, in which Muriel Starr will handle for the first time a purely vivacious character, and one, moreover, of unusual length.

WESTWARD BOUND.

(BY ASH-LE-BRUN.)

The great day had come at last for many hundreds of New South Welshmen. For the coming of that day they had longed with a fervid intensity through the dust and discomfort of many a route march, of many a parade at Liverpool, through many an hour of lonely sentry duty. The day had seen a parade by starlight, a journey by train at early dawn, a route march through the city while the streets were yet deserted, and the final parade, roll call, and inspection on the wharf. There had been nothing spectacular. But amidst the tears of women, who carry the real burden of war, there was the light of a holy pride in the men who had trooped aboard, and among the men the intense satisfaction that at last they were "westward bound" on the great venture. When we cleared the Heads there seemed to be a sigh and then silence for a space. Nothing more. Had they been Latins, our lads might have wept or vowed themselves to deeds of wondrous valour "over yonder." Being Anglo-Saxons, they simply turned to, to make themselves comfortable aboard. They laughed and joked, as is the custom of their race. In one way alone could you see how deeply they felt things. There was little swearing—for a time.

Ours is a mixed company. Reinforcements are bound to be so in more senses than one. But we are specially a mixed lot, in a personal sense. Take mess XYZ, for example. The nearest corporal is a long, angular fellow, whose hard face has been lashed with sub-Arctic winds in Alaska and bronzed with the suns of the Cuban and Philippine campaigns. Before he speaks you know he is a Yank. But he's more than this. He's the husband of an Australian girl and the father of a couple of Australian kiddies, and he is off to do his little bit for the defence of that little home up-country. The lad next to him is a Sydney bank clerk, and his neighbour, again, is a son of one of our best-known Sydney families. He probably never cleaned his own boots in his life till he went up to Liverpool. But he was never so happy in his life before as he is now. That dark, thick-set man, who is acting as mess orderly and doubles about the reeling troop deck as to the manner born, has followed the pearling business in nearly all the lonely places of the earth where the industry obtains. He knows every reef and shoal about the Aru Islands and the New Guinea coast. He could sail a lugger blindfolded through all the passages of Torres Straits. Men from the Never-Never are here in abundance—long, sinewy, wiry men, who have that look about the eyes which only wide horizons give. It was hard for them to give up the idea of fighting on horseback. But here they are, foot-sloggers, for the honour and the glory of the west. Some are boys. Many would judge them too young. But, on the other hand, there are those of the old brigade. They are here by the grace of a clean-lived life; a close shave and plenty of hair-dye when they faced the recruiting sergeant. But we wouldn't be without them, for they are a splendid stiffening for any corps of young soldiers. Some of them first heard the roll of the drum 30 years ago, and have followed it ever since. One veteran, whose name is highly honoured in his suburb, has two sons over yonder. "I simply had to go, sir." They are a bonny crowd, men to be proud of, sons whom Australia must ever honour or don the mantle of eternal shame.

What makes them volunteer? In some instances it may be the love of adventure. The old Viking strain is in the make-up of nearly every one of them. In a few cases motives may be less honourable than this, but with the majority of men "westward bound" on the great venture the primary cause is a sense of duty. These men are leaving their native land to strike a blow in a cause which to them is a crusade as real as the wars which called out their ancestors to the Holy Land six and seven hundred years ago. They have no animus against the Turk, but for Germany and all she stands for the soldiers Australia is sending forth have the most determined loathing and desire for vengeance. They will fight the Turk with vim and vigour, because they know they will hit the German through his oriental ally.

What a difference lies between the lot of Captain Arthur Phillip's soldiers of the First Fleet and that of this latest batch to leave Australia not 130 years later. They came out in ill-provisioned, ill-equipped, slow sailing vessels. These soldiers of King George IV.'s great-grandnephew leave their native land, a very southern empire, in a modern liner to fight for the England of their fathers. Spacious troop decks, comfortable quarters, and hospitable fare make for our fellows a pleasant voyage. It must have been a very purgatory for those soldiers of the First Fleet. Ashore one hears talk of military muddles, but those "westward-bound" must take off their hats to the administrative machinery which is able to transport an army as large as that of Wellington at Waterloo half way round the world with due regard to the comfort and welfare of its component parts. There is, of course, a little mal-de-mer, but Father Neptune must be blamed for this. The kindly feeling existing between all ranks on board shows how well the machinery works.

As one would expect with a soldiery made up of every phase of social life, there are men aboard with the talents which help to wile away the hours of themselves and their fellows. What the men call "rattling good concerts" are given in an immense recreation room on one of the troop decks. We had one last night. The C.O. and his officers were present, and the programme presented by the men was well worth hearing. Some of the names of the singers are sufficient to ensure a good audience in many a music-hall ashore.

Nor is the welfare of the troops, physical and spiritual, forgotten. There are officers and men of the A.M.C. aboard, and a chaplain to act as guide, philosopher, and friend to all who may need one.

Perhaps the most hopeful sign in all this business which has been foisted on a peaceful people by the mad militarism of Germany is the fact that in all ranks there is the consciousness of a great ideal, which has called them from their homes and kinfolk to embark "westward-bound" on the great venture.

ACCURACY OF BIG GUNS.

The accuracy of the artillery fire has greatly impressed Private Arthur Cavell, who, writing from Malta, describes the shelling of a Turkish village by a warship, which he witnessed from the deck of a hospital ship. "The work of the gunners was wonderful," he writes. "Looking through glasses we could see the shells bursting all round a white tower, and yet never hitting it. We were afterwards informed that this was a mosque, which had purposely been spared. . . The destroyers, scenting something on the flats near the beach, banged away every now and then with their quickfirers. They reminded one of a cunning boxer, sneaking in stealthily several quick and telling blows, and then just as suddenly almost dashing back out of range."

NEW MUSIC.

"He was only a Private, that's all" (Albert's), words by Evelyn Dell, music by Frederick Gladdish, is dedicated to Albert Jacka, V.C. It is a sentimental ballad of the old school, with a suitable change to a more animated and more robust style in the refrain. The same publishers issue E. T. Paul's pianoforte piece, "The Battle of the Nations." This is a lively and martial pot pourri suggesting big guns, trumpet fanfares, the Russian anthem, "The Campbells are Coming," the gallop of cavalry, and the assemblage of troops. It forms an arrangement of considerable length, and would be useful as a band piece or to back up a spectacular scene at a theatre.

Christian Hellemann's "Off to the Front" (A. L. Hearne), words by Clifton Ford, presents a song the spirited and attractive march-refrain of which should make it popular.

If you cannot sleep a few doses of Clements Tonic taken regularly for a few days will banish Insomnia, and bring healthful, refreshing sleep. Try it. All chemists. Get it, and lose that nervousness.—Advt.

THE CHURCHES.

BUSH BROTHERHOODS.

It is proposed to employ the Bush Brotherhood method, which has proved its usefulness beyond question elsewhere, over a wide tract of difficult and mountainous country in the north of the diocese of Grafton, where the ordinary parochial system is not applicable. An excellent leader for the enterprise has been secured in the Rev. George Watson, Th. Soc., lately principal of the Bendigo Theological Hall. The area to be covered by the operations of the Brotherhood is over 3000 square miles, and a staff of nine clergy and lay brothers is required. There are only six churches in the whole region at present, and five or six more are urgently needed. The headquarters of the Brotherhood are to be at Kyogle. It is intended as far as possible to staff the Brotherhood with Australian-born men. "What are the attractions?" to quote from a printed appeal that has been issued. "Pioneer work for the Church. Long journeys and weariness. The gratitude of those whose spiritual opportunities are few. A small personal allowance, and a very simple life. Only the best men will face that. Men full of God's Spirit, and willing to endure hardness are needed for the work."

CHILDREN OF THE MANSE.

A year or two ago (says the "Church Guardian"), at a very small meeting in connection with the Clergy Orphan Corporation, his Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury (Dr. Davidson) called attention to the large share of public service performed by sons of the clergy, or, as he put it, in his Scottish way, "children of the manse," and he appealed to the National Dictionary of Biography in confirmation of this claim. The Dean of St. Paul's appealed to the same dictionary, and the result of even his hurried inspection of it may be worth placing on record. Amongst those coming from clerical homes he found that of Empire-founders there were Nelson, Drake, Wolfe, Warren Hastings, and Cecil Rhodes; famous in arts, Sir Joshua Reynolds and Sir Christopher Wren; in medical science, Jenner; in philosophy, Forbes and Bradley; in literature and poetry, Crawshaw, Cooper, Coleridge, Matthew Arnold, Keble, Swift, Alexander, Tennyson, Charlotte Bronte, Goldsmith, Kingsley, and John Wesley. He also gave Lecky's beautiful testimony that the most perfect type of peaceful domestic life was to be found in the clerical households of England.

In accordance with its practice of helping parish churches from time to time, the St. Andrew's Cathedral choir, under the leadership of the Precentor (Rev. E. N. Wilton), assisted by Mr. Lee, rendered a choral service at Campsie on Wednesday evening.

The Sydney City Mission held its annual tea and festival in the Town Hall on Thursday evening. A street collection is to be taken up throughout the suburbs on Saturday, December 4, to provide the funds for the Christmas dinners to the poor in their own homes, and Christmas trees for 2500 poor children of Sydney.

The Rev. A. W. Bean, the President of the Australasian Christian Endeavour Union is to participate in the forthcoming Christian Endeavour Convention in Sydney. Mr. Bean hails from South Australia, and is one of the foremost and most popular Baptist ministers in that State. The Convention is to be of a patriotic character, with "Loyalty to our King" as the central theme.

In connection with the Stanmore Methodist Church, Dr. Bromilow will conduct a special service to-morrow night, and the second roll of honour will be unveiled. It is expected that a number of those who are going to the front, who are connected with the church, will be present, as well as several of the returned wounded.

The training school for Y.W.C.A. secretaries and volunteer workers in Christian activities will hold its opening session on Wednesday next. The lectures for the week include the first of a series on the Acts of the Apostles, Methods of Bible Study, and Psychology, as well as practical lectures on association history and method.

The Australian Aborigines' Mission has for some time maintained a home for native orphan and neglected children at Bomaderry, and 19 children, whose ages range from 18 months to 14 years, are being cared for by two devoted sisters. A very successful anniversary was held last week. In future the home is to be called the "Hugh Morwick Aborigines Children's Home."

A memorial and intercession service, under the auspices of the Loyal Orange Institution, will be held in the Protestant Hall to-morrow at 2.30 p.m.

The annual University Church service is to take place to-morrow at 3.30 p.m. This service is under the auspices of the Sydney University Christian Union, and is inter-denominational in character. This year it is to be held in the Congregational Church, Pitt-street, and the preacher will be the Rev. Scott-West, Moderator of the Presbyterian Assembly. All students and graduates and their friends are invited, especially those who are interested in the student Christian movement.

A DARLING SQUATTER.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Your very able article in last Saturday's "Herald," "A Darling Squatter," by Mr. T. W. Heney, was a very good account of a very good man with one inaccuracy. Mr. Heney says Mr. Munro was manager of Momba when Mr. Hogarth left. I was working on Momba at the time Mr. Hogarth left, and some years afterwards; but Mr. Munro was on Mount Murchison all the time, Mr. Weatherby immediately taking Mr. Hogarth's place. When Mr. Weatherby left, his place was taken by Mr. Reid, from Gnalta; his place in turn being taken by Mr. Rostron, from Kallara station. Mr. Munro, more familiarly known as "Old Mun," was about as popular a boss as could be found anywhere—a real good, conscientious, straightgoing Scotchman, who always had the interest of his employees at heart. When "Old Mun" left Mt. Murchison many old hands left, and those that remained felt his loss, and often had a good word for him. Within a week or two of his death was a notice in the press of Mr. E. Keys's bankruptcy. To the ordinary person it meant nothing, but it recalled poor "Old Mun" to me. There was a syndicate on Mount Murchison years ago, with "Old Mun" at the head, who used to send regularly to Tattersall's sweeps. They drew Ruenalf for the Caulfield Cup, Ruenalf (owned by E. Keys) at that time being a red-hot favourite, and perhaps the greatest racecourse "moral" for the Caulfield Cup. "Old Mun" wired to Keys offering a certain sum to nothing about Ruenalf. Keys wanted more, but "Old Mun" refused, more because he did not understand racing and betting methods much to his sorrow. When he stated the matter to his overseer on the station, that individual immediately rode into Wilcannia to offer the required amount to Keys. It was too late; the horse had been scratched half an hour previously. He was first favourite for the Melbourne Cup the same year; but, needless to say, he did not win, the Caulfield Cup being his favourite distance, the scratching of Ruenalf leaving poor "Old Mun" and E. Keys poorer men. "Old Mun" went opal digging when he left the Mount, but had no luck. He picked up a roll of notes—about £300 worth—and took it to the police, who advertised it. "Old Mun" could have kept it, as it was a common thing at that time for men to have rolls of notes at the fields, but that was not his nature. What belonged to another was no good to him. I can only think of him as a good friend and employer. He left the station a poor man, that alone proving his good nature.

I am, etc.,

GEORGE ANDREWS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Most people who read Mr. Heney's article on "A Darling Squatter" in last Saturday's issue will be prompted to wonder why something is not done to perpetuate the memory of those fine colonists who opened up the western plains of New South Wales to the pastoral industry. It is well that men of this class should be honoured. They did work which was no less important than that of the early explorers, whose names are enshrined in Australian history.

Men who took up country on the Darling and its tributaries in the 'Fifties and 'Sixties risked both life and fortune. Many of them lost their fortunes, and some their lives also, in the effort to subdue the western wilderness. But their sacrifice, whilst it brought little advantage to themselves or their connections, bore fruit in after years of much value to Australia.

These men prepared the way for successors who established an immense woolgrowing industry in those regions. The industry has had its ups and downs, and many of those who followed the pioneers succumbed eventually to the antagonism of natural forces. But the enterprise of the original settlers has been of lasting value to the State. It proved the wonderful productiveness of the great plains in good seasons, and laid the foundation for much successful occupation which has taken place, with the advantage of water improvements, in recent years.

Those who pioneered this country deserve to be honoured for their courage, their tenacity, and their spirit of adventure. They hoped to make money, no doubt. Most of them failed in this regard. But their services, from a public point of view, were none the less valuable because of their failure to enrich themselves.

Might I suggest that this is a matter which the Historical Society ought to take up. A tablet recording the names of pioneers of the far west could be erected without much expense in some prominent position in Bourke or Wilcannia or Hay, or in all three. The pioneers helped to make history. They developed the great interior of the continent. And such tablets would rescue some grand old names from the obscurity into which they are rapidly drifting.

Before leaving Hesketh gave her his card with his private address, suggesting that if ever she wanted a new and more lucrative profession she should call on him.

When he stopped at the Blue Boar on Little Pennington Green he found Seth Amery seated in the coffee-room reading a London evening newspaper and smoking a pipe. He remarked that it was very good of Samuel Hesketh to call, offered him a pipe of tobacco and a mug of beer, and when the latter refused he took up his newspaper again and went on reading.

Slippery Sam hoped that the information with which he had provided him and Joe Laronde had proved correct and of some use to them.

The Westerner lowered his newspaper for a moment and nodded his head.

"And your charming niece, how is she?" Hesketh asked politely.

Seth Amery took the pipe from between his lips, threw down the newspaper, looked thoughtfully at Slippery Sam, then expectorated.

"Say, you didn't motor all the way down here just to inquire after our health, Mr. Hesketh? My partner, he'll be down in a minute; he's just come in from fishing. He saw your motor go through the village early this morning." He edged his chair nearer Hesketh's. "You asked after Miss Miriam Guryado, didn't you?" He looked Hesketh up and down suspiciously. "She went off this morning unbeknown to us, and we haven't seen her since. Now, you've just come from Crowhurst Hall——"

"How do you know?"

"Well, you happen to be smoking one of my dear old pal's very excellent cigars." Seth Amery lay back in his chair and laughed. "Look here, Mr. Hesketh, is my niece up at Crowhurst Hall? If not, where is she?"

Slippery Sam gave a little grunt of satisfaction. He had found out what he had wanted to know with remarkable ease.

Miriam Guryado had bolted. Now he knew why she had allowed herself to be so easily turned out of her own home. She had bolted with young Boddington—or at least Hesketh was terribly afraid that was what had happened. Afraid because if that was the case it was pretty conclusive proof that she was not Sir John's daughter and had no claim on him whatsoever. The game would be spoilt for her, for Seth Amery and his partner—and for Slippery Sam.

"Miss Guryado is not at the Hall," he replied. "I had hoped to find her here."

At that moment Joe Laronde entered the room. He showed genuine consternation on learning that Miriam had not returned to the inn and had not been at Crowhurst since the morning.

Samuel Hesketh's original intention had been to have a quiet, confidential talk with Amery and Co., and to give them to understand that all future dealings with Sir John must be made through him. If they offered sufficiently good terms he would act as their agent.

But the sudden trend events had taken altered everything. Laronde showed plainly enough that he mistrusted him, in spite of Hesketh's assurance that he had merely called in a friendly way in case he could be of further assistance.

Directly he heard Sir John's motor-car pass the Green along the high-road he bade the two men good-night.

Joe Laronde stood on the steps of the inn and watched him drive away. And he shook his head.

"I told you we ought to have worked this absolutely on our own," he said to Seth Amery. "That chap is going to give us trouble."

"Don't worry about him; find Miriam," Amery growled. "How can he trouble us anyway?"

"He's got the sort of nose that smells money," Laronde replied. "He guesses we're after money, big money. And he looks the sort that runs with the hare and hunts with the hounds. It was your taking Miriam round to his office that made him suspicious probably. I warned you."

Seth Amery swore under his breath. "Instead of yapping why don't you go out and find the girl? Supposing old Boddington's visit this morning was only a blind, supposing he's taken her off and hidden her somewhere. Where do we come off then?"

"You forget we're in England now. They don't do those sort of things in England," Laronde replied sarcastically.

"Well, what about young Boddington? You forget him. Supposing he met her, and not knowing who she was just ran off with her in his car. They were telling me in the inn this afternoon he was no end of a spark—"

Joe Laronde swung round with a savage oath, while his eyes flashed dangerously. "Darn it, you old fool. As if Miriam would let any young jackanapes run off with her—let alone Boddington, her own brother. I'd just like to catch anyone fooling round Miriam, that's all."

He went out, slamming the door. Fortunately he did not hear the remark which Seth flung after him.

Meanwhile Slippery Sam and his car were following Sir John Boddington back to London. They had agreed to drive straight to George Boddington's chambers in Duke-street.

CHAPTER XIV.

The train into which George Boddington had tumbled at Windsor only stopped once on its way to London, and that was at Slough, a few miles out.

A couple of minutes had elapsed since he had seated himself opposite the woman—though they seemed more like a couple of hours—but George Boddington had not dared look at her. It was sheer cowardice and nothing else; he knew it.

He fought against the feeling in vain. An hour or two ago he had wanted to find and come face to face with the mysterious stranger, and now he had found her he wanted to escape.

If it were really she.

For of course two women might use the same perfume—though the subtle odour which intoxicated him was something more than a few drops of perfumed spirit shaken on to a handkerchief. It was the woman herself. From the first moment it had conjured up a vision which had never left him.

He was a little afraid, too, lest when he raised his eyes the flesh and blood woman did not resemble the vision he had conjured.

The train began to slow down as it approached Slough. George Boddington knew he could not possibly sit there face to face with a woman—no matter who she was—without eventually looking at her. It was just like being alone in a dark room with an unknown person.

And at Slough other people might get into the compartment. Supposing she were the woman, he would have to speak to her, find out who she was, what she had been doing at Crowhurst Hall in his father's study in the middle of the night.

And how much she knew!

"Do you find the wind too much?"

He laid his hand on the sash as he jerked out the commonplace, conventional question which has become a sort of formula with English people when they have the temerity to want to speak to a stranger on a railway journey.

"Oh, no, thanks: I'm used to the fresh air. These railway carriages are so hot and stuffy in summer, aren't they?"

It was the same voice that had warned him, though pitched in a different key. His imagination had not played tricks with him.

Taking a cigarette-case from his pocket he lit a cigarette, and through the smoke he looked at her. Miriam Guryado smiled confidingly in his face.

She was not English—the fact that she had smiled told him that at once. And her features and colouring were distinctly foreign. But he could not, indeed, he did not, attempt to place her. The fact that she was quite unlike the type of woman to which he was accustomed made her mysterious.

The train drew into the platform, and a couple of men approached the compartment. George slipped his hand through the handle of the door and held it fast.

"What did you do that for?" Miriam asked as soon as the train had started again.

"I didn't want to be disturbed," he stammered; "I wanted to talk to you."

Miriam merely showed her teeth in an ingenious smile. Some instinct made George hold out his cigarette-case. Miriam nodded, put a cigarette between her red lips, then leaned forward waiting for George to light it.

"Thanks, that's just what I was wanting. I suppose I couldn't have had it if those other two men had got in. Women can smoke in a restaurant, but not in a railway carriage. You see I'm only just beginning to find out these things."

George nodded. Words came with difficulty. He did not want to talk commonplaces. He wanted to find out what she knew; what she believed. Her voice was like music. And like music it suggested to his mind all the most beautiful things life had given him: The hills at sunrise in the spring; an early morning gallop over the Downs on the back of a thoroughbred; a sailing-boat running to harbour at the close of day against a fresh breeze. And when she had leaned towards him for her cigarette to be lighted he had inhaled all the subtle savour of the gorse-grown hills, the savour of the earth that holds in her womb the perfumes of the flowers yet to be born.

LAW REPORT.

SUPREME COURT.

BANCO COURT.

(Before the Chief Justice and a jury of four.)

BUILDING OF A WHEAT SILO.

James Lonergan, Ltd., v Henry Simon (Australia), Ltd.

Mr. J. L. Campbell, K.C., and Mr. Carlos, instructed by Mr. T. J. Purcell, appeared for the plaintiffs; and Mr. Kelynack and Mr. Curlewis, instructed by Messrs. Sly and Russell, for the defendants. This was an action brought by the plaintiffs against defendants to recover compensation for alleged breach of contract in connection with the erection of a wheat silo. It appeared that a wheat silo was erected near the Gulgong railway station for plaintiffs by defendants, and plaintiffs complained that the work was so inefficiently carried out and supervised that on December 10, after three of the compartments or bins and one-third of the other had been filled with wheat, one side of the building collapsed. The silo was rendered useless, and plaintiffs were consequently unable to work their flour mill, and incurred expense in rebuilding the silo and other buildings and replacing the duplicate suction gas plant, and in cleaning and bagging portions of the wheat, etc. For labour, material, and professional services required in the erection of the new building plaintiffs said they incurred expense amounting to £1547, and other items of expenditure brought the claim to over £2000.

Defendants' pleas were in effect a denial of the breach of contract charged against them.

The jury returned a verdict for plaintiffs, with damages £2251 6s 3d.

A stay of proceedings was granted on condition that defendants furnished security for verdict and costs.

ACTION FOR SLANDER.

A J.P.'s COMPLAINT.

Lynch v Low.

Mr. Curtis (instructed by Mr. F. B. Commins, of Parkes, by his agents, Messrs. F. Curtis and Sons), appeared for the plaintiff; and Mr. Kelynack and Mr. N. Pilcher, instructed by Mr. R. E. B. Reymond, of Forbes (by his agents, Messrs. Sly and Russell), for the defendant. This was an action brought by John Patrick Lynch against John Davidson Low to recover compensation for alleged slander. Plaintiff, who is a Justice of the Peace, and formerly a member of the Assembly, and a resident in the Parkes district for about 30 years, sat on February 17 last on the Bench at Parkes with the police magistrate and Mr. Metcalfe, another J.P. A number of prosecutions instituted by the local Pastures Protection Board under the Rabbit Act were down for determination, the charge being failure to destroy rabbits. A disagreement took place on the Bench in the first case as to the amount of the fine to be imposed; plaintiff and Metcalfe being of opinion that as the defendants were poor settlers who had suffered from drought, the fines should be light. The police magistrate, who thought otherwise, after making some remarks retired, and plaintiff and his remaining colleague went on with and finished the cases. When he took his seat on the Bench plaintiff, according to his case, had no knowledge whatever of the nature of the matters to be tried, or that Mr. Metcalfe was to sit, and his decisions were given according to the evidence. At a meeting in March, of the Pastures Protection Board, the defendant, who is a member of that body, used the following words: "Then, you do not agree with the Bench being packed? It is a ridiculous thing for the honorary magistrates to act as they did at Parkes. According to their finding, the Parkes magistrates would be just as likely to let a man off who was guilty of murder." He said that the statement referred to him and the other J.P., and meant that he had acted improperly in his office of J.P.; that he had been false to his office; and had, with another, or other justices, heard and determined the said charges for the purpose of imposing on persons convicted of breaches of the law smaller penalties than were necessary in the proper administration of the law. Damages were laid at £2000.

Defendant pleaded not guilty.

The case for plaintiff having closed, Mr. Kelynack moved for a nonsuit on the ground that the occasion on which the words were alleged to have been used was privileged, and that no express malice had been proved.

Argument was not concluded when the Court rose.

IN EQUITY.

(Before the Chief Judge, Mr. Justice Simpson.)

AN INJUNCTION APPLICATION.

Berry and another v Riolo and another.

Mr. H. H. Mason, instructed by Mr. H. R. Ross, appeared on behalf of William Berry and Frederick Charles Rigney, and moved to continue the interim injunction, which his Honor had previously granted, restraining Dr. G. Riolo and the Cafe Venice, Ltd., of 317 George-street, Sydney, from selling, removing, or allowing to be removed, any furniture, fixtures, or utensils, on or about the premises at 317 George-street, without the consent of the plaintiffs.

Mr. Bland, of Messrs. E. Prichard, Bassett, and Co., appeared for the defendants.

(Before Mr. Justice Street.)

LEASE OF LACMALAC LANDS.

Kell v Harris and others.

Judgment was delivered in the matter of the suit, in which Stanley Kell prayed, among other things, that the defendants, Alfred Harris, James Kenneally, Michael M'Namara, and Thomas Kenneally, their servants, and agents, might be restrained during plaintiff's term of an alleged lease of certain lands at Lacmalac, in the Tumut district, from interfering in any way with his possession, occupation, and enjoyment of the lands.

After reviewing the evidence, his Honor said he thought all the objections taken to the plaintiff's claim had failed, and that he was entitled to relief. As he had only an agreement for a lease, the suit was in effect one for specific performance of that agreement, that was for the execution of a lease in accordance with the terms agreed upon. But as the terms of the agreement were clear, he saw no reason why, in order to avoid expense and multiplicity of actions, he should not now give the plaintiff the relief to which he would be entitled if a lease had in fact been executed. He ordered the defendant Harris to deliver up possession of the land to the plaintiff within three weeks after service upon him of a copy of the decree. The plaintiff must pay the costs of the defendant's McNamara and Thomas Kenneally, as submitting defendants; and the defendants, James Kenneally and Harris, must pay the plaintiff's costs, including those paid to the other defendants under the order.

Mr. Bonney, instructed by Messrs. Boyce and Magney, agents for Messrs. Emanuel and Emanuel, of Tumut, appeared for the plaintiff; Mr. Clive Teece, instructed by Mr. G. H. Turner, agent for Messrs. Taylor and Mackenzie, of Tumut, for the defendant, Harris; Mr. Packer, instructed by Mr. G. H. Turner, agent for Messrs. Taylor and Mackenzie, for the defendant, James Kenneally; and Mr. Flannery, instructed by Messrs. Murphy and Moloney, for the defendants, McNamara and Thomas Kenneally, who submitted to any order the Court might make.

SOUTH LISMORE DAIRY FARM.

Quigley v Quinn.

Dr. Waddell, instructed by Messrs. Minter, Simpson, and Co., appeared on behalf of John Quigley, plaintiff in a suit against Patrick Quinn, in which the plaintiff asked for an injunction to restrain the defendant from prosecuting an action against him at common law for the recovery of £503 2s 2d, alleged to be the amount due by the plaintiff in respect of a partnership between them in a dairy farm at South Lismore.

Mr. Sheridan, instructed by Messrs. Perkins, Stevenson, and Co., agents for Messrs. Sullivan, McDermott, and Co., of Lismore, appeared for the defendant.

By consent, the matter was allowed to stand over for 14 days, the interim injunction, which his Honor had previously granted, to be dissolved, plaintiff accepting the defendant's offer of the rescission contained in the latter's affidavit of August 12, the defendant undertaking not to sign judgment for the period mentioned.

A GRENFELL HOTEL.

Rolling v Tooth and Co., Limited.

Mr. Weston, instructed by Messrs. Sly and Russell, appeared on behalf of George Francis Rolling, plaintiff in the suit of Rolling v Tooth and Co., Limited, and moved to continue the interim injunction previously granted by his Honor, restraining the defendant company from prosecuting an action at common law for the recovery of £143 1s 5d, part of a sum of £311 11s 10d paid plaintiff by the defendants in connection with his lease of the Exchange Hotel at Grenfell, which amount the defendant alleged had been paid in error.

Mr. Maughan, instructed by Messrs. Buchanan and Smithers, appeared on behalf of the defendant company.

His Honor granted an injunction till the hearing of the suit, but refused to order judgment to be submitted to, or payment of the money into Court.

STRAND PICTURE PALACE.

J. C. Williamson and Co. v Durno Limited, and others.

INDUSTRIAL COURT.

(Before Mr. Justice Heydon.)

COACHMAKERS, Etc.

His Honor said that he adhered to his decision as to the Leather Trades No. 8 Board. The nomination of the second employees' representative could be made by the two engineering societies—the Boilermakers and the Moulders—and by the Federated Ironworkers' Association.

DOMESTIC GROUP BOARDS.

The boards concerned were No. 1 (employees in hotels), No. 2 (clubs and boarding-houses), No. 3 (caterers and restaurants), No. 6 (lift attendants, watchmen, and caretakers). Mr. C. F. M. Cross (Messrs. Read and Read) appeared for the Athenaeum and other clubs and the Master Retailers' Association; Mr. Coote for the Watchmen, Caretakers, and Lift Attendants' Union.

Mr. Coote made an application that lift attendants, at present governed by the Domestic Group Boards, No. 1, 2, and 3, should be taken out and placed under the Miscellaneous Group, No. 5 Board. Mr. Cross opposed the application, which was refused by his Honor.

Mr. Coote then asked for an amendment of the constitution of No. 5 Board, so that it would read: "Caretakers and cleaners in the State and office cleaners, lift attendants, etc." His Honor granted the application. By consent, it was agreed that No. 5 Board should be transferred to the Professional and Shopworkers' Group, subject to Mr. Fawl (representing J. C. Williamson, Ltd., and others) not objecting.

On the application of Mr. Coote (Mr. Cross consenting), the deletion was granted of the words in the Miscellaneous Group, No. 5, "Cleaners in shops who do cleaners' and porters' work." The same words were struck out of No. 3 Board, Professional and Shopworkers' Group. In the latter case Mr. Stuart Robertson (Shop Assistants' Employees) consented to the alteration, subject to interested associations not objecting.

His Honor suggested that a formal application, on notice, should be made, so that all the parties should have a voice in the matter.

RAILWAY COACHMAKERS, PAINTERS, Etc.

Re the Government Railways Group, No. 11 Board (coachmakers, coachpainters, and others, in the employ of the Chief Commissioner for Railways). Mr. C. Thompson appeared for the New South Wales Railway and Tramway Service Association; Mr. P. B. Marshall for the Australian Coachmakers' Society; Mr. Bryant for the Australasian Society of Engineers.

Mr. Thompson asked that lifters, assistants, assemblers, and others in the carriage and waggon shops should be included in the constitution of the board. After argument, his Honor granted the application. On the question of representation, Mr. Marshall (employees) agreed to temporarily resign while the claims of the workers were being considered. It was also agreed that Mr. Thompson should have the right to nominate a representative for the men concerned, and to lodge claims before the board respecting the four classes mentioned.

MUNICIPAL COUNCIL EMPLOYEES.

An application was made by the Municipal Council of Sydney for an industrial board to cover all employees. Mr. Waldron (Dawson, Waldron, and Glover) appeared for the council; Mr. M. J. DAMAGE BY STORM-WATERS.

Murphy v Kogarah Council.

Judgment was delivered in the action in which Clementina Agnes Murphy, wife of John James Murphy, of Kogarah-road, Kogarah, claimed £75 compensation from the council of the municipality of Kogarah, for damage to her property, through the alleged negligence and improper and unskilful manner in which the council had constructed certain drains, watercourse, and channels.

Plaintiff alleged that owing to the way the council had constructed the drains, etc., in Kogarah-road, her shop and lands were flooded during a heavy storm which occurred in March last, much damage being done to the property, by reason of which she had been put to trouble and expense. The council paid £8 into court, which amount, it was submitted, was sufficient to satisfy plaintiff's claim.

His Honor said he had inspected the property, and in his opinion, there was no doubt whatever that the damage done was very little indeed. He found a verdict for the plaintiff for the amount paid in court, and entered judgment for the defendant.

Mr. Hammond, instructed by Messrs. Laurence, Son, and Macdonald, appeared for the plaintiff; and Mr. Davidson, instructed by Messrs. Salwey and Primrose, for the defendant council.

(Before Judge Docker.)

LEASE OF ROOTY HILL PREMISES.

Bould v Waldron and another.

Mr. McKean, instructed by Mr. E. R. Abigail, appeared on behalf of Pearl Bould, wife of Alfred Bould, of No. 6 Richard-avenue, Mosman, in an action in which the plaintiff claimed £25 15s from Clarence Vere Waldron, of 67 Holdsworth-street, Woollahra, and William Randell Marler, of 17 Jersey-road, Woollahra, alleged to be the amount owing to plaintiff in respect of certain household furniture and effects sold by her to the defendants, and for rent due for premises at Rooty Hill, under a leasing agreement.

The defendants, for whom Mr. A. R. J. Watt, instructed by Messrs. Weaver and Allworth, appeared, pleaded never indebted.

His Honor found in favour of the plaintiff for the amount claimed.

COURT OF MARINE INQUIRY.

(Before Judge Backhouse, Captains J. B. Carpenter and F. Bracegirdle, assessors.)

STRANDING OF THE YAMBACOONA.

Mr. Moore, of the Crown Solicitor's Office, appeared for the Superintendent of Navigation. Mr. Curtis, instructed by Messrs. Sly and Russell, for Messrs. Joseph Weston and James Johnston, owners of the vessel; and Mr. P. H. Sullivan for the master, James Dickson.

The British ship Yambacoona was stranded on Big Ben reef, off Newcastle, on the morning of September 7, when on a voyage from Botany Bay to Newcastle, and suffered serious damage. The ship was well found, and provided with the necessary life-saving appliances. The weather was hazy, the wind fresh from the north-east, and a nasty north-east sea.

The Court found that such stranding was caused by the wrongful default of the master, James Dickson, in not navigating his vessel with due caution, and in not keeping a proper look-out when she was approaching the port of Newcastle. The Court therefore ordered that the certificate of competency of James Dickson, as master of a coast trade ship, be suspended for a period of six months as from September 7.

QUARTER SESSIONS.

(Before Judge Murray and jury.)

Mr. Herbert Harris, Crown Prosecutor.

ALLEGED THEFT FROM THE PERSON.

Bessie Langford and John Sydney Jones were charged with stealing £2 from the person of Thomas Brown, at Sydney, on August 22. Mr. Carter Smith appeared for the defence.

The case for the Crown was that Brown met the female accused at an early hour in Pitt-street, near Campbell-street, and shortly afterwards he missed two £1 notes from one of his vest pockets. He accused her of taking the money, but she denied doing so. He then gave her in charge. Jones spoke to two men near the scene of the alleged offence, and told them that the woman did not have the money, and that he would make away with it. The men saw him put a £1 note into one of his socks. Jones was then arrested, and when searched the money was found on him where the men said it had been hidden.

Langford, in her defence, denied the charge, and said that Brown had threatened to give her in charge unless she acceded to a request he had made to her.

Jones corroborated Langford's evidence, and said that the money found in his sock was his own property.

The jury acquitted both of the accused, and they were discharged.

BAYONET DRILL.

WORK OF THE RECRUITS IN CAMP.

SPECIAL INSTRUCTION.

Some of the greatest stories of the present war have their origin in the bayonet charges made by the colonial and Imperial troops. The world rang with the story of Princess Pat.'s Own at Ypres, when the men from "Our Lady of the Snows" covered themselves with glory, as with bayonets fixed they hove straight into overwhelming numbers of the enemy. Only a few weeks later the cables told the story of how Australians won for themselves an imperishable glory at the bayonet point above Anzac Bay.

Bayonet fighting can be classified under two heads—(1) fighting en masse, as occurred with our Canadian cousins in Europe or the London Scottish in their recent famous charge; and (2) individual fighting with the bayonet, instances of which have almost weekly been reported from the front.

A big body of men charging with the bayonet is an almost irresistible force unless machine guns are brought to play upon them, but what he has learnt and carried out en masse each man has to learn separately before he can put into actual practice what he has been taught. At Liverpool Camp, Colonel Kirkland, the camp commandant, sees that bayonet instruction is given by competent men, and every day squads of men are to be found learning this essential part of the profession of arms. Bayonet exercise constitutes one of the finest forms of physical training extant. Three points have to be instilled into the mind of the soldier with regard to bayonet exercise—(1) direction, (2) speed, (3) seizing an opportunity. Speed in delivering a bayonet thrust is absolutely essential. In watching the men being drilled at Liverpool Camp during bayonet instruction this is made very clear. Over and over again, though the squad seemed to move as one man, the instructor would pull the men up and tell them that they were too slow, and yet one man in that squad has already fought at Gallipoli, and hopes soon to be in the battle line again.

To seize his opportunity the wielder of the bayonet must take whatever opening his adversary gives him. In the heat of battle men in their excitement often uncover the body needlessly, and this gives to the trained bayonet fighter a chance which he at once seizes. In using the bayonet it should be utilised not only as a weapon of offence, but, if handled properly, as a weapon of defence. Every man thoroughly grounded in its use is taught that he must, with the rifle, cover the vital parts of his body by so handling the rifle that no part of the trunk of his body is unguarded, and that his opponent's chances of getting one in on him are reduced to a minimum.

In the present war our troops, whether on the Continent or on the Peninsula have been opposed by an enemy who is an expert in the use of the bayonet in spite of the fact that on the Gallipoli Peninsula the Turks have declined to use their training to the same advantage as have the Australians. But there is another point. Both German and Turkish officers are armed with swords. In a contest between sword and bayonet, the latter should win on the account of length of reach alone.

"The man with the bayonet," said an expert in the handling of this weapon, "has but one object—to prevent the man with the sword either rushing in under his guard and forcing the rifle up or down, which would allow the man armed with the sword to seize the rifle by the hand, thereby giving the swordsman a chance to deliver the point or cut at the head or trunk.

"This has got to be overcome by teaching the man with the bayonet the art of parrying. In a more cumbersome way it is what the duellists of old learned, and the trick of parrying is really half the battle when you are at close quarters. With the sword a parry means little, but with the bayonet we teach the men more than one trick. There are two ends to a rifle to which a bayonet is affixed: there is the point of the bayonet and the butt of the rifle, and the soldier is taught to use both effectively. The two commonest modes of using the butt are (1) where the soldier is parried by his opponent. Instead of retiring he steps in closer, bringing the butt of the rifle up with the right hand and by a quick forward thrust smashing it into the enemy's jaw exactly as a boxer would deliver a right hook. (2) If the point has missed, the wielder of the bayonet has a chance of swinging his weapon round and driving the butt into the pelvis of his adversary, but in both these methods of close attack he must never forget to keep the rifle guarding his own target. In other words, the recruit is taught not to use the bayonet to the right of his body, but to keep it always across the heart and lungs, and to drive, when he sees the chance, by standing side on."

The whole of these movements are daily drilled into recruits at Liverpool, but one, which, it is held by the greatest bayonet expert in Australia, is quite, even if not more essential, is not taught the recruits. He put the matter this way: "Supposing your man with the bayonet has failed both with the point and the butt, what is taught him in camp? Nothing. It is just there that he needs the teaching. The military drill books give no instruction, therefore no instruction is given, and though the man behind the bayonet knows what to do up to a certain point he is taught nothing further. Let me put it concisely—in the event of the user of a bayonet failing to strike his opponent with either the point or butt he should then jump in on his opponent, placing his left leg behind his adversary's, throw the left arm round the neck, and apply the back-trip, well known to Japanese and many other wrestlers. By so doing the man attacked, even though he may have a rifle, must free one hand to help break his fall, and then, once he is on the ground, he is at the mercy of the man who has tripped him."

Most of the work referred to above is daily being carried out at Liverpool camp under the supervision of Lieutenant Costello, who has sent five sons to the war, two of whom have been killed. The men are given the most minute instruction in the use of the bayonet, and every movement is carefully explained to them before they are asked to carry it out. Assaults are also given, when the men are guarded by donning helmets and body shields, and the lessons they have learned they put into practice, as far as the helmets and shields will allow.

AN AUSTRALIAN HONOURED.

LANCE-CORPORAL DEANS, D.S.M.

Mr. E. Deans, father of Lance-Corporal Deans, who is now in the Harefield Hospital (England) recovering from wounds received at the Dardanelles, states that his son has been awarded the D.S.M. for distinguished bravery. Mr. Deans stated that when his son went to Victoria he succeeded in getting transferred to the signalling corps. Information had reached him from Victoria that his son had been awarded the D.S.M. for bravery shown in carrying his officer to the rear from the firing line and running great danger. After conveying the wounded officer to a place of safety Lance-Corporal Deans returned to his post and resumed his work as signaller. All the while he was moving in dangerous positions, but his bravery was instrumental in keeping the line of communication secure. He was signalling his comrades when he was wounded. Lance-corporal Deans, when writing to his parents in Gulgong, never mentioned this exploit or even told them he had been wounded.

A retired Chancery Registrar, who in 1909 commuted his pension of £1200 a year for a lump sum of £8000, underwent his public examination in bankruptcy, and explained how his fortune had disappeared owing to losses in betting and the fact that he had had recourse to money-lenders. His unsecured debts were £2036, and his assets consisted only of shares of uncertain value.

THE TOTALISATOR.

THE CASE AGAINST THE MACHINE.

(BY A FATHER OF TEN.)

Before our legislators commit the State to the gambling expedient known as the totalisator for raising revenue, it will be well if they pause and reflect on the pernicious effect such a step is likely to have upon the national character. Especially should they consider the influence which the introduction of the machine is likely to exert on the boys and girls now growing up to manhood and womanhood. It seems to be overlooked that a Royal Commission, after one of the most exhaustive investigations ever made by such a body, has pronounced emphatically against throwing open this additional and most fascinating temptation to those who want to get rich quickly. In spite of the convincing evidence adduced as to the evil effects of totalisator betting on racecourses, a clamour has been raised in favour of its introduction to New South Wales. It has even been asserted that a majority of our people are in favour of legalising the machine. There is no warrant whatever for such a statement. A majority of those who attend races, or who bet on them without attending, no doubt are. But these form only a small proportion of the State's population, and it may well be doubted if racecourse patrons as a class are the safest guides on questions affecting the moral wellbeing of the community. This can be said without in any way reflecting on those genuine supporters of the turf, who patronise horse-racing for the pure love of the national sport. The most clamant advocates of the tote are those speculators who believe they would get better terms from the machine than from the bookmaker. In this they are no doubt right.

Now here we get at the root of the whole question of totalisator versus bookmaker. We can also better understand the agitation in favour of the machine. For the machine is unquestionably more favoured by the mass of "punters" than is the bookmaker. Both "tote" and "bookie" will always beat those who do business with them, but the machine is the more alluring form of investment. It is, therefore, self-evident that under the machine system the volume of betting business would be greater and the ranks of turf speculators, especially the small bettors, increased. Is this desirable? With no prejudice against "the sport of kings" as sport, I say emphatically no.

Wherever the totalisator has been in operation it has enormously strengthened the financial position of race clubs. It has added to the number of racecourses, set them going, and flourishing, and observe, this has been done by adding to the number of those who get bitten with the popular sport and fall into the betting habit. Especially is this the case in New Zealand, where the Maoris who ought to have been protected against tote seductions, have become, as to most of them, incurable gamblers, and too many of them, thanks to turf associations, and occasionally the dividends, hard drinkers. Nor has the much-vaunted machine done anything to "purify the turf," as its advocates claim. In many parts of New Zealand, at any rate, it has had quite the opposite effect, resulting, for one thing, in small dividends. This is especially noticeable in the smaller centres, where queer things are winked at, and the investor "in the know" can, as a rule, "pick it in twice."

Now, it is indisputable that but for the volume of betting on horseraces, the national sport would languish. It is a desirable thing to unduly increase that volume? Experience shows that the licensed totalisator not only brings more grist to the betting mill, but leads to other and less open forms of gambling. It seduces away from useful callings thousands of young people for whom the bookmaking system of betting has no attractions. That system, by its very nature, holds out less temptation to the younger generation of speculators than the licensed machine.

For the young and inexperienced, the roads that lead away from patient industry to ruin are many. Of all such none is more glittering and seductive than that to the racecourse. Our national life is strewn with the wrecks of those who, having made one successful turf investment, found the drudgery of the desk or the workshop a burden too heavy to be borne, and who saw in the racecourse a short cut to fortune. Once infected by the intoxication of a good win from a bookmaker or a dividend on the tote, the mind of the young punter is filled with visions of wealth to be easily got, and a life of indolence and luxury. He loses all real interest in the occupation that qualifies him for useful citizenship. Talents that might be turned to good account are wasted on a study of weights, performances, pedigrees, jockeys, and prospective dividends.

I take up no puritanical or fanatical attitude on the question of horseracing and turf speculation. The man who sets out on a mission to suppress betting on horseraces, or, indeed, gambling in any form, wastes his time. Gambling is inherent in human nature. It is one of man's inherited weaknesses, manifested in business as well as in sport, and it's no use trying to dodge the fact. But the point is: Ought the State to do anything to encourage it? Our legislators are right up against this aspect of the problem now, and it is their bounded duty to grapple with it, not in the interests of sport, not in the interests of the turf speculator, but, as it may affect the moral fibre and well-being of the community. To suppress gambling being impossible surely the next best thing is to, as far as is practicable, prevent it from spreading. I have often heard the superficial and sophistical apology for the tote, "You can't stop people from betting." But I say you can refrain from offering them fresh inducements to bet; and I know of no such or more direct encouragement to the spread of betting than the totalisator. The totalisator to one inclined to bet is like a lighted match to a heap of shavings. The very class of people who are clamouring for the machine is the best guidance against it. Among these are the majority of the racing club authorities, and the proprietors of private racecourses. Already these latter are making fortunes out of those very betting propensities, which, as they know full well, will be intensified by the seductive tote. As business men—and they are about the shrewdest I know—they would be either saints or born fools if they opposed the introduction of the machine.

They tell us, and every tote advocate will back them up, that the form of sport they promote "improves the breed of horses." So it does. That much is freely granted. But do they improve the breed of men and women? Women! Once a woman gets the betting instinct, she is a gambler for life, and in 99 cases out of a hundred she would see in the tote her easiest way to fortune, only to finish up a sadder and perhaps not a wiser being.

As to the betting habit, I say, incidentally, that it becomes immoral and a national evil when indulged in to excess. Then it becomes morally enervating. It makes honourable useful service and the responsibilities of life irksome. It raises delusive hopes of jumping into fortunes.

The point, then, to be driven home is this: Which offers the greater temptation to betting on horse and pony racing, the bookmaking system or the totalisator? Unquestionably, I think I can say, admittedly, the totalisator. It hardly needed a Royal Commission to show that many a one who had never bet with a bookmaker—possibly never thought of betting on races—had no scruple about investing on the tote. For the machine had the State brand on it, and that gave it a certain badge of respectability; moreover, it gave two chances, where the bookmaker (except the place better) only gave one. With the bookmaker and his "huge profits" I am not concerned. He is what turf speculators make him. His prosperity when he is prosperous, at any rate acts as some sort of a deterrent, where the totalisator is a standing and irresistible invitation. The totalisator advocates prove too much. They prove what a pleasant way it is to lose one's money, and at the same time help the State charities. To help the charities! Has it come to this, then, that our benevolent institutions are to be upkept by the gambling propensities of our people? The charity bait offered is a tempting one, and too many are likely to swallow it. But it is a false issue, raised to buttress up a bad cause; and Mr. Holman is deserving of credit for the stand he has taken.

There are powerful interests behind this totalisator movement, of which our legislators should beware. It is all very well for these and the army of turf gudgeons to rail at the "bookie" and his profits. I, at any rate, hold no brief for any turf interest whatever, bookmaking or other, in this matter. But I do take up a brief as a parent and a grandparent, on behalf of the children now growing up, who, by the proposed betting machine, are threatened with one of the most insidious temptations that can beset youth, a State invitation, with the door wide open, to the career of the gambler.

SEVENTY OUT OF 1000.

Sergeant Alban Kirby, son of Alderman James Kirby, of Wollongong, writing from Egypt, says: "I saw a fair share of active service during nine weeks and two days at Gallipoli. My battalion has been cut up awfully. Out of the boys that left Sydney with the battalion there are only about 70 left at the front now, and we left Sydney over 1000 strong."

A pleasant evening was spent at St. Mark's Schoolroom, Granville, on the 21st, when the Granville Girls' Friendly Society issued invitations to meet Mrs. Wright, of Bishopscourt. The occasion was the exhibition of baby kits, made by the members of the society and their friends. Mrs. A. Friend and Miss Harwood attended on behalf of the Babies' Kit Society. Mrs. Wright gave an address, and then Mrs. Friend, after a short introduction, read some extracts from Miss Newcomb's letters, as well as some interesting details from recipients in England and Europe. The society will benefit by some hundreds of beautifully made little garments.

The boat made by Mr. Peter Drummond for Australia Day Fund was won by Mr. Jack Reidy, realising £47. The drawing took place at Mrs. Edgley's house, Neutral Bay.

On August 30, at St. Stephen's Church, Phillip-street, the wedding was celebrated by the Rev. John Ferguson of William Bain, elder son of Mr. and Mrs. W. Scott Fell, of Mosman, and Doris, elder daughter of Major and Mrs. Arthur J. M'Donald, of Edgecliff. The wedding was of a very quiet nature, owing to the absence of the bride's father, he being in action with the 18th Battalion at the Dardanelles. The bride, who was given away by her brother, wore a coat and skirt of cream cloth, her white hat being wreathed with lilies of the valley; she carried a posy of white flowers, which, with a diamond cluster ring, were the gifts of the bridegroom. The bridesmaids, Miss Nellie M'Donald and Miss Cathie Fell, sisters of the bride and bridegroom, wore frocks of pale pink crepe de chine, with hats to match, their gifts from the bridegroom being posies of pink flowers and pearl brooches. Mr. Jack Scott Fell acted as best man. After the ceremony Mrs. M'Donald held a reception at the Hotel Australia, only immediate relatives being present. The hostess wore a gown of nattier crepe de chine, with touches of lime, and a black Tagel hat, and carried a posy of pink sweet peas. The mother of the bridegroom wore a costume of mole crepe de chine, with a mole Tagel hat wreathed with feathers, and she carried a posy of pink stock. Mr. and Mrs. Bain Scott Fell left for the Mountains and the Jenolan Caves.

An evening wedding took place in St. Stephen's Church, Phillip-street, on Wednesday, when Mabel Rose, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Vicars, of Marrickville, was married to Dr. Rupert I. Furber, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. T. Furber, Stanmore. Rev. John Ferguson officiated. The church was decorated with pink and white cherry blossoms, clematis, and lilies. The bride entered the church with her father, and was gowned in white satin; her long court train of Mechlin lace was suspended from the shoulders, while the corsage of tulle and ninon was finished with pearl ornaments. The long, plain tulle veil was worn over a chaplet of orange blossoms, and the shower bouquet carried was of heath, white violets, and orange blossoms. The bride was attended by three maids—Miss Alison Aitken, Miss Dorothy Voss, and Miss Irene Smith, who wore pink floral taffetas. The scalloped frills in the skirts were outlined with tiny posies of pink and blue flowers, while the corsages of pink tulle were finished with deep waist belts and sashes, tied in large bows at the back. Bouquets of Comtesse Berthe roses completed the costumes. The bridegroom's gifts were, to the bride and first bridesmaid, each a diamond ring, to the second bridesmaid a pearl brooch, to the third a silver chain bag. Dr. Hilton Smith acted as best man, and Dr. Campbell and Mr. Gordon Vicars as groomsmen. Later Mr. and Mrs. Vicars entertained the guests at the Australia Hotel. Pink and white cherry blossoms were used in a lavish scheme, carried out in both drawing-room and dining-room, where lattice-work was entwined with flowers, and wedding bells of white clematis were suspended from the ceiling. The guests included: Mr. and Mrs. Wright, Mr. and Mrs. I. S. Thone, Mr. and Mrs. John Vicars, Mr. and Mrs. James Vicars, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Vicars, Sir Herbert and Lady Maitland, Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Afterwards Dr. and Mrs. Furber left for the South Coast, the bride's travelling dress was of Joffre blue cashmere-de-soie, and finished with a white tagel and aerophane hat, trimmed with white bebe roses.

A quiet wedding was solemnised on September 9 at St. Augustine's Church, Neutral Bay, by the Rev. Egerton North-Ash, when Mabel Reeves, younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Meyrick Rainsford, of Kooyar, Cremorne, was married to Captain Dudley le Barron Gainford, younger son of the late John Gainford and Mrs. Gainford, of The Camp, Neutral Bay. The bride, who was given away by her father, was attired in a simple frock of white organdie muslin, and wore a hat of white tulle with orange blossoms; she carried a bouquet, and wore a diamond pendant, the gift of the bridegroom. Her sister, Miss Ida Rainsford, who acted as bridesmaid, wore a coat and skirt of Assam silk, and carried a posy of violets and a silver bag, also gifts of the bridegroom. Captain W. H. S. Pearce was the best man. Only the immediate relatives of the bride and bridegroom were present.

Miss Molly McMordie, eldest daughter of the late Mr. D. McMordie and Mrs. McMordie, of Roshnara, Mosman, was married to Mr. Robert Anderson, third son of the late Mr. R. Anderson, of St. Austell, North Sydney, at Mosman Presbyterian Church, on the evening of September 10, the Revs. D. P. Macdonald and A. J. Wade being the officiating clergymen. The church was decorated with palms, arum lilies, and peach blossom. The bride's uncle (Mr. H. G. McKinney) gave her away. She wore a gown of ivory duchess satin, the square train of which had true-lovers' knots in corner. A wreath of orange blossoms was worn with bridal tulle veil. She carried a shower bouquet, which, with a diamond ring, was the bridegroom's gift. The bridesmaids were the Misses Bessie and Freda McMordie, sisters of the bride, and Miss Hilda Anderson, sister of the bridegroom. They wore pale blue crepe-de-Chine and ninon dresses, and large black tulle hats, with pale pink roses at side, and carried bouquets of pink sweet peas and carnations tied with pink ribbons, which, with gold signet ring and bangles, were gifts of the bridegroom. Mr. Scott Anderson, brother of the bridegroom, acted as best man, the groomsmen being Mr. Harold Crisford and Mr. Arnold Spencer. Messrs. Hugh McKinney and W. H. Swanson acted as ushers. Afterwards Mrs. McMordie received her guests at Warringah Hall, Neutral Bay, which was prettily decorated. Later that evening Mr. and Mrs. Anderson motored to Barrenjoey.

A wedding was solemnised at the Methodist Church, Bondi Junction, on September 1, between Harold John, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. John Robert Burgess, of Harris-street, Harris Park, and Adelaide May, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Warnken, of Watkin-street, Bondi. The Rev. F. Branch officiated. The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a trained gown of white crepe de Chine, trimmed with shadow lace and pearls, her veil being arranged over a mob cap of tulle and wreath of orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of azaleas, hyacinth, and freezias. Misses Pearl and Dot Burgess, sisters of the bridegroom, acted as bridesmaids, attired in shell pink crepe de Chine, overdressed with ninon and pearl trimmings, and tulle Dutch hats, trimmed with pink roses and streamers to match. Their emerald and pearl pendants and bouquets of pink sweet peas and fern, finished with pink streamers, were gifts of the bridegroom. The bride's only sister, Gladys, acted as train-bearer, wearing a simple frock of white silk and Valenciennes lace, together with a mob cap of white satin and insertion with streamers. She carried a basket of sweet peas and maiden-hair fern, which, with a gold wishbone brooch, were gifts of the bridegroom. The bridegroom was attended by his cousin, Mr. Cecil Burgess. Mrs. Warnken, mother of the bride, was smartly dressed in a black tailored costume, with black crepe de Chine hat, trimmed with white lancer plumes, and carried a posy of daffodils, sweet peas, and fern. The bridegroom's mother wore a gown of saxe blue crepe de Chine, relieved with white, her black hat being trimmed with blue flowers. She also carried a posy of sweet peas and fern. Mr. Cerbett presided at the organ. A reception was held at Baumann's. Mr. and Mrs. H. Burgess afterwards left for the Mountains, the bride's travelling costume being navy blue, with white crepe de Chine hat and white ostrich feather boa to match.

At St. James' Church, Glebe Point, on August 21, Claude Leslie, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Hamilton, of Terry-street, St. Peters, was married to Mary Madeline, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hackett, of Bonairo, Bridge-road, Glebe Point. The bride, who was given away by her father, was attired in a gown of Duchesse satin with over-drape of Limerick lace with court train decorated with orange blossoms, and she carried a bouquet of snowdrops and asparagus fern. Her necklet of aquamarines and pearls with a brooch to match, were the gifts of the bridegroom. Miss Annie Hackett, as chief bridesmaid, wore a frock of white charmeuse with a long scalloped tunic trimmed with pale pink roses. She carried a bouquet of pink hyacinths and sweet peas, and wore an amethyst necklet, the gift of the bridegroom. Miss Harriett Bickley was also in attendance, wearing a frock of white charmeuse with guipure trimming and pale pink roses, and carrying a shower bouquet of pale pink hyacinths and sweet peas. Her gift from the bridegroom was a gold bangle. The trainbearers wore little tunic frocks of pale blue silk with lace trimmings, and wreaths of blue forget-me-nots. Mr. James Hackett (brother) was best man, and Mr. Herbert Bastin groomsman. A reception was held at Record Reign Hall, St. John's-road, Glebe Point. The bride's mother appeared in black silk. Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton are spending their honeymoon at Wentworth Falls. The bride's travelling dress was a lovely shade of grey ladies' cloth with waistcoat and military collar of white corded silk, her smart black panne hat was adorned with white lancer plume, and her toilet was completed with squirrel furs.

St. Brigid's Church, Marrickville, was the scene of a wedding on Thursday, September 16, when Miss Bernadette Rosalea Doran, eldest daughter of Mr. E. J. Doran, Superintendent of Tramways, and Mrs. Doran, of Roselea, Warren-road, Marrickville, was married to Mr. Edmund P. Bateman, of Katoomba, and second son of Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Bateman, of Brooklyn, Bega. The floral decorations were artistic. The aisles were guarded with tall silver poles, festooned with white roses and asparagus fern. The ceremony was performed beneath an archway of asparagus fern, arum lilies, and white roses, from which was suspended a wedding bell. The Rev. P. J. Doran, P.P., of Canowindra, uncle of the bride, assisted by the Very Rev. Father Alphonsus, C.P., and Father Considine, Katoomba, performed the ceremony. The bride entered the church with her father. St. Brigid's schoolchildren supplied the music for the nuptial mass, Mrs. Hardman presiding at the organ. The bride's gown was a white satin crepe over a foundation of shadow lace, and faint pink ninon; the court train was held in place at the shoulders with pearl clasps, and lined with the palest pink tulle. The veil of Limerick lace was worn over a mob cap, on Honiton point lace, and held with a chaplet of orange blossom. Her bouquet of white heath and lilies of the valley and a diamond pendant were gifts from the bridegroom. The bridesmaids were Miss Lylie Doran, sister of the bride, and the Misses Mary, Frances, and Helen Bateman, sisters of the bridegroom, and Miss Phill Doran, sister of the bride (train-bearer), and were gowned alike in pale pink crepe de Chine, with shadow lace coatee. The skirts had three deep flounces with picot edging. They wore pink aerophane hats, with lace leaves and streamers of brown velvet ribbon, caught with small posies of pink and blue daisies. They carried bouquets of pink sweet peas and hyacinths, which with pearl rings and silver handbags, were gifts of the bridegroom. Two little maids, Misses Pearlie and Mamie Tricker, were also in attendance as cushion bearers. They wore Empire frocks of embroidered ninon, over pink silk slips, and mob caps of guipure lace, wreathed in pink and blue daisies; a silver handbag and a pearl and turquoise brooch were the gifts of the bridegroom to the little girls. Mr. W. Bateman, cousin, was best man. Mr. Charles Bell groomsman. The ushers were Arthur and Jack Doran and Bede Shortis. After the ceremony the bride's parents held a reception at Sargent's rooms, Market-street. Mrs. E. J. A wedding was celebrated at St. Matthew's Church, South Grafton, between Hilda Enid, youngest daughter of Alderman J. T. and Mrs. M'Kittrick, Rathgal, and Rev. D. J. Collins, Th. L., of Christ Church Cathedral, Grafton. The ceremony was performed by Rev. C. J. Armstrong, assisted by Ven. Archdeacon Seymour. Only the immediate relatives of the bride were present, as the bridegroom intends enlisting almost immediately. The bride was attired in soft white satin, with lace and pearl trimmings, tulle veil, and chaplet of orange blossoms. Miss Enid M'Dougall, the bride's niece, attended as bridesmaid, and wore a pretty silk gown with pale pink hat and tiny posies, the Rev. Mr. Nisbet, of Lismore, being best man. After a wedding breakfast at Rathgal the happy couple left for a short honeymoon at the seaside, proceeding thence to Casino, where the Rev. D. J. Collins holds temporary charge.

Toll! Toll! Toll! All the bells were a-bobbin', Alas and alack for "Poor Cock Robin;"
The wild, wet winter he couldn't endure,
For he had no Woods' Peppermint Cure.
Kiddies who love such nursery rhymes
Are living in happier, healthier times.
In doses of Woods' Great Peppermint Cure.—Advt.

REAL ESTATE.

NOTES OF THE WEEK.

In some quarters the real estate market has shown signs of quietness this week. In other centres, however, there has been a fair amount of activity. A general impression is abroad that agents are in for a fairly quiet period, but evidence does not bear out such a statement, especially when comparisons are made with the volume of business transacted 12 months ago. Up to the present time even the most pessimistic in the market realises that since the outbreak of war the real estate business of the country has done splendidly, and has exceeded all expectations. At the present moment there is no doubt a quietness showing itself, but it is only temporary. What else could be expected when so many conditions are operating against the real estate market? There is, first, the uncertainty of the length of the war. There is also the taxation questions and a War Loan absorbing millions of money. There is the Fair Rents Bill and its uncertain provisions; there is the Greater Sydney question and the absorption of the present municipal machinery. All these things have a lowering influence; but, after all, the stability of the market is never questioned. It is admitted that bricks and mortar will not run away. People are prepared to hold on; in fact, they are holding on well. There is so far no pressure on the side of the money market, and no inclination on the part of owners to sell at a figure lower than before the war. There are plenty of buyers about, but bargains are seldom obtainable. There are a few more empty houses than were to be found 12 months ago, but these are mostly in localities beyond the twopenny tram section, or consist of property owned by persons who took advantage of the recent good times to inflate the rents, and who are loth to reduce again, but where rents are fair and the property situated in a suburb handy to the city landlords can generally find a tenant.

As an instance of the stability of the real estate market one has only to look at this week's volume of business as transacted by some of the principal agents of Sydney. It was the week for indoor sales. Each sale was well attended, and in most cases the bidding up to a point was brisk, but the difference in valuations by the vendor and bidder was anything between 10 and 20 per cent. This blocked business. Neither side would yield. It has been so for months. If vendors would be content with a price 10 or 15 per cent. below their present reserve, and buyers would advance a little more, the volume of business would be considerably increased, but even after all these disadvantages many agents have nothing to complain about.

This week Messrs. Raine and Horne, who have now settled down in their attractive and up-to-date rooms, were fairly active. Mr. Rabett had a capital audience at the indoor sale on Thursday. He sold a water-frontage residence at Elizabeth Bay, known as Rockley, once the home of Mr. E. Deas-Thomson, for £5300. This is a 99 years' leasehold property, with 50 years still to run. He sold a dancing academy in Edward-street, Redfern for £1650, an interest in a city leasehold property for £8500, a water-frontage residence at Woy Woy for £850, a cottage at Leichhardt for £400, 40ft land at Bellevue Hill at £6 per foot, 50ft at Five Dock at 55s per foot, 50ft at North Sydney at £7 per foot, and two or three smaller blocks at Narrabeen, Botany, Lakemba, and Warrawee.

Messrs. Hardie and Gorman also had a fairly active week. They disposed of a cottage at Bay-road for £1100, a cottage in Carrington-road, Waverley, for £400, a house in Leinster-street, Paddington, for £550, a building site in Railway-avenue, Wahroonga, at £5 per foot, a block of land at Penshurst at 25s per foot, two cottages at Newtown for £840, and five allotments at Kandos for £180.

Messrs. Arthur Rickard and Co., Ltd., report that the summer has opened in a promising manner. So far the September sales exceed last year's figures by 64 per cent. This includes an auction, but, omitting that, there is an increase of 27 per cent. in private sales. The distinguishing feature of this year's trade is the demand for home farms and farms for city workers. Of the latter, the best have been Wentworthville farms. The Flushcombe farms (Bankstown), Raby Acres (Ingleburn), Wamberal (Gosford), have had satisfactory inquiries. Home sites at Leichhardt (Verdun Estate), at Merrylands (Longview), at Guildford Downs, and at Terra Bona (Concord), have brought the figures for this line of business much above last year's returns. At the same time, pleasure resorts have had average sales, the best being the Cronulla group, the excellent value of the £25 lots there having been recognised. The sales of home sites and of week-end lots indicate the faith of the public in the soundness of investment land. The desire to possess a home of his own, the necessity of maintaining the economy when entered upon, and the satisfactory and regular rise in values of Sydney and suburban lands, will always operate in favour of attracting the workers' savings to land.

Messrs. Richardson and Wrench had a good attendance at their weekly sales yesterday, when Mr. James Gregg submitted a fairly attractive programme. He had bidding for most of the lots offered, but only two properties reached the reserve, and were sold. One was a farm block of 25 acres at Emu Plains. This brought £20 per acre. An allotment in High-street, Penrith, realised £45. A residence fronting Pitt-street, North Sydney, was afterwards sold for £1500.

Messrs. Batt, Rodd, and Purves had offers at their sale for Quambi up to £7000, but the reserve is £9000. For Merioola, at Neutral Bay, the residence of the late Lieutenant-Colonel Braund, a leasehold property, £1550 was refused, £1800 being the reserve. Ickleton farms, 10 miles from Liverpool railway station, and near to Hoxton Park, were disposed of at a good price. The acres sold numbered 88. A pair of cottages at Waverley changed hands for £1330. It may be said that this is the first sale of a Liverpool property of note for many years.

Messrs. Stanton and Son included in their week's business the sale of the following properties:—Two shops, Addison-road, Marrickville, £2335; cottage, Rosebery Model Suburb, £1170; cottage, Croydon, £844; brick house, Summer Hill, £350; and a cottage, Haberfield, £1050.

Messrs. J. Stimson and Son included in their recent sales a large water frontage residence at Glebe Point for £4250, and another water frontage residence in the same suburb for £6000; also a pair of cottages at Enmore for £525, and a cottage at Banksia for £230.

The well-known firm of Marshall and Dempster have taken advantage of the new Real Estate Association Auction Rooms, Castlereagh-street, city, and will hold their first indoor sale there on Tuesday next. The catalogue is an attractive one, and includes business premises in George-street, private residences in the suburbs, and other good investments. Full particulars appear in to-day's business columns.

SUBDIVISION WORK.

LAST SATURDAY'S SALES.

There were only one or two sales held last Saturday, but these were fairly successful. At the popular district of Bankstown, quite a crowd gathered at the auction of business and residential sites close to the station, which Messrs. Hardie and Gorman offered in conjunction with Mr. E. P. Woolcott. It was a subdivision of the Township Estate, and 20 allotments were sold, at prices up to £7 per foot. But these figures hardly represent the success of the auction, for £13 10s per foot was offered and declined for the corner block, the upset price of which was £15. When it is considered that similar land was sold at Lakemba the previous Saturday at £13 per foot, and Lakemba is so much nearer Sydney, the offer of £13 10s at Bankstown is good evidence of what the people think of the future of this suburb. Five years ago land at Bankstown between the railway station and Liverpool-road could be purchased at shillings a foot, while it brings pounds to-day, and this rapid rise will no doubt continue, especially when the war is over. Even during the war period Bankstown has never looked back a day. The report of the local council is that building operations still continue at the rate of one house per day. Few municipalities can excel a report of progress of that character.

Another successful sale last Saturday was held at the Sirius Beach Estate, Mosman, when Messrs. Arthur Rickard and Co. offered a subdivision of 19 lots. Of these Mr. Rickard sold 14 at prices ranging from £2 7s 6d to £4 15s per foot. This augurs well for future subdivisions of this property. These two auctions alone realised a total of nearly £6000. They indicate also that subdivision sales in good localities will continue to receive the support of the public, providing the reserves are not too high, and the district is reasonably handy to the city. It is a home site, which most people want. Of course, the speculators are always on deck, looking for bargains, and these two classes combined generally make up an audience satisfactory to the auctioneers.

TO-DAY'S AUCTIONS.

There are several sales fixed for this afternoon which will probably attract a good deal of attention.

First of all, there is another sale to be held at Bankstown, where Messrs. Arthur Rickard and Co. will offer the New Era estate, 15 minutes' walk from the local railway station. The land adjoins the Condell Park estate, which was so successfully auctioned by this firm 12 months ago. It was due to the efforts of Mr. Arthur Rickard that the first important subdivision sale took place at Bankstown, when he prepared and offered the well-known Greenacre Park estate, the whole of the allotments of which have more than doubled their value since the day they were offered under this firm's easy terms. Many have built their homes upon the land, and some have paid for both house and allotment under the instalment principle, and they are now free from the worries of the landlord. As a healthy suburb there are few which can surpass Bankstown, and this largely assists the workers in determining the district of their choice for residential purposes.

Another sale which is likely to be attractive to-day is to be held at Northbridge, when No. 6 subdivision will be offered by Messrs. Raine and Horne. There was a time when people asked "Where is Northbridge?" but the promoters of the estate no longer require to supply that information. The five previous subdivisions sold out almost upon the day of sale, and Northbridge—the word indicates north of the Suspension Bridge—is now being built upon with a most attractive style of home building, and values have risen in proportion. There are some points necessary in the selection of a home site:—1. Ideal surroundings; 2, tram, train, or boat communication with ease; 3, made roads; 4, city water; 5, a fair elevation above the sea; 6, easy terms of purchase. These will, it is claimed, be obtainable by buyers at Northbridge.

The famous Vaucluse estate is again to come under the hammer this afternoon, when another subdivision will be submitted by Messrs. Richardson and Wrench. The land to be offered is close to the Parsley Bay suspension bridge, an elevated position near the wharf.

Messrs. Hugh Duff and Co. are offering, at Roseville, this afternoon, the Paradise estate, comprising 42 choice residential sites, close to the railway station, and surrounded by good residences. The owners have kerbed and guttered Paradise-avenue, and the whole is good building land, and should be quitted in the afternoon. This is the last subdivision near a station on the line. Terms are exceptionally easy.

Messrs. Hardie and Gorman have a sale this afternoon at Hunter's Hill, about which there has been a good deal of inquiry. It is a small subdivision of nine allotments, in the Millthorpe estate, which adjoins the highly-improved Passy estate. The land is handy to three wharfs, and with delightful views of the river.

There is to be a sale this afternoon at Gosford of water frontage land, which will be submitted by Mr. F. Wheeler. There is a total of 82 acres to be offered.

EIGHT HOURS DAY SALES.

On Eight Hours Day several holiday sales have been arranged. One is on the mountains between Valley Heights and Blaxland, where the Karabar Estate will be offered by Messrs. D. J. M'Intyre and Co. on easy terms.

The Sunnyside Estate at Cronulla (Caringbah) will be offered by Mr. C. Monro. This is a splendid subdivision of 89 choice residential and business sites, which ought to sell well.

Mr. R. B. Paterson has a sale at Wentworth Falls, on the mountains, on Eight Hours Day.

ROYAL ART SOCIETY.

THE ANNUAL EXHIBITION.

The artists have been hard at work during the week sending on their pictures to the Royal Art Society's Spring Show, and the selection committee, having courageously dealt with the rejected addresses, the meritorious residue in all sections amount to 250. These works in oils, water-colours, and black-and-white, are already on the walls of the new galleries of the Education Department, Bridge-street. Engagements for next week are Wednesday, varnishing day; Thursday, trustees of the National Art Gallery; Friday, for the press-critics; and Saturday for private view. On Monday, October 4, the Minister for Education (Mr. Arthur Griffith, M.L.A.), will formally declare the show open to the public. In this connection the painters cordially invite all soldiers in uniform to enter free. "Tell them they will be very welcome," exclaimed the president heartily.

Mr. W. Lister Lister also declared the show to be "most excellent," though, with the exception of marine subjects by Charles Bryant (now in England), Will Ashton (Adelaide), and A. J. Daplyn's pastoral themes from rustic England, the collection does not embrace outside contributions. The new galleries are beautiful. There is the best form of illumination, a lantern light as at the National Art Gallery, the walls are of a dark chocolate tone that throws out the work, and there is an abundance of space—the principal room 100 x 36, the second room 45 x 37, and a third available for festival arrangements.

Without too much forestalling pleasurable anticipation, it may be mentioned that Lister's great canvas this year will show a Blue Mountain view near the Linda Falls, an exquisite, sunshiny subject, and a number of water-colours of the South Coast. Mr. J. S. Watkins's principal portrait is a life-size painting of Mr. Campbell Carmichael, and his list includes a taking decorative work entitled "Spring." Mr. Datillo-Rubbo sends in "Where the Daddy Fell," in which the aged grandfer points out to the child the fatal spot on the map; whilst one of his best in black-and-white is "Norah." Mr. Norman Carter sends in his life-size portrait of Richard Teece, several landscapes, and a telling likeness in black-and-white of Henri Verbrugghen. Mr. J. R. Jackson assists with a sunlit garden scene, an attractive interior, a portrait of a lady, and minor works. Mr. G. V. F. Mann strengthens the collection by sending in a number of foreign scenes as the outcome of his European travels. Mr. Wakelyn is represented by an outdoor scene in the impressionist manner. Mr. D. G. Reid contributes landscapes, as does also Miss Evelyn Chapman, who has hitherto followed figures. Mr. A. M. Woodhouse's title, "The Spangling Sun," describes his theme, and he has also a nude. Mr. Alfred Coffey's large work on the mist-covered valley of the Blue Mountains, Mr. C. E. S. Tindall's shipping, Mr. J. A. Bennett's figure paintings, and Miss Mabel Barling's animals are all included in a long and interesting list.

EARLIER CLOSING OF HOTELS.

BAPTIST UNION'S EFFORTS.

At the conference of the Baptist Union yesterday, Mr. H. J. Morton submitted a resolution expressing regret that the Legislature had not given effect to the people's plainly-expressed desire for the earlier closing of liquor bars, a reform which, the conference was certain, would very materially lessen drunkenness and depravity; and urging that their efforts be not relaxed till the ultimate prohibition of the sale of alcoholic liquor had been secured.

The mover said that there had never been so insistent a demand for reform as at present, and it would have to be conceded.

The Rev. R. J. Middleton seconded the motion, which was carried.

This is a first-class opportunity to acquire a very valuable property, in addition to a good business, as a going concern. There is no more popular suburb than Coogee, or suitable site for a seaside Refreshment Palace than the water-frontage block owned by the Golden Palace, Limited, at the corner of Beach and Dolphin streets. It is on the water's edge, and commands an uninterrupted view of the ocean.
The increase in population and the rapid building operations are unsurpassed in any of Sydney's suburbs, whilst the property values are the best criterion of the financial soundness of the district.
A Lease has already been granted for the Main Hall for three years at a good rental, which would be transferred to the purchaser.
All information may be obtained on the premises or from our offices.
Tenders may be submitted for the purchase of the above or for a Lease for a term to be arranged, and must be upon our printed forms, accompanied by a Deposit of Ten Per Cent.

FARMS FOR WORKERS, HOME FARMS.

ARTHUR RICKARD and CO. (Ltd.), beg your attention to their farmlets for those who wish to enjoy country life, although they are city workers. Those who invest in our estates at Quaker's Hill (Windsor Line), Flushcombe, and Bongarribee Farms (Blacktown), and Wentworthville Farms, can reach town by through trains in the morning, and return by "fasts" in the evening. They can materially increase their incomes, too, by supplying Sydney and Parramatta Markets with milk, cream, butter, fruit, vegetables, flowers, honey, bacon, etc. Such a farm home means health and profit—it is worth your while to investigate.

Besides these farms within easy hail of stations, they offer HOME FARMS at Wyee, Wombeyal (near Gosford), Baby Acres on Bringelly-road, near Ingleburn, and Eastwood, adjoining Baby Acres. These vary in area from 2½ acres to 50 acres, and range in price from £5/17/6 to £17/10/ per acre.

"MOONLIGHTING."

(BY R. C. DOYLE.)

No longer do they work the cattle by the light of the moon. Modern conditions have changed all that, but in the sixties, when there was never a fence to be found north of Murrurundi, unless it were a stockyard, it was part of the routine of the run to go "moonlighting." The cattle mostly kept to the scrubs in the daytime, the great belar and brigalow scrubs of the Barwon country, and coming out to feed at night on the plain, and there lay the only chance of mustering them. When the moon was about a week old the men would go out to camp, starting to work when the moon was up each night; three or four men bringing along a mob of quiet cattle, "the coachers," and working them along the edge of the scrub while the best riders reconnoitred close by. When the scrub cattle came out it called for dash and speed on the part of the waiting men to race round them and try and turn them into the coachers, while the men working the quiet cattle rushed them to meet the scrubbers in the hope of boxing them up.

As long as the moon held the men kept on working; not a word could be spoken, and a low whistle was the signal to attract attention. If a yard was in the vicinity the cattle were run out there to wait until the morning, but more often the yard was far away, and it took constant vigilance to keep the mob together and gather in the stragglers. A brave sight it was, in the white light of the moon, to see the wild cattle breaking out and the men galloping recklessly over country pitted with melon-holes to head them. The first fastest horse was sent at his top speed to cut off the first beast, then, with a few yards between, the next rider would make for his beast, and so on until the mob was ringing towards the coachers.

Sometimes moonlighting would last for several nights. All day the men camped, killing the hours by sleeping, and the more energetic ones by playing cards or marbles, until the time came to saddle up, and go out to the scrub. When the wild cattle were rounded up, and brought in with the coachers, they would be drafted out by daylight, every cleanskin that turned up would be decorated with the station brand, and next night, another part of the scrub would be worked until the muster reached a satisfactory total. Ugly brutes they were to deal with some of the scrub bulls; though, as the Irishman said: "Some of the worst bulls were the cows." Scarcely a night but a man met death face to face for an instant, and some grisly stories of accidents at the yards have passed into legends.

After the '62 drought many of the horses were affected from staying out too long from water, or from Darling pea; opinions were divided. Anyone who has ever ridden a "pea-eater" will know how a horse will rear when one goes to lead him over the smallest log, and lie down almost at a touch. A friend of the writer's happened to be riding a pea-eater moonlighting one night, and he went to run a big four-year-old cow, with horns like lances, into the coachers. Instead of going towards the mob, however, she turned and charged him, her horn grazing the horse's shoulder as he tried to get out of her way. The "pea-eater" promptly laid down, and the cow turned her attention to the man. There was a small dead tree not very far away, and for that tree he made as if he were running a Marathon race, and the cow bellowed after him, managing to give him a root just as he reached the tree. He tried dodging round the trunk of the tree, but the trunk seemed very small, and the cow very quick, so he made up his mind to scale the tree, which he did assisted by the horns. However, the tree was intended for lightweights, and the limbs began cracking ominously, and he was preparing to try riding the cow as a desperate measure when one of the riders came along bringing in a mob of stragglers, and the tension was relieved. A hundred incidents like these provided the comic relief of the work, though at the time, any one of them might have been a fatal accident but for a fortunate chance.

The stock horses deserve a lengthy eulogy, stanch and speedy as they are, and knowing their work as well as a man, and keeping their foothold on difficult country by a miracle. "Moonlight" is deceptive work, especially the nights when the moon is on the wane, and the men go out to work in the small hours of the morning with the coachers, and work until the dawn. Grass covers holes where stumps have rotted away and hides fallen timber, and plains with gullies and washes, sometimes seven feet deep, that have to be taken in the race and at the gallop, make dangerous going. But somehow the horse does it. Galloping along through the moon-silvered, long, coarse grass, sometimes right in the path there shows the deep washed gully of flood rains. To stop is impossible, and the wise equine instinct knows that to fall in may mean a smash, and somehow he gets over. The old hand amongst stock horses, too, knows as much as his rider about the art of galloping up alongside a "nugget" and slinging it by a twist of the tail. He knows all the moves of the game, and when his rider is holding down the youngster he stands there ready for the next call. He works with his rider with an amazing intelligence, and the day he falls, unless it is the veriest mischance, his day is done. Sometimes, in the bad boley country, a galloping beast will fall into a hole and come down, and those pressing just behind him come down also in a bellowing, struggling heap. Going at top speed in country like this, the stock horse may come to the ground without loss of prestige.

It was hard work, work that called for endurance and despatch, yet it had a dash of danger in it, an element of chance that, when the years that have passed have dimmed the memory of the strain and discomfort, makes many a man think of the good horse he rode with a poignant regret for the old days, and the old ways, when the heart was young.

THE WOOL TRADE.

AUCTIONS NEXT WEEK.

A quiet week has been experienced in the Sydney wool market; there has been an absence of auctions, but public sales were held in Melbourne on Tuesday and Wednesday, these being the preliminary to the regular selling season that is to open late next month. Auctions will be resumed in Sydney next week, when all the firms of selling brokers will submit catalogues, the total offerings being limited to 25,000 bales. Last week's auctions in Sydney, and the opening day's sales in Melbourne this week, showed that while best greasy merino and crossbred fleece, also bulky skirtings, were in strong demand at good rates, it was apparent that best scoured was not in active request, and that a lower range of values was in evidence; while medium to short-stapled greasies, also burry, earthy, and tender descriptions, were extremely difficult of sale. If bids were made, they were on so low a basis of values that the lots were passed in. Japan and America operated freely on the better descriptions, and buying was strong for Italy of good pieces and bellies; there was also some buying for the local mills; but Yorkshire was comparatively inactive; and the selling side of the trade came to the conclusion that the interests of growers would best be conserved by light offerings till a stronger and wider demand sets in. While the demand is practically confined to the better descriptions of greasy, it is labour in vain to offer wools that are not in demand, such as the short, wasty, burry sorts. With small catalogues and attractive selections of greasy there is a promise of good clearances, but last week's experience shows that for the time being there is no improvement in the outlook for drought-stricken wools, and that there is no advantage in cataloguing them till some demand sets in at reasonable values.

The course of the market in Melbourne this week was somewhat similar to that of Sydney last week. On Tuesday, about 5200 bales were catalogued by three firms. The offerings included new clip Riverina and northern Victorian wool, but it was a somewhat indifferent selection. The "Age" says with regard to the market that "competition was by no means keen, and the withdrawals were much above the average as compared with the previous auctions, which were held in this State during the last week in July. Values showed a very serious decline; whilst the removal of the embargo as regards the export of crossbred wool to North America and allied countries has had the effect of keeping the market firm for crossbred wools, and more particularly the better descriptions. The very fact of crossbred wools being liberated for American consumption has assisted to lessen the demand for merinos, and such wools are from 5 to 15 per cent. below July rates, the minimum decline being evidenced when well-grown greasy wools were submitted, and the maximum in scoureds. The demand for the small quantity of lambs' wool available was very poor." On Wednesday some 4000 bales were submitted, and the selection was a superior one to that of the previous day. Competition was much more active, and with a strong American demand for the best merinos and crossbreds, values recovered the weakness of the previous day for such descriptions; medium and faulty, also scoured in general, showed no improvement, and were difficult of sale.

At the sales in Sydney next week there is the advantage of the embargo being removed on the export of crossbred to Canada and allied countries, subject to certain conditions. Exporters have to give a security for each permit to the Customs, and exportation is subject to the production of satisfactory evidence that the wool will not be re-exported from the country to which shipment is permitted, except to allied countries. Under all the circumstances of lighter supplies, attractive offerings, and fewer restrictions on export, there should be a good demand and full clearances.

WOOL TOPS BOUNTY AGAIN.

Since the Interstate Tariff Commission issued its report on the wool tops bounty, now in the course of expiry, two or three efforts have been made, by approaching the Minister for Trade and Customs, to have the bonus renewed, in spite of the absolutely condemnatory report of the commission. When the bonus was originally asked for it was on the ground that it would, within five years, lead to a great expansion of the industry. It would result in the employment of much skilled and highly paid labour, and that at the end of the period wool combing for export would be self-supporting, and that no further bonus would be asked for. There was much inconsistency between the reasons given for the Federal Government apportioning public funds for the export of wool tops and the inducements held out to investors when a company was formed to exploit the newly created conditions. "The prime intention of the bounty on wool tops," says the commission's report, "was undoubtedly to encourage the exportation of our wool in a partially manufactured state—an attainment much to be desired. But the methods employed are more likely to prove to the injury than to the advantage of the total of Australian industry." There can be no doubt that the intention of the Commonwealth Parliament was to promote an industry that might develop into large self-supporting dimensions, and indirectly lead to the employment of skilled labour engaged in the manufacture of high-class textiles. But nothing of that kind has resulted from the bonus; for the bounty only goes to the one or two firms who export the tops that are produced in the main by girl labour and almost automatic machines. If the bounty went to the manufacturers of the worsteds and woollens in Australia, something might be said in its favour; or if the bonus were enjoyed by all wool-scourers, who really have to employ a larger proportion of adult labour, then something might reasonably be argued for a continuance of the bounty after its seven years' trial. But as it is not possible to subsidise all the woollen and worsted mills, or all the wool scours in the Commonwealth, to anything like the extent that a couple of top exporting firms have been bounty fed, the least that can and should be done, in justice to the whole wool and textile trade, is for the Commonwealth Government to act on the report of the commission, and relieve self-supporting firms of undue competition engendered by the bonus in a variety of ways.

BOUNTY AND TEXTILE WORKERS.

The Minister for Trade and Customs has been interviewed on two separate occasions since the publication of the commission's report. In the first instance, Mr. Tudor was approached in Melbourne by Mr. F. W. Hughes, of F. W. Hughes, Ltd., Botany, which was not surprising, considering that he seeks a continuance of the bounty to the extent of a cool £20,000 per annum, instead of £10,000, as heretofore; and drew the major portion of the £56,445 paid away up to the close of the year 1913-14. In the second instance, Mr. Tudor was approached on Thursday last, in Sydney, by Mr. M'Kenzie, secretary of the Textile Workers' Union, who waited upon the Minister to inquire whether the bounty on wool tops was likely to be re-enacted, and also the conditions of employment in the industry. The Minister informed him that the matter was now pending. Perhaps Mr. M'Kenzie merely made inquiries, without seeking to have the bonus re-enacted; in which case the interview was without significance so far as the bounty is concerned. If, however, it was with a view to getting a re-imposition of the bonus, then it is inexplicable, inasmuch as the only textile people to benefit outside the two top exporting firms are worsted manufacturers in Japan; who, by the cheap tops, are able to enter into competition with Australian and British manufacturers to advantage. If the textile workers in Australia benefited, a word might be urged by the secretary of a union, but the point is that neither the employers nor the workers in the woollen mills—where the textile workers really are—derive the slightest benefit from the bounty on the export of tops. On the contrary, their textiles have to compete against the Japanese fabrics, spun from the Australian bounty-fed tops. The one or two hundred people employed in the two combing mills are mainly girls, and if there is any likelihood of any of them seeking employment through the lapse of the bounty, then the Government, with the £20,000 a year that is coolly asked for, could put them on to work of a patriotic character. They even might profitably be pensioned with the money; for then none of it would act prejudicially on wool and wool industries.

BRADFORD TOPS.—FINE UNCHANGED.

According to our cable of yesterday's date, the Bradford market is fairly cheerful, with prices for merinos and fine crossbred qualities unchanged, but medium and coarse crossbred tops are quoted /0½ lower. The course of prices since July 16 has been as follows:—

SYDNEY WOOL RECEIPTS.

Wool continues to arrive in good volume by both rail and boat. A material increase is shown in the receipts for the week; due, not to any increase in the clip, or earlier shearing than last year, but owing to the more clearly defined conditions in connection with the war than early in the season last year. The quantity for the week by rail and boat compares with the corresponding period last year as follows:—

Season.	Sept. 18-24. Bales.	July 1-Sept. 24. Bales.
BY RAIL.
1915-16	33,026	157,903

1914-15	1,664	11,586

WOOL SHIPMENTS.

Only two vessels have cleared the Sydney Customs since last review with wool for overseas ports; and they were both for the United Kingdom, totalling 2483 bales, as compared with two during the corresponding week last year, with a total of 2656 bales. Through a proportion of last season's clip being sold and shipped during the current statistical year, a considerable increase is shown in the exports. The quantities for the season compare as follow:—

	Bales.
Arabia, Sept. 18, for London	1,571
Nestor, for London	912
Total from Sydney since last review	2,483
Total from Sydney and Newcastle from July 1 last to date	140,833

FRUITGROWING.

PARRAMATTA ORCHARD NOTES.

Nice showers have fallen in the fruit-growing centres, and everything points to a good general crop, both of summer and citrus fruits. The general report is that the citrus bloom is one of the best, for main crop, that has been experienced for some years. Of late years the profuse blooming for second and intermediate crop has had an injurious effect upon the trees, which, consequently, failed to produce a good main crop bloom. The prospects thus far for lemons, oranges, and mandarins are excellent, and, taken right through, the trees never looked in better condition. Summer fruit bloom has set well as a rule. Peaches, nectarines, and apricots all show well for a good crop, as also do many of the varieties of plums. Some of the plum trees, however, which threw an early bloom and caught one or two sharp frosts did not set well. Slight frosts have still been occurring during the past week, but apparently no damage has been done, the young growth, by reason of the usually dry and mild conditions of temperature, being particularly hard and strong for this time of the season. The new growth has thus been able to stand slight frosts without suffering any ill effects. The grape crop also promises to be a heavy one, and the foliage is hard and strong, and, up to the present, particularly free from the fungus which attacked it for the past couple of years. The immensity this year is attributed to the fact that the vine escaped getting what is called "wet feet" through excessive winter rains.

The hailstorm, reference to which was made last week, blazed a track from Cattai Creek right to the Northern railway line about a mile wide, and in length about eight miles. The whole of the orchards in this track will not pull a case of fruit, it is said. Some of the citrus growers estimate that their loss of the crop that was hanging and waiting for the top market meant at least £1000 to them, and to this must be added the loss of next season's crop, the blossom for which was on the trees. In some instances not a blossom or a leaf was left on the trees, and, besides this, the young wood was so cut about that it will be a long and tedious job to go over the trees and cut out the injured wood. Thus, the loss is the balance of this season's crop, next season's crop, besides the cost of overhauling and trimming the trees, and keeping the land in a proper state of cultivation.

MEDICINAL PLANTS.

Mr. J. Laker Macmillan, F.C.S., writes:—There has been some discussion in your columns under the above heading regarding the discovery of Strychnos psilosperma in New South Wales. Mr. Fred. Turner claims to have been the discoverer, which honour Mr. William Dunn, forest guard, Bermagui, with apparent reason, disputes. Of more importance, however, to the scientific mind is the claim by Mr. Turner that strychnicine, obtained from the plant named, is a new alkaloid. He says that Strychnos psilosperma was chemically investigated by Dr. Petrie, of the Sydney University, and was found to contain brucine, strychnine, and "the newly-discovered Australian alkaloid strychnicine," and that Dr. Petrie's paper concerning such was published in the "Proceedings of the Linnean Society of New South Wales for 1913." As strychnicine was known for a considerable number of years prior to that time, it would be interesting to learn how it comes to be denominated "a newly-discovered Australian alkaloid."

THE WHEAT CROP.

SOUTH AUSTRALIA'S ACREAGE.

It is estimated that the area under wheat in South Australia this season is 3,192,381 acres, an increase of 350,361 acres upon the area sown last year. The present prospects are considered better than the average.

DISTRICT ITEMS.

LEETON.—The prospects for the ensuing season on the irrigation area are very high. All the crops are showing excellent promise, and, providing favourable weather continues, there will be a good fruit yield this season. The bacon factory at Yanco is to be opened on November 1. The pulping factory at Mirrool is to be enlarged, so as to cope with the coming season's crop of tomatoes. The cheese factory at Mirrool is to be opened at an early date.

MURRUMBURRAH.—A severe thunderstorm passed over the town and district on Monday evening, and about 155 points of rain were registered here. In some places the fall was much heavier. At Oxton Park, four miles distant, 225 points fell. Considerable damage to the streets of the municipality resulted. This is the best season experienced here for many years, and the hay and wheat crops are now assured.

CONTRACTOR AND OFFICERS CHARGED.

The hearing was continued yesterday in the High Court, in criminal jurisdiction, before Mr. Justice Isaacs and a jury of 12, of the charge of conspiracy preferred against Arthur Kidman, Major Frederick William Page, Major Arthur George O'Donnell, and Sergeant Edward Leslie in connection with certain contracts for the supply of stores to the military forces.

When Captain Archibald Wilson, Director of Equipment of the Commonwealth Military Forces, was called on for cross-examination, his Honor said that as far as his evidence had gone it could only be admitted against defendant O'Donnell.

Cross-examined by Mr. Lamb (for Kidman), witness said that he had instructions from the Minister for Defence to obtain certain papers. He went to O'Donnell's office, and the documents were readily supplied to him, and every facility was afforded him by that officer to make his investigations. The papers he saw were left in the office, but he took notes of them. He noticed from the papers that on several occasions increases had been made in the Sydney office, and he reported on them. He had never known of increases being granted in Melbourne without the approval of the Minister. The practice there, after a contract had been entered into, was to make a variation in a contract providing the circumstances warranted it. When in O'Donnell's office he investigated cases where increases were granted to Ashcroft, Kidman, Schneider, the State Bakery, and Langford, but he did not inquire into them in detail.

In reply to Mr. Pickburn (for Major Page), witness said that he had known Major Page since 1906, and he could say that his reputation was very good. Major Brown, the senior ordnance officer, had informed him that he had received very great assistance from Page, who had reorganised the department.

Arthur William Bean, Commonwealth Inspector of Stores, said that he came here in November last to make investigations, and made many visits to the Barracks. His investigations included a shipment of supplies by the steamer Eastern in November last.

Mr. Rolin (for the Crown): In the course of your investigations have you become familiar with the handwriting of the defendants?

The question was objected to by Mr. Lamb.

Mr. Bean (continuing) said that acting under power conferred by the War Precautions Act, he went to Kidman's office on February 22, accompanied by the Auditor-General, some clerks from the Audit Office, and police officials, and demanded the production of certain books and documents, which were handed to him by a clerk.

A number of the documents found in the office were put in as exhibits.

The case is part heard.

BARRIER WATER SUPPLY.

LONG PERIOD ASSURED.

As a result of the good rains which have fallen in the west, a report has been received from Broken Hill that the new reservoir constructed by the Government at Umberumberka has been filled, and the water is flowing over the waste weir. The reservoir now contains 3,000,000,000 gallons of water, which is equivalent to the ample supply for Broken Hill, both mines and city, for between four and five years, exclusive of the loss by evaporation.

BALKAN POLICIES.

Diplomatic strength and weakness could not be more clearly illustrated than by the course of events in the Balkans since the beginning of the war. The Allies have suffered through their lack of unity and the shortsightedness of some, if not of all, of them. They have gained through their advocacy of the claims of members of the same race to be united under the same flag, and of small nations to have an independent existence. The Central Powers have been weakened by their claims to a universal hegemony, which would reduce every other country in Europe to the status of a German vassal, and by the traditional attitude of Germans, Austrians, and Hungarians towards their Latin or Slav fellow-subjects. They have gained enormously by their unity of action, or, rather, by the willingness of each of the weaker partners in the alliance to subordinate itself to the German Government, and by the application of that method adopted by Bismarck in his resolution to express himself as a Bulgar in Sofia, a Serb in Belgrade, and as a Roumanian in Bucharest. The consistency of German policy is exemplified in the reigning houses of three of the States. It would have gained the same hold of Servia but for the act of barbarism which placed a native and a patriot king on the throne of a corrupt Austrian vassal. In Greece the throne is shared by a sister of the German Emperor; in Bulgaria the would-be Czar is an ex-Austrian officer of German descent; in Roumania the king is a member of the Hohenzollern clan, and the successor of a monarch who never forgot his training as an officer in the German army. Having these advantages, the German ambassadors have relied consistently on the reasoning so often used at the Russian Court. Though each of the Balkan States has a democratic form of government, they have urged the essential community of interest between an absolute and military nation and the army and monarchy of each of the Balkan States. They have not neglected commercial interests, in which their own bankers have acquired a considerable influence. But they have ignored, and have advised their friends to ignore, what passes in the Balkan States for public opinion. In Bulgaria they succeeded at the beginning of the year in establishing a state of siege, under which an Opposition can seldom express itself, and can scarcely have any practical effect. In Roumania, where the mass of the population has no interest in politics, they have succeeded in converting the head of the Government from an open friend of the Allies, determined to enlarge the bounds of his country into an avowed advocate of neutrality. In Greece they have not succeeded in keeping their friends in power. But, in league with the king and the army, they have succeeded in extorting from the new Prime Minister a declaration that he will not make the sacrifices necessary to reconstitute the Balkan League, and to make of Bulgaria an enemy of Turkey and an active friend of the Allies. We shall see within the next few weeks whether the mobilisation of the Bulgarian army and the disclosure of an agreement with Turkey will produce any change in Greek or Roumanian policy. Undoubtedly it has produced a change in the prospects of each of these States. While Bulgaria was still up for auction, a victory for the Central Powers meant an extension of their influence in the Balkans, and an end of the hopes of either of these States for an extension of territory, except at the expense of Russia. It now means something much more definite and more terrible. It means that whether as a vassal or not, among the Balkan States Bulgaria will be all powerful. Greece will no longer be able to decide whether she will give up Kavalla and its hinterland in exchange for a province in the Levant. Kavalla will be taken from her by Bulgaria, and Salonica by Turkey. Bulgaria will not be satisfied with that portion of Macedonia which at present is yielding its best soldiers to the Servian army. She will want a better outlet on the Black Sea, and she will get it at the expense of Roumania. The territory on the Danube, which was gained by a bloodless victory in the second Balkan war, will be taken back, and the Roumanian people will be without the district which has been long desired as a protection for their best commercial port.

No doubt, the fears which this prospect must arouse have been sedulously answered by the German envoys. Roumania especially has been warned against the consequences of a Russian victory. Her merchants have been assured that Russia in control of the Dardanelles would hamper their exports of corn and oil in favour of their own wheat ships from Odessa, and their oil from Batum. Their nationalists have been promised that a Russian defeat would give them the province of Bukovina, with the rich town of Czernowitz, and a quarter of a million Latin inhabitants, together with a slice of Austrian territory. If anything is clear in this maze of diplomacy, it is that this imaginary picture of Russian designs has had some effect on Roumanian policy. At the outset of the war the Government and the Opposition seemed united in their decision to join the Allies. The agitation for union with the Latin subjects of Hungary was stimulated by the present Ministry, in spite of the modification of their most oppressive regulations by the Hungarian. It was not until the success of the Russian invasion seemed assured, and speakers in the Duma laid claim to Constantinople, that we were told that the agitation had come to an end. It must be remembered that irredentism is not the same thing in Roumania as in Italy. It has not inspired a great literature nor survived a war of liberation. It cannot move public opinion in a country in which wealth and power are in the hands of a few, as it moved the opinion of democratic Italy. Between Italy and Roumania there is, however, a bond of sympathy founded on a motive more material than national sentiment. They are both vitally interested in keeping the Balkans free from Austrian control. After the signature of the Treaty of Bucharest, Austria was only prevented from attacking Servia by the remonstrance of Signor Giolitti. But before the second Balkan war had begun, Austria had ordered Roumania not to take part in it, and had been answered by an emphatic refusal. The fact is the more important when we remember that a few years before Austria had been united to Roumania by a military convention, that it was followed by a visit of the then Crown Prince to Petrograd, and by a return visit of the Czar to King Carol at Constanza. Unfortunately the Minister who initiated this change of policy is not now in office. His successor has declared that he will be influenced by nothing but the material interests of his country. He will make no useless sacrifices for irredentism, nor will he be guided by the traditional sympathy of his people with the French. He has, however, steadfastly adhered to his declaration that Roumania cannot see Servia crushed. That declaration, repeated as it has been by the Greek Ministers, explains the Servian statement that a German invasion, terrible as it would be to them, would be a blessing to the Allies, and it may explain the statement of the Bulgarian Premier that his armed neutrality is intended only for the protection of his own country.

SPORT OR WAR?

In yesterday's "Herald" appeared a report of the proceedings of the Baptist Union Conference, and among the resolutions carried was one expressing deep indignation that at this crisis the continuance of boxing contests, horse-racing, and like sports should be permitted. In the same issue two letters were printed from Australian soldiers who have been fighting for us in Gallipoli. "We must win for the sake of all we hold most dear," writes Private H. Westman, formerly of Ashfield. "I daresay Jim, George, and a few of the boys have enlisted since I left. If not, 'rub it in,' Peter. They will all be wanted." And Signaller J. H. Solomon writes to his people at Kensington: "Look here, dear parents, if only I could write down what I really think, and what the other men think also, you would be able to understand how much contempt and how little respect we have for these fellows who shirk their duty. . . . What are the men doing?" We do not wonder that these men at the front write strongly on the subject. While they are engaged in this life and death struggle over there thousands of young men who ought to enlist and follow them still stay at home—thousands of men who have no real ties to keep them here. Out at the Royal Agricultural Ground—as at Liverpool, Holdsworthy, and other camps—men who have heard the call and answered it are training for the front, anxious to get away and play their part in the war of nations, anxious to lend a helping hand to their brothers in Gallipoli. But on the sports ground adjoining thousands of men still gather to see a football match. "We are glad to be here," said a soldier on the Agricultural Ground the other day, "but it does hurt to hear twenty thousand men for whose liberties we are ready to lay down our lives cheering a football game next door!" It hurts every sane and thinking person in the community. It is a national disgrace. Can we wonder, then, that the Baptists pass their resolution? In the words of their new president, Mr. Packer, the Christian public represents the moral conscience, and our moral conscience sadly needs awakening. This resolution, and other similar resolutions that have been carried by the Churches, are not to be taken as an attack on healthy forms of sport and amusement, concerning which a great deal of nonsense has been spoken and written. Healthy sport is a good thing at all times, and there is no valid reason why it should cease during war time. Exercise of this kind helps men to keep their minds and bodies sound, whether it be golf, or tennis, or football, and there is little good to be gained by asking men who are accustomed to taking healthy bodily exercise on a Saturday afternoon to stay at home and indulge in sad reflections about the war, or walk the streets pulling long faces—the men, that is, who for good reasons are unable to take part in the war. Duty keeps many of these men here. Many others are to be numbered among the band of men who have offered their services to their country and have been rejected because of their inability to meet all the requirements of the military authorities. The times are out of joint, and the situation is serious, but neither hysteria nor fanaticism will help us. The point we desire to make is that there is a vast difference between those men who indulge in healthy sport and those others who are merely spectators. A well-trained athlete, it has been well said, is a half-trained soldier; and Mr. Ashmead Bartlett has declared that only a race trained as athletes could have performed those feats which have won such a glorious name for the Australian soldiers.

It is time for plain words. The mover of the Baptist Union resolution described the boxing exhibitions which are going on week after week as humiliating and revolting to the feelings; and answering the claim that boxing is a noble art that ought to be encouraged, he reminded us that "there was no more noble art at the present time than fighting for the Empire's glorious cause." Who will dare gainsay him? And another speaker said that he did not object so much to the actual boxing and horseracing as to the stolid indifference to the fate of the Empire of so many of the young men who patronised them. It is a melancholy fact, and one that it is no use disguising, that a very large proportion of the men who pay their money to see such sport give no serious thought to the great need of the moment, the tremendous clash of nations in which, for all their indifference, they are vitally concerned. Well might our brave lads in the trenches remind us of the moral of a famous fable—"What's sport to you is death to us!" Every single, able-bodied man is needed at the front to-day. There is only one thing that matters, and that is that we bend all our energies to the great task we have in hand and work unceasingly for victory. It is a giant task, and it calls for giant measures. Burden will be heaped on burden until the war ends; we must shrink from no sacrifice, however great it be—even to the last man and the last shilling. Men, munitions, and money—all must be found. As far as we can give men, we must give them. As far as we can help in the manufacture of munitions, we must help. As far as we can give of our wealth, we must give with a will. We may come out of this war a comparatively poor nation, but there must be only one end. No patched-up peace will be acceptable to us. As a civilised and Christian nation we shall fail in our duty to ourselves and to humanity at large if we accept any peace that would place it in the power of Germany to begin the struggle all over again. We owe it to our lads who have died fighting for the great cause that we put the seal upon what they have so nobly begun. If the shutting up of boxing stadiums will help to bring that about—by helping to turn the thoughts of now thoughtless men to the great issue before us—let them be shut up. If the stopping of horseracing while the war lasts will help to bring the end of the war nearer, let it be stopped. If the closing of hotels at 9 o'clock, or even 6 o'clock, will, as we believe, give us more efficient soldiers, then let them be closed. If there are obstacles in the way they must be removed. Are there vested interests?—they must go. The interests of the nation are of more account than the freedom of the individual or of any set of individuals. That solemn hour that Lord Kitchener told us a few short months ago was approaching is now here, and we have got to realise it. Nothing else counts. We have great Allies, but we must learn to rely, not on others, but on ourselves—we must realise "that in ourselves our safety must be sought." The die is cast, and we cannot go back; nor would we if we could. Whatever the consequences, we are going through with our work. We are fighting in the world's great stadium. The contestants are Civilisation and Freedom on the one hand, and Militarism and Barbarism on the other. We have stripped gloves in defence of our hearths and homes against the common enemy, and it is a fight to a finish. We have mounted the war steed, and must win. Germany, too, is determined to win. Only one side can win this war; and, "for the sake of all we hold most dear" we must win it or for ever hide our heads in shame.

AN INSULTING INTERJECTION.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Will you permit me to subscribe myself a fanatic, too?—Mr. Fitzgerald's choice term. A year ago I could not claim the honour of being one. I saw wine on my dinner table daily, and felt no stirrings of reproach. I even once, out of sheer thoughtlessness, sanctioned the purchase of some brewery shares. I was, in short, one of the comfortable multitude who took life in this respect as it came, and never stayed to think—thinking is always a painful process. And I still am of the opinion that a Golden Age will see, not the total prohibition of the soured temperance advocate, but light, sound wines, lightly taken. If ever I receive the prospectus of a company that is setting out to provide open-air drinking gardens, where men may have a glass of wine or a beer that is above fear and above reproach, and may smoke and discuss the day's doings in comradely fashion, and have their wives and children with them if they like, and hear good music and see good pictures, I shall promptly take as many shares as I can afford. For I know better than I know most things that human nature is a tangled, rampageous wild, and not a paved garden that can be planted round, as the idealists dream, with clipped and decorous hedges. But now I am become a fanatic—a burning fanatic!

We are at war. We are at war, and it is not absolutely certain that we are going to win. A few months ago one would have been torn limb from limb for saying such a thing; but one is just permitted to say it now. We are at war, and unless we strain every fibre of our being we shall become that abject, that unspeakable, that unthinkable thing—a conquered nation. We are at war; and a great fibre of us that might bear a tremendous strain if employed is allowed to drag in the dust, loose, unrecognised, actively harmful to us.

Lloyd George, over there in the heart of things, his finger on the very pulse of the war, delivers himself, not of a hasty utterance, but of a deliberate and terrible one—"We have more to fear from alcohol," he says, "than from the German submarines."

But when, here in Australia, any of the thinkers or single-minded ones of the community voice the same conviction, one or other of the rulers that have been put to rule over us in Macquarie-street rises up and says it is but the cry of the temperance crank using the opportunity of a great war to air his particular hobby. It is the cry of "a peculiar kind of fanatic" says a member of the Government. Do Mr. Holman and his Ministers realise that at the present moment the eyes of some hundreds of thousands of such peculiar kind of fanatics, both men and women, are turned piercingly upon them where they sit in the security of their circles of comfortable leather chairs? That hundreds of thousands of such fanatics are waiting with more and more impatience, and less and less confidence, for them to rise to this high occasion and act, not as petty politicians with votes to be cringed for, but as men who have the awful responsibility of being at the helm at the moment when the ship of State is riding in the teeth of a hurricane that any minute may swamp her?

Sir, as one of the hundreds of thousands of fanatics, I demand that the obstacles be cleared away from the feet of the lion-hearted soldiers who are going out to defend us. This early closing of the bars must come, and our Augean stables be in every way new cleansed. Sir, if our rulers sit any longer, supine and contemptuous in Macquarie-street, I and my fellow-fanatics will be ashamed to be living in New South Wales. I am, etc.,

ETHEL TURNER.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—The Hon. J. D. Fitzgerald is to be congratulated on the stand he took at the Town Hall meeting, and afterward in the columns of the "Herald" concerning the insulting interjection of Mr. Creagh. The interjector qualified his remarks the following day, and yesterday denies, but later in the same letter is evidently uncertain, for he writes: "I may have said." A colleague of his (Mr. Marion), in support, quotes certain authorities, more or less illustrious, as greater than Mr. Fitzgerald. Far greater authorities could be quoted on the other side, viz., William Pitt, Nelson, Napoleon, Marlborough, Byron, King Edward VII., and many others. Few of the great men, military or political, in Britain or Australia have been advanced temperance reformers; they have all drunk according to their desires. The British soldier has ever been a drinker, the "Tommy" for his beer and "half and half," the Irishman for his stout or whisky, and the Scotchman for his whisky. They are and always will be the best fighters in the world, and why should they be hampered and insulted continually by fanatics? In the present war the brave men in Flanders and Gallipoli often refer to their gratitude for the rum ration, and last winter letters to the British press from the trenches resented the efforts of the anti-liquor brigade to stop supplies. The only army compelled to go without alcohol in any form—the Russians—have so far suffered more reverses than any other, either on the side of the Allies or against them. Their compulsory abstinence has evidently not helped them much. Mr. Lloyd George's fulminations "at home" have incensed workers, soldiers, and his colleagues, and in many ways he has had to climb down.

As Mr. Fitzgerald states "to help on their peculiar type of fanaticism," these people will belittle the brave men going to the front, who mostly drink moderately, and a small percentage occasionally get "over the odds," but who will fight none the worse when face to the foe, than their forbears 100 years ago did in France and the Peninsula, who, if contemporary chroniclers write truly, practised and cared little for anti-liquor principles. The common sense of both Parliament and people may be trusted to frustrate this knavish seizing of what they consider a golden opportunity to help on their "peculiar type of fanaticism," by injuring the reputation of men braver than themselves.

I am, etc., R. H. RICHARDS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—The general public care nothing as to what particular form an interjection took at the universal service meeting. Probably Mr. Creagh and Professor Peden and Dr. Arthur and Mr. Fitzgerald are quite sincere in the various renditions of the interjection. But what is important is this, the fact that every day of the week, and particularly Sundays, drunken soldiers may be seen reeling about our streets. If Mr. Fitzgerald and his Ministry think fit, they could help this country against the Germans by attending to the alcohol curse. If they do this they will be contributing to public safety and efficiency ten times more than by their oratory.

I am, etc., CYNIC.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—My attention has been called to the controversy between the Hon. J. D. Fitzgerald and Mr. W. D. B. Creagh on the above subject. I was present at the meeting in question, and can honestly state that the words used by Mr. W. D. B. Creagh were: "Have you seen any drunken soldiers," and the hon. gentleman immediately became excited, and misinterpreted the interjection, and a number of the audience howled Mr. Creagh down with the cry of "Put him out." I am a perfect stranger to both gentlemen, and it is useless for anyone to contend that the number of drunken soldiers in our city is very small. On Friday last I counted ten drunken soldiers in George-street between Liverpool-street and the Haymarket, two of whom were in the custody of the police. There is not a day passes without one passes my business premises. I think it is time some action should be taken by the authorities in preventing drink being supplied to soldiers in the King's uniform.

I am, etc., E. A. COOPER.

THE WOUNDED IN FRANCE.

A correspondent of the "Figaro" has recently sent his newspaper a description of the extraordinary care with which the municipalities of France are providing for the wounded, so that as far as may be they may assist in helping their country to recover from its wounds when the war is over, and may themselves lead lives full of usefulness and interest. He was particularly struck with the work carried on at Lyons, under the supervision of the Mayor, Mons. Herlot. We give some extracts from his article:—

"A volume might be written, and I hope it will be, on the work, civil and military, national and municipal, to which the town of Lyons has devoted itself during the past year. A greater part of it is collected in the Town Hall, of which the municipal services occupy the ground floor, the reception rooms and the private apartments being placed above them. At present these apartments are not occupied by the Mayor, who lives in the city in his professorial attic. His apartments and reception rooms have for a whole year now been given up to workers in connection with the war. They constitute, he says, the city of war. Down below, in the municipal rooms, is the city of peace. Here are the shops where the wives of soldiers on active service come to seek for the help that is most useful to them, and for engagements that they can carry out in the workshops of their ward. Here, too, is the office devoted to prisoners of war, where men and women with minute care prepare presents to be sent to the sons of their province, a service which is conducted with admirable accuracy and detail. In another room a professor of law conducts an information bureau in conjunction with Geneva and Paris, thanks to which many families torn asunder by the war have been reunited through the searches, which are models of simplicity and precision. I have already spoken of the workrooms of the ward. The organisation of home work has been taken in hand with no less care. I would call special attention to the workrooms in which feminine activity has been at work—the rooms which the municipality has put at the disposal of private and State initiative, and where, in the heat of the furnaces and to the sound of moving hammers, 4000 workmen and 400 women carry out the splendid and infernal factory of death at the rate of 10,000 shells a day. But the greatest thing at Lyons is the school for the wounded. At Paris we have only recently solved the problem of the re-education of men injured by war. At Lyons it was solved eight months ago. On November 30, on the proposal of the Mayor, the municipal council approved of the creation of a school for wounded soldiers. Lyons has a considerable private estate. This great town is very rich, and unassuming besides. It opened for this work a picturesque old house, which was for the time out of use, fitted, repaired, and furnished it for the first trades which were to be taught. It received great assistance from the Director of Public Health of the province, who placed the services of all his staff at the disposal of the municipality. On December 16 the institute opened its doors, and 12 soldiers were installed there. The school has now 80 pupils, divided into classes. One class is for accountants and for stenographers; another class is for woodworkers, another for toymakers, another for boxmakers. Typewriting lessons are keenly followed. I saw one pupil at work showing remarkable skill. He worked the machine with the one finger left on his right hand. At the lathe, at the workshops, and in the toy shops one is struck with the ease with which these poor wounded men have learnt to use their left hand with most marvellous skill. The toy shop has had an enormous success. The teacher has already received orders to the amount of 5000 francs. The toys consist, as a rule, of carvings executed by a mechanical saw, of figures painted or suitable for stencilling, completed so that the details may be fitted into each, or set with hand-painted ornaments in relief. These works are simple and charming, and they mark the beginning of an industry which will flourish among us. The Germans used to excel in it. It is moving to me to think that, after the war, the soldiers will still be our avengers, and that the wounded are even now preparing for the task. But that is not all. It is necessary to help men who have lost their legs to learn other and more sedentary trades. The most profitable are those of the cobbler and the tailor. They can be practised in the smallest room, and with the least expense. The establishment of shops for cobblers and tailors was soon decided on, and as there was no room in the Town Hall, the council had to open another school for the wounded. On the 1st May the school was opened. Seventy soldiers occupy it at present. It is fitted up on the outskirts of the town, almost in the country, on the road to Tourvielle, in a charming, almost unused, estate. I have already said that Lyons owns real estate with which it does not know what to do. Happy town! This vast country house with its characteristically southern appearance, its flat roof, and its grey tiles, gives accommodation to six cobblers and six tailors, who are already skilled workmen. I forgot the carpenters' shop, where 12 apprentices are already hard at it, and can make napkin rings, charming and simple in appearance. But I do not forget the garden.

The immense garden at Tourvielle, where I saw a sight at once admirable and touching—the wounded tending flowers. They came to Lyons like the rest to learn a trade, and there they saw the soil, the friendly soil, on which they had worked before becoming soldiers. That was too much for them. They came back to her, and she has received them again. I saw, too, at Tourvielle a man whose right leg had been amputated working furiously with a pick, which at each blow sank into the soft earth. I saw a one-armed man planting lettuces, another digging with a spade, and each time he dug his spade into the ground he bent his knees, and, having only his right hand to lift it out, balanced himself as he tore the iron from the soil. And he still preferred to garden in this way rather than to learn to make a waistcoat. The remarkable fact about the school is the air of good humour and good manner which reigns throughout the two houses. The teacher is fond of his pupils because he has begun by pitying them; the pupil is fond of his teacher because he feels that he has gained much for him. The school is neither a prison nor a barracks, but a pleasant retreat where discipline is made as easy as possible. No one is compelled to stay there. When the soldiers thoroughly know the trade which will yield them a living they may return to their homes, and if they wish to find an opening outside the school, the school will seek one for them. Meanwhile it helps in all their expenses, which are far more than the total of the pay set aside for them, and besides allows them to keep all that they may have earned as pupils. These wounded men not only learn to work. The school gives them good habits. They live in order and cleanliness under the supervision of kindly nurses, who preside most delightfully over the house. I have seen the men leave work for lunch. Every man went to wash his hands. The dormitories of our largest schools are not better kept than theirs. What has been formed there is an aristocracy of labour. When in a fortnight's time new rooms are formed the school will receive 50 more pupils. They are discussing the formation of a school of photography and another of orthopedy. When asked by a citizen of Lyons the other day why he did not institute singing classes and make soldiers into choristers, M. Herlot did not reply, except by admitting that it is a profitable trade. The Mayor is no faddist. He has room for everything. He will never say no.

AUSTRALIA DAY.

DISTRIBUTION OF FUNDS.

YESTERDAY'S CONFERENCE.

The conference between the committee representing the Australia Day Fund Committee and the Red Cross Society took place yesterday at the Treasury Buildings under the presidency of the Premier. The object was to devise a workable scheme for the distribution of the Australia Day Fund.

Mr. Ashton, M.L.C., put forward on behalf of the Red Cross Committee a set of proposals, which were favourably received, but no decision was arrived at. Further consideration will be given to the proposals at the next meeting of the conference.

POSTAL DEPARTMENT.

MR. SPENCE'S ECONOMIES.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The Postmaster-General (Mr. Spence) stated to-day that a number of reforms in connection with his department had been effected without fuss. During the last few days a saving of £3000 a year was made by the discontinuance of the midday letter delivery in the suburbs alone, and economy was being effected in a number of other directions.

THE EAST.

FIERCE FIGHTING.

ENEMY'S HEAVY LOSS.

GALLIPOLI.

ALLIED BOMBARDMENT.

A Petrograd communique says that the Russians took the offensive north-west of Dubno and occupied Volnitza. They captured 1400 prisoners.

An unofficial Petrograd message declares that the withdrawal of the Russians from the Vilna position has been completed. The Germans are said to have lost 250,000.

Athens advices state that Allied batteries carried out a violent bombardment of the Anafarta positions. The message adds that the heights may be occupied without the necessity of a general assault.

It is reported from Paris that 2000 German officers in Syria are training an army for the purpose of attacking Egypt in mid-November.

There are indications, according to an Athens message, that Bulgaria's mobilisation is due to the fears of German violation of her territory.

Allied airmen dropped bombs on Bruges Harbour (13 miles east of Ostend). The factory was destroyed.

Fishermen observed a German cruiser disappear off Falsterbo (on the Swedish coast). It is believed she was torpedoed.

DARDANELLES.

ANAFARTA POSITIONS.

A BOMBARDMENT.

LONDON, Sept. 23.

It is reported from Athens that Allied batteries carried out a violent bombardment of the Anafarta position. The heights may be occupied without the necessity of a general assault.

LIFE IN CONSTANTINOPLE.

A Swiss who has returned from Constantinople declares that life there has become intolerable. All Christians, except Germans have been disarmed, and are completely terrorised. Necessaries are dear, and there is an entire absence of electricity, gas, and candles. Crowds at the bakeries fight for bread. The police openly sell to the Turks Armenian orphans of both sexes as slaves, the prices ranging from 6s 8d to 9s 6d, well-conditioned girls being rather dearer. The Turks have detained four hundred French of both sexes and a large number of Russians and British subjects in Damascus.

EGYPT.

SECOND EXPEDITION.

GERMANS TRAINING AN ARMY.

According to the "Journal des Debats," (Paris) 2000 German officers in Syria are training an army which is armed with new rifles, and which is intended as the second expedition to Egypt in mid-November.

The Turks have constructed a new railway to the starting-point in Bir es Seba (Palestine, 27 miles south-east of Ghuzzeh), on the edge of the desert. Guns and ammunition are steadily pouring in. Eight hundred cavalry are engaged as scouts.

GERMAN CRUISER.

SUNK ON SWEDISH COAST.

It is reported from Copenhagen that fishermen at Holtug observed a German cruiser off Falsterbo (on the Swedish coast, 15 miles south-west of Malmo) disappear in a column of water caused by an explosion. It is believed the cruiser was torpedoed.

STARVING BELGIANS.

1,500,000 PERSONS DESTITUTE.

The Lord Mayor has made an earnest appeal to the City of London for funds to assist the Belgians. In Belgium there are over 1,500,000 persons utterly destitute. Their only escape from destitution is to work upon munitions for Germany, but they prefer hunger or death to assisting the enemy.

The feeding of 1,500,000 people at fivepence a day costs £218,000 weekly. No doubt, if food is not sent the Germans will allow the Belgians to starve and will shoot them down if hunger riots break out.

THE BALKANS.

BULGARIA.

FEARS GERMAN VIOLATION OF TERRITORY.

AN ATHENS REPORT.

LONDON, Sept. 23.

The secretary to the Bulgarian Legation in London in the course of an interview said: Up to now we have been only civilians in an armed European camp. Roumania and Greece have been mobilised for a considerable time. Switzerland is even under arms. Therefore, there is nothing astonishing in Bulgaria following suit. Why should mobilisation mean a change of national policy? I am not prepared to prophesy, as any prophecy might be changed by unexpected events. We must wait and see.

The decree of Sofia to mobilise 27 classes has caused considerable excitement in Greece.

A message from Athens states that indications point to the fact that Bulgaria's mobilisation is due to the fears of German violation of her territory, as reported on August 26.

MUSSULMAN PANIC.

It is reported from Salonika that there is a panic among the Mussulman population owing to Karagach and other districts having been transferred to Bulgaria. Numbers have taken refuge in Adrianople, which is also in a state of panic. Many families, despite the Vali's exhortations, are packing their valuables and hastening to Constantinople.

SUBMARINE WAR.

AMERICAN VESSELS

TO BE WARNED BEFORE BEING TORPEDOED.

A Washington message states that the German Note regarding the William P. Frye case informs the United States that orders have been issued that submarines are not to destroy American merchantmen loaded with conditional contraband, even when international law sanctions it, but to permit merchantmen to continue their voyage, unless it is possible to take them to a German port. American vessels with contraband may be destroyed, but the passengers and crew are to be placed in safety before the vessel is sunk. Germany agrees with the American proposal that experts should determine the damages payable to shipowners, and suggests that the matter of the interpretation of Treaty 1828 be submitted to the arbitration of the Hague.

The State Department regards Germany's undertaking as insuring American vessels against attack without warning. Germany, however, reserves the right to destroy vessels carrying absolute contraband wherever such destruction is permissible under the provisions of the Declaration of London.

TWO STEAMERS SUNK.

The Swedish steamer Forsvik (1107 tons) has been sunk. The crew were saved.

The British steamer Groningen (988 tons) has been blown up. One of the crew perished, and several members of the crew were wounded.

BRITISH BUDGET.

LABOUR PARTY'S APPROVAL.

LONDON, Sept. 23.

The debate on the Budget was resumed in the House of Commons to-day.

Mr. G. N. Barnes, on behalf of the Labour party, approved of Mr. McKenna's proposals, in view of the special circumstances. He assumed the tax on imported goods was merely a financial expedient, and was devoid of political significance. His party was prepared to support the Government on any Budget that would help to prosecute the war to a successful issue. He regretted that the lower exemption limit had been increased. The revenue they would receive therefrom would not be proportionate to the hardship inflicted on the earners of £200 yearly. The Labour party welcomed the taxation of war profits. The Government should have assumed control of some of these industries long ago. Now they were compounding a felony by sharing the swag. The Labour party recommended as an alternative to appropriate 80 per cent. of the war profits. His party protested against the additional taxation of £16,000,000 levied upon the very poor. The abolition of the half-penny postage was perhaps the greatest blot in the Budget.

WILLINGNESS TO PAY.

Sir Alfred Mond (Liberal) said it was folly to tell the members of the House of Commons that they were compelled to scrap the existing fiscal system in order to develop the exports, when a large amount of the export trade was lost through unnecessary and foolish restrictions and the delay in supplying licenses. The motor car duty meant a loss of £16,000,000 in capital, and 30,000 persons would be thrown out of employment.

Mr. McKenna (Chancellor of the Exchequer) said the taxation of imports did not compromise the fiscal principle. The duties had been introduced avowedly to raise revenue and to limit unnecessary luxuries. They were compelled to abandon theory owing to special war circumstances. He never knew a country like Britain for willingness to pay, and did not think there had been such a country in history. There was an overwhelmingly strong case for the sugar tax. The best test was the greatly increased consumption of sweets. The tea tax was justified on the principle of obtaining the money from as many contributors as possible.

The tobacco-makers announce that penny a packet cigarettes will contain four instead of five. Tobacco intended for the troops will not be taxed. Two shillings' worth for the troops costs sixpence. It is expected that the Government will abandon or modify the abolition of half-penny postage.

A meeting of Radicals urged the Government to tax land values.

EASTERN FRONT.

VILNA RETREAT.

HEAVY GERMAN LOSS.

RUSSIAN OFFENSIVE NEAR DUBNO.

LONDON, Sept. 24.

A Russian communique states:—We took the offensive north-west of Dubno, and occupied Volnitza. We took 1400 prisoners.

It is announced from Petrograd that the withdrawal of the Russians from the Vilna position has been completed, the Germans losing 250,000.

THE KAISER'S ENERGY.

The "Russkoye Slowo," a Petrograd newspaper, says the Kaiser is displaying remarkable energy, and is attending meetings of the Generals everywhere. At night he reviews the troops. He arrived at Novo Georgievsk six hours after the capture. After each big fight he makes a personal valuation of the victory, and the acts of the commanders, and then dismisses untalented or hesitating commanders for the smallest peccadillos. When attempts are made to gloss over faults by the remark "they are old servants," the Kaiser retorts: "They won't be employed any longer. I'm sorry such good-for-nothing fellows have been employed so long." Once, in dismissing certain commanders, he added: "They are only fit for firelogs."

ENEMY REPORTS.

A German communique says:—General von Hindenburg's fighting south-west of Lennewaden, on the Dwina, has not concluded. We penetrated the Russian advanced positions west of Dvinsk, capturing 2000 prisoners. We have broken the Russian resistance from the north of Osmiana to the east of Subotniki (about 18 miles south of Osmiana). Our pursuing troops captured 1000 prisoners.

CONCENTRATES.

PRIZE COURT APPLICATION.

LONDON, Sept. 24.

In the Prize Court, the Crown is claiming condemnation of the Australian concentrates aboard the steamer Manningtry.

Mr. F. E. Smith, K.C. (for the Crown), said there were claims by the Union Bank of Australia, the Zinc Corporation, Compagnie des Minerais (Liege), Mertons, Vivian, Younger, and Bond, and the Australian Metal Company.

The Union Bank claims three parcels of zinc as pledges, but the claim is barred by the decision in the Odessa case.

The Judge asserted that he passed sentence of condemnation on three parcels on the ground that they belonged to Hirsch and Sohn, of Halberstadt.

Mr. Smith, continuing, said the Metallgesellschaft of Frankfurt chartered the Manningtry, but three other firms were under the Metallgesellschaft's influence. Mertons, with intimate German commitments, and of German origin, asked the Court's assistance to set up a partnership in a business mainly carried on in the enemy's country.

Mr. Maurice Hill, K.C., on behalf of the claimants, said that Merton was born in Germany, of English parents, and carried on the business for 20 years before the Metallgesellschaft was formed in Germany. Merton was interested in this, but it was wholly misleading to represent the concern as an octopus spreading its tentacles world-wide. The majority of Merton's shareholders were British. All except two of the directors were British. Two of the partners in Younger's were British, and 20,700 out of 50,000 shares in the Australian Metal Company were German owned. Four directors were German out of seven. Sixty per cent. of the shareholders in the Compagnie Des Minerais were German, and the rest Franco-Belgian.

The case was adjourned. There are five similar cases pending. Over £1,000,000 is involved.

MUNITIONS.

AMERICAN SULPHURIC ACID.

The "Globe," in connection with the purchase of sulphuric acid in America for the Government, urges a parliamentary inquiry.

The journal declares that the firm of C. Tennant and Sons was commissioned to purchase acid, but no attempt was made to obtain acid in England. A heavy leakage resulted through a shipment of American acid being sent in iron drums instead of earthenware carboys, and the acid damaged two transporting ships.

WAR PENSIONS BILL.

GOVERNMENT DEFEATED IN LORDS.

The Government has sustained a defeat in the House of Lords on the War Pensions Bill. Lord Devonport's amendment eliminating the Royal Patriotic Fund Corporation from the committee administering war pensions was carried by 35 votes to 26. It is expected that the House of Commons will reject the amendment, because it upsets the feature of the scheme.

MISCELLANEOUS ITEMS.

In the House of Commons the Prime Minister, Mr. Asquith, in reply to Mr. Bellairs, M.P. for Maidment, said it was not proposed to reduce the number of members in the British Cabinet.

New York newspapers, commenting on the Archibald case, hotly resent Captain von Papen's description "idiotic Yankees," considering that the average American's intelligence is at least as high as the German.

Mr. Archibald continues to protest that he is a scapegoat, but record proves that he was a persona grata with the Teutonic Powers.

In Washington it is intimated that Captain von Papen's prospects of future usefulness have been destroyed, particularly as it is not the first time that German attaches have been charged with violating United States hospitality.

There is much discussion over the terms of the order forbidding treating in London. The order has not yet been published, but if it is similar to that in other munition areas a man is not allowed to pay for his wife's refreshment unless it is part of a meal. Contravention involves a maximum of six months' hard labour or a fine of £500.

Mr. McKenna (Chancellor of the Exchequer) admitted that there was no authority to interfere with clearances, but he would shortly ask the House of Commons to approve of the Customs order.

[A cable message dated London September 11 stated:—A Customs order has been issued, directing that tea, wine, and spirit merchants be not allowed to clear from bond more than the daily average of the last three months by clearances of tea and tobacco. Recently there has been abnormal clearances in anticipation of further taxation.]

AIR RAID.

LONDON BOMBED.

ZEPPELIN COMMANDER'S STORY

LONDON, Sept. 24.

The New York "World" publishes a description of an air raid on London by Zeppelin-Commander Mathy. He explains that the most important guide is the silver surface of the Thames. "The London glow is visible for a distance of thirty-seven miles. The English can never eradicate the Thames, from which we can always pick up any point of London. Although darkened, there is sufficient glow to enable straight steering until the city is outlined still and silent below. The darkest spots stood out in contrast to the blue lights. The other portions were mostly residential. We were after the darker spots. Searchlights suddenly flashed as if the dead city had come to life. We were waving our arms around the sky and sending out feelers for danger which was threatening. Our height made impossible effective anti-aircraft range-finding. There was military justification for the bombing of a battery screened near Saint Paul's, but we abstained, not desiring to damage the cathedral. We endeavoured to bomb the Tower Bridge with uncertain result. We never encountered an aeroplane, but British anti-craft gunners were always ready."

Commander Mathy narrates that another Zeppelin accompanied him. When nearing England the crew ate something and took pulls at thermos bottles containing coffee and tea, but nothing stronger. "The Zeppelin crews are teetotal. They want clear heads and steady nerves. Then we went higher to prevent the motors disclosing our presence over-early. The men went to the guns which fight off the aeroplanes. A lieutenant went to the apparatus which releases the bombs according to my orders from the bridge or the front of the gondola. It was a clear, moonless night. The distances were illusive, and it was difficult to find range, but the instruments told us the exact height."

IMPRESSIVE PICTURE.

"Our motors and propellers soon revealed our presence. First one, then another of those ribbons shot out from the glaring eye-like searchlights, and picked us up. Later, little flashes of fire burst from the black background, and there was the sound of guns. It was a beautiful and impressive picture from above, and probably equally interesting below, with the greyish dim outline of the Zeppelins gliding through the waving ribbons of light, and the shrapnel clouds which hung thickly, but we had no time to admire, for we knew that any moment we might be plunging below a shapeless mass of wreckage and unrecognisable bodies.

"I picked up Saint Paul's, where there was a searchlight, and laid a course for the Bank of England. When above the bank I shouted through the speaking tube to the lieutenant to fire slowly. Mingling with the thunder and vivid flashes from the guns came explosions and bursts of flame, due to our bombs. We dropped several on Holborn Viaduct. From the bank we went to the Tower. I believe the bombing of Towerbridge was successful. Flashes from the Tower of London showed the guns there, as I observed in a previous attack. Arriving directly over Liverpool-street Station I shouted down the tube 'rapid fire.' The lieutenant rained down bombs, and I could see they hit well, and apparently caused great damage. Flames burst from several places.

"Having dropped all our bombs I turned the airship homewards. Despite the bombardment we were not hit. Our main attack lasted ten minutes. We finished at 11 o'clock, the Zeppelin ascending and descending until we found a favourable wind, when we made a quick return."

"LEARNING FAST."

Commander Mathy, who is 34 years of age, formerly commanded a destroyer. The voyage of which he spoke was his hundredth in a Zeppelin, including several to England. He states there is not an officer or man in the aerial fleet who does not feel deeply when he learns that women or children have been killed. He would rather fight aboard a torpedoer than attack a city from the air. The chief impression in the air is the speed and the intense cold when 3000 to 5000 feet up.

Asked what height the Zeppelin had reached when he bombed London, Commander Mathy refused "to give the English the range. They are doing well enough and learning fast. If Mr. Balfour had stood by my side, and seen the flashing guns, he would not have denied that London was a defended city?"

NUMEROUS UNTRUTHS.

The Press Bureau passes without comment numerous untruths, notably that there was a battery under Saint Paul's. The statement can only be characterised as a falsehood, invented with the purpose of excusing what the raiders are attempting to do.

OUR WOUNDED.

D.C. MEDALS.

PRESENTED BY SIR G. REID.

LONDON, Sept. 23.

Sir George Reid (High Commissioner for Australia), Lady Reid, the Countess of Sheffield, and Mrs. Leake attended Harefield Hospital this afternoon. The wounded Australians vigorously cheered them on arrival. All able walked, and others were wheeled to a crowded ceremony, at which Sir George Reid presented Distinguished Conduct Medals to Privates Cowan and Humberstone, Sergeant Horswell, and Lance-corporals Cawley, Gay, and Maher.

Sir George Reid, addressing the recipients, who were lined up, said: You will show yourselves greatest if these honours leave you the same modest unpretending manly fellows you were before. You must be proud of the interest the King and Queen have shown in your work. The other day I wrote to his Majesty the King telling him regarding Harefield, and within four hours of receiving the letter their Majesties visited the hospital. Queen Alexandra has expressed to me her admiration of the Australians, and when I was recently at Sir John French's headquarters the Prince of Wales called on me to personally express his appreciation of the efforts of the Australians. I do not believe in the fellow who won't fight for his country, whether it is in the right or wrong. There was never such an honest defensive war as this in which we are now engaged.

While returning from Harefield Sir George's Reid's car broke down, and the party was stranded for an hour in the roadway in darkness. Finally they were brought home—a distance of 16 miles—in an open motor ambulance waggon.

WESTERN FRONT.

AIR FIGHT.

LONDON, Sept. 24.

A German communique says:—In an air battle at Pont a Mousson, a German airman engaged two French machines, and shot down one, which fell burning between the lines.

WAR NOTES.

THE EASTERN THEATRE.

There seems now to be no doubt whatever about the Russians having extricated themselves from the Vilna-Lida corner without mishap. Petrograd announces the completion of the withdrawal, and it is also stated that during the rearguard fighting the Germans lost no less than 250,000 men. This estimate of the enemy losses, which is not official, is sure to be somewhat inflated; but when we consider the circumstances of these particular operations we can well believe that the German casualties were enormous. They were utilising a very great force, and, thinking they had the Russians in a bad way, they put forth a tremendous effort to make the most of what certainly appears to be the last chance of inflicting a crushing defeat upon the Russians in the great retreat. If the Russian army in the Vilna-Lida region could have been enveloped and overwhelmed it would, in addition to being a staggering tactical blow, have cancelled at a stroke all that the Russians have been striving for throughout their long retreat, and would have left the remaining armies of the Czar widely separated with a big victorious enemy force in between. With possibilities of this kind staring them in the fact it is easily to be understood that the Russians would put forth heroic efforts to extricate their threatened army. North and south they appear to have fought like demons to keep their flanks wide enough to allow the centre to withdraw, and the rearguards of the centre fought with the utmost stubbornness to hold back the Germans when, towards the end, they hurled themselves forward with the idea of piercing the Russian line. It is when we consider fighting born of this sort of thing, and continued all round the clock for several days, that we can well believe the attacking Germans to have sustained appalling casualties. This fighting in the Vilna-Lida angle and the terrible picture drawn yesterday of the German carnage before Novo Georgievsk, to say nothing of the price that had to be paid for Kovno, Grodno, and the rest, give point in striking fashion to Lord Kitchener's recent remark: "The Russians have suffered severely, but who will venture to say, until the present grips are relaxed, which army has suffered the more?"

THE STRAIGHTENED LINE.

The Russian front now runs southward in practically a straight line from Dwinsk; the last big "bulge" has been smoothed out, and with the disappearance of that bulge seems to have disappeared the last German chance of any enveloping movement south of Dwinsk. The Russian predicament in the Vilna-Lida region came about through them hanging on a little too long to the line of the Middle Niemen while they were falling back north and south of that line. Thus the ominous bend in their front was a thing quite of their own creation, for, as they fell back north and south it was quite within their own hands to fall back in the centre as well in conformity with those other movements. Now, if the Germans want to envelop any considerable Russian force they will have first to thrust out a great wedge far to the eastward of the present straight Russian line—an entirely different matter. Whether the enemy will attempt such a move time alone can tell us; but we have every reason to believe that any such attempt would be unsuccessful. There is now no point on the Russian front between Dwinsk and the great Pripet marshes, of such vital strategic importance to the Russians as to warrant them hanging on to it so long as to allow the enemy to push far eastward of it elsewhere; and if the Russians are forced back in any sector they will withdraw on either side in conformity with this local retreat, and so obviate the possibility of a dangerous salient. But the enemy in this central region will now doubtless bend most of his energy towards securing of as much of the Vilna-Rovno railway as possible—the railway which he so badly needs for a lateral line of communication for the winter. He has already gained possession of this railway from Vilna to down near Baranowitshi, a distance of about 100 miles; and he will try to push further along the line from there, and by so doing aid that portion of his army lower down, which has for so long been floundering in the great marshy tract in its attempt to press due eastward to the railway. From Baranowitshi the railway curves to the south-eastward in order to cross the marshy region on firmer ground, and it is because of this eastward curve that we will probably find the German force now east of Vilna trying to press onward to Minsk, the possession of which, besides giving them command of an important junction on the Warsaw-Moscow line, would inevitably force the Russians to uncover the railway from below Baranowitshi.

THE DWINSK-RIGA REGION.

The above remarks are wholly in reference to the situation between Dwinsk and the Pripet marshes. When we come to consider the position in the extreme north, that is above Dwinsk, we find that already the German front represents a big blunt salient, because the battle line, after coming up from the south to Dwinsk, does not continue northward, but curves round in a north-westerly direction to Riga. This means that if the Russians refused to let go their grip on Riga and the Germans could push northward from Dwinsk and Jacobstadt, the Czar's troops in the port would be in danger of envelopment. But from Dwinsk to Riga runs the river Dwina, and for many weeks past the Russians, under General Russky, have been defending that river line with remarkable success. Try as they might, the Germans have only been able to reach the stream at one point—in the Lennewarden-Friedrichstadt district; but so far they have utterly failed to gain a firm footing on the northern bank. The most strenuous efforts to push directly into Riga have come to nought, just as have the efforts to take Jacobstadt and Dwinsk itself; and the latest news this morning shows that instead of gaining, or even holding, their ground, the Germans have had to fall back at some points before the Russian onslaughts. It was generally accepted some time ago that Riga would fall—it would be a little too optimistic to suggest that it will not fall now—but the manner in which the Russians are staving off the German attempts to secure the port certainly constitutes one of the surprises of the eastern position, and is a particularly happy augury for the future when the reorganisation of the Czar's armies will have been completed and a full head of munitions will have been made available.

FRENCH DIRIGIBLES.

Following upon our reference yesterday to French dirigibles, it may be remarked that France, though she early perceived the importance of aerial craft as a military weapon, went much slower than Germany in the matter of big dirigibles. But latterly she has been paying increased attention to this branch of aeronautics. Although the Germans, so far in this war, have failed to make good the flamboyant claims they made for the Zeppelin as a weapon of offence, all the belligerents know how useful this airship has been to Germany in the matter of reconnaissance, particularly naval reconnaissance. Apart from what they actually know to have been accomplished by the German craft—and it is a good deal more than the civilian has been given any idea of—they have their experience with their own dirigibles to convince them that this phase of aerial work must inevitably be greatly developed in the future. The Lebaudy is the type of the semi-rigid dirigible that has retained favour in France, but the aerial navy also contains specimens of the Bayard-Clement, the Zodiac, and the Astra machines. A variety of the latter class—the Astra Torres—has been approved by the British Government, and a specimen of this class is doing useful service with our Expeditionary Force. Increased experience has convinced the French authorities of the superiority of this type over its many rivals, and huge specimens are now being built that will surpass the giant Zeppelin. Though details are wanting, it is admitted that the speed of the experimental vessel exceeded 60 miles per hour, giving France the speediest dirigible in the world. Outwardly its lines are not graceful, consisting as it does of three cylindrically-shaped balloons, two lying side by side, with one superposed, but cut away internally to allow of a triangular space between the three cylinders, to admit of the suspension system, carrying crew and machinery, being placed within the outline of the gas bag, thus reducing the air resistance offered by ropes, car, etc. Great hopes are entertained of this latest expression in airship design, which will carry engines of 1000 horse power.

LATE WAR NEWS.

GREECE.

GENERAL MOBILISATION ORDERED.

LONDON, Sept. 24.

General mobilisation has been ordered in Greece.

RUSSIAN SUCCESS.

AUSTRIAN FRONT PIERCED.

LONDON, Sept. 24.

The military correspondent of the "Echo de Paris," referring to the capture of Volnitza by the Russians, says that General Ivanoff's and General Beisiloff's armies on the Skwa and the Styr pierced the Austrian front and captured thousands of Austrians and Germans eastward of Lutsk. The enemy abandoned Lutsk and crossed the Styr. The Russians are pursuing them.

THE HESPERIAN.

SUNK BY SUBMARINE.

BRITISH CAPTAIN'S STATEMENT

NORFOLK (Virginia), Sept. 24.

Captain Smellie, of the British steamer Crossby, has filed with the British Consul a statement to the effect that he witnessed the sinking of the Allen liner Hesperian through a torpedo fired by a German submarine.

He says that the submarine chased the Crossby and only by putting on full steam and steering a zig-zag course in the darkness was she able to escape.

Captain Smellie asks that the statement be sent to the Admiralty to refute the claim by Berlin that the Hesperian was sunk by a floating mine. He states that he sighted the Hesperian on September 4 and saw her give a sudden jerk and then start to sink by the head. He started to her assistance, but had hardly got the bow round when he discovered that the submarine was making for him. He was then forced to turn the vessel round, ring "full speed" and keep the vessel's stern towards the submarine. The Crossby escaped in the darkness.

SWISS SHOT.

BY THE GERMANS.

PARIS, Sept. 24.

The Germans court-martialled a Swiss cycling champion for alleged espionage. They shot him, despite the Swiss Government's protests.

"ALL YOUNGSTERS."

ARTILLERY OFFICER'S LETTER.

LONDON, Sept. 24.

A New Zealand officer named Wallingford, who is retiring owing to a strained heart, writing to his parents, says: "I tried to stick to it, but for fourteen days after we had beaten off the Turks I was crawling round my guns with a stick. I got home with a revolver, killing four, one at a foot, another at five feet, the third at ten feet, and the last at twenty yards. Poor devils, they were all youngsters. I am sick of killing with the rifle.

COLLIERIES.

NO STOPPAGE.

The threatened stoppage of work at all the collieries on Monday as a result of the expiration of the fortnight's notice to the proprietors has been ordered off by the executive of the Miners' Federation. Yesterday Mr. A. C. Willis, secretary to the Illawarra Colliery Employees' Association, and also secretary of the Federal body, received a wire from Melbourne to the effect that a compulsory conference had been granted for Friday next, October 1, at Melbourne. In view of this, the Coal and Shale Employees' Federation has pronounced against any suspension of work on Monday. This applies to all States affiliated with the federation.

The conditions governing the coal trade of the South Coast during the last three weeks have been of a most unsatisfactory nature, stoppages on the part of the men being of frequent occurrence for all manner of grievances. As a result the pay at a number of the mines only amounted to practically half-time.

A section of the miners on the coast have been responsible for a great deal of friction, notwithstanding the fact that the wages on the south at the present time range higher than on the northern field. But among the more reasonable men there has been very little talk of trouble. There is regular work at practically all the collieries for those who desire it, and the majority, under the circumstances, are reluctant to dislocate trade at such a time.

NEWCASTLE, Friday.

The secretary of the Colliery Employees' Federation (Mr. W. Brennan) to-day informed the secretary of the Colliery Proprietors' Defence Association that the 14 days' notice given by the Federation would be extended to Saturday, October 9. The various lodges of the association were similarly advised.

FOR EGYPT.

PATRIOTIC BUSINESS MEN.

RED CROSS SELECTIONS.

The Australian branch of the British Red Cross Society has selected the following gentlemen to go to Egypt to assist Mr. Adrian Knox, K.C., and Mr. Norman Brookes, the Red Cross Commissioners:—

SECRETARY.

Mr. S. W. THORNTON, financial secretary to Mr. Kelso King, Mercantile Mutual Insurance Company, Sydney.

SUPERVISORS OF RED CROSS DEPOTS.

Mr. J. A. MURDOCH, head of the firm of Murdoch's, in Park-street, Sydney.

Mr. R. W. WALKER, a partner in the firm of F. J. Walker and Co., Hoskin's-buildings, Spring-street, Sydney.

Mr. F. DU BOISE, shipping manager of the Macarthur Shipping and Agency Company.

INQUIRY BUREAU.

Dr. NORMAN KATER.

Mr. H. STUART OSBORNE, of the firm of Wilkinson and Osborne, solicitors.

Mr. FRANK LAMB, shipping department of Dalgety and Co.

The above appointments will be added to by two gentlemen selected in Victoria and one in South Australia. The appointments have been made in response to Mr. Adrian Knox's cablegram asking for "six business men," including a secretary, to assist him in the Red Cross work in Egypt, and four others to work in connection with the Red Cross Inquiry Bureau.

All the gentlemen selected have undertaken to pay their own travelling and living expenses, and to give their services without any remuneration. With the exception of Mr. Du Boise, whose offer is for 12 months, they have all offered their services for as long as the war lasts. And in every case they undertook to render any service that might be required of them under the direction of the Australian Red Cross Commissioners.

In addition to the gentlemen named above, Mr. Eric Lloyd Jones (of David Jones and Co.), whose services were offered to and accepted by the Red Cross Society a week or two since, and Mr. Anthony Hordern are proceeding to Egypt to assist in the great work. Mr. Hordern has offered his services, together with a motor car, for use in connection with the Inquiry Bureau, and will leave next Tuesday. Mr. E. L. Jones will leave for Egypt on October 2.

A number of other gentlemen, both here and in Melbourne, have volunteered for gratuitous service in Egypt, and Mr. Adrian Knox has been asked by cable to advise if their services may be availed of.

Mr. Hanbury Davies, chairman of the New South Wales division of the Australian Branch of the Red Cross Society, stated yesterday that the applications received in this State alone totalled nearly 200, and three of them were from ladies. "The applicants," he said, "expressed their readiness to accept any position offered, displaying a spirit of self-sacrifice which the country must surely appreciate. So many able men volunteered that the choice was rendered extremely difficult. Whilst there is this spirit prevailing among the people we are surely justified in our confidence of ultimate victory. Certainly the Red Cross Society is to be congratulated on having secured the services of such able business men for the conduct of its affairs abroad. The mother State is also to be congratulated on having provided such a large proportion of the men required."

It may be added that as far as New South Wales was concerned the selections were made some days ago, and as in the case of those received in other States, they were forwarded to Lady Helen Munro Ferguson, president of the Australian Branch of the Red Cross Society, who submitted the names and credentials to the executive. Of the ten men asked for this State is providing seven, and as Mr. James Ashton, M.L.C., who is one of the hardest workers of the Red Cross Society, put it yesterday: "Two extra ones as well."

THE SECRETARY.

Mr. Knox will count himself fortunate in having secured the services of Mr. S. W. Thornton as secretary. Mr. Thornton is an accountant of very high standing. He is 38 years of age, and though born in England, has lived in Australasia for the past twelve years. His father was well known as the author of a manual of bookkeeping and a number of other works on kindred subjects, which have been recognised for many years as standard works. He is himself the author of "Bookkeeping for Business Men," published by Macmillan and Co., London. Mr. Thornton was for eight years examiner in bookkeeping and accountancy under the New Zealand Government for the senior and junior Civil Service examinations and the examinations for teachers' certificates. For several years prior to the passing of the Accountants Act he was examiner in accountancy and auditing to the New Zealand Accountants and Auditors' Association. When the Royal Commission was set up some years ago to inquire into the long-standing dispute between the Christchurch Drainage Board and the local bodies representing the rural areas he was appointed by the representatives of the rural bodies to act for them. The commissioner in his report offered his congratulations to Mr. Thornton for the "lucid and exemplary manner" in which the extremely complicated accounts were put before him. He also received very handsome letters of thanks and commendation from the representatives of the local bodies concerned.

In his letter to the Red Cross Society, Mr. Thornton said: "I can hold myself in readiness to proceed to Egypt and place myself under the instructions of Mr. Knox as soon as the committee might wish me to go."

THE OTHER VOLUNTEERS.

Mr. R. W. Walker recently equipped at his own expense a motor ambulance, and presented it to the military authorities here, at the same time volunteering to accompany the car to Egypt as driver. The necessary permission for him to work in the Red Cross interests has been granted. Mr. Walker is a partner with his brother in the firm of F. J. Walker and Co., exporters and packers of frozen and canned meats. He is 32 years of age, and was born at Bega, where his father was manager of the Commercial Bank. He was educated at the Sydney Grammar School, and received most of his business training with Dalgety and Co. and G. S. Yuill and Co. He has travelled abroad a good deal, and at the time the war broke out was in charge of the business of F. J. Walker and Co., in England.

Mr. Du Boise is 39 years of age, and has been with the Macarthur Shipping and Agency Company for 20 years. He has been shipping manager for the firm for the past six years, and his knowledge of shipping matters should prove invaluable to the Red Cross Society. He is a native of Sydney, and was educated at St. Ignatius' College. Mr. Du Boise was anxious to enlist, but his eyesight was against him. "But I feel that I want to be of use," he said to a "Herald" reporter, "and so I have offered my services to the Red Cross."

Mr. Murdoch, as already stated, is the head of the well-known Park-street firm, and the manner in which he has built up that business is sufficient testimony to his ability.

Dr. Norman Kater is a son of Mr. H. E. Kater, M.L.C. Though he took his degree in medicine at the Sydney University, he is not now practising in his profession, and for some years past has been engaged in pastoral pursuits in the Cudal district.

Mr. Frank Lamb is a son of the late Mr. J. De Vere Lamb, and his experience in the shipping department of Dalgety and Co. should make his services of value in Egypt.

Mr. H. Stuart Osborne, of the firm of Wilkinson and Osborne, is a well-known Sydney solicitor.

SHELLS.

DELAYS IN MANUFACTURE.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The Minister for Defence (Senator Pearce) stated to-day that a despatch had been received by the Commonwealth Government from Mr. Bonar Law, Secretary of State for the Colonies, in which appreciation was expressed of the manner in which the manufacture of war munitions was being dealt with. Continuing, the Minister said that he had noted that nearly every tenderer had asked for a period of grace, varying from a month to three months, with respect of the first delivery of shells. That was interesting, he added, in the light of the assurances that were given by apparently irresponsible parties that shell manufacture could be begun at once were it not for the delay caused by the department.

THE SIXTH BRIGADE.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

It is announced that Colonel R. Spencer Browne has been appointed to succeed Colonel Linton in command of the 6th Brigade.

CONSCRIPTION.

PRIME MINISTER'S ATTITUDE.

IRREVOCABLE OPPOSITION.

LABOUR DEPUTATION.

THE UNIVERSAL SERVICE CAMPAIGN.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The Prime Minister (Mr. Fisher) to-day received a large deputation from the Trades Hall council on the subject of compulsory military service. He declared himself to be irrevocably opposed to conscription, and said that his Ministry had no intention of extending the provision of the Defence Act to service outside the Commonwealth. The people would be informed before any change was made in the Labour Government's policy in this regard.

Mr. C. J. Bennett (chairman of the Trades Hall council) said the deputation wanted Mr. Fisher as head of the Labour Government to make a pronouncement as to his attitude towards conscription.

Mr. Fisher: Why?

Mr. Bennett: Because it was considered that on account of the agitation now going on and the innuendoes thrown out by certain men who had identified themselves with it that the Labour Government seemed to be trying to induce people to believe that conscription was likely to become the policy of the Labour Government.

Mr. Fisher: Have you ever known a Labour Government make its policy known through anybody else? The Ministry will announce its policy through its own official channels, and through no other. You want me to make a negative statement of policy.

Mr. Bennett: The Trades Hall Council thought that the matter was most important.

Mr. Fisher: The Trades Hall Council is quite capable of opposing any men who might be appealing to the people on the question. The Ministry is not involved in it. The Ministry stands where it stood before. We are pledged to a policy under the Defence Act to raise men by levies as required for the defence of the dominions.

Mr. Bennett: Was there any intention of altering the Act?

Mr. Fisher: I will make that known at the proper time. But you are the last people who should come and ask me for a statement of a negative character on policy. It takes all our time to make our positive policy known and to carry it out. I cannot understand the Council worrying to know whether we are opposed to this, that, or the other.

Mr. Bennett: It would relieve the minds of many workers if the Ministry would say what its attitude was, because many people might be misled by the participation of some Labour supporters throughout the Commonwealth in the campaign for conscription.

Mr. Fisher: There is no restriction on your voices. You can be heard with the others on the matter. The Ministry is not taking part in any conscription movement.

Mr. Bennett: Many leading men connected with the Labour movement are.

Mr. T. P. Motteram: Mr. Fisher, do you want these people gagged.

Mr. Bennett: We want the public to be given to understand that they do not speak for the Labour party or the Labour Government.

Mr. Fisher: I decline to do that. I am the only person who can speak for the Government. It is absurd and a reflection on the Labour movement to suggest that the Ministry would allow anyone outside to announce its policy.

Mr. L. Cohen (assistant secretary of the council): We, as representing the Labour movement, have a perfect right to inform any Prime Minister, Liberal or Labour, that we are entirely opposed to conscription.

Mr. Fisher: That is not in question. You wanted to see me privately on the question, and I declined to do that, because it is a big question. No person in my position could discuss whether he would do this or that or the other when he has made no announcement on the subject.

Mr. Bennett: On all public questions when a certain party or section of the community takes up a definite attitude the Labour party must have an opposing policy, or else by our silence we shall seem to concur in their policy.

Mr. Fisher: But we have our policy. It is not only in our platform but on our statute book. They cannot bring in conscription by public meetings. The only question you need to ask is whether it is the intention of the Ministry to bring in a bill to introduce conscription.

Mr. Bennett: Has the Ministry that intention?

Mr. Fisher: No. Now that simplifies matters a good deal, does it not?

Mr. Cohen: The working classes had been given no opportunity before the war to pronounce on conscription, and as Australia was supposed to be a free country—

Mr. E. F. Russell: Supposed to be.

Mr. Fisher (warmly): It is the freest country in the world.

Mr. Cohen: A few busybodies might imagine that Mr. Holman was the leader of the Labour movement in New South Wales. He was not. The officials and every Trades Hall organisation in New South Wales were out and out opponents of conscription. With all due respect, he would say that Mr. Fitzgerald did not represent a tithe of the Labour voters of New South Wales in his attitude, nor did Mr. Holman. The Ministry was supported by nine-tenths of the people of Australia in its opposition to conscription.

Mrs. Katz (on behalf of the Women's Convention) and Miss Heagney expressed approval of Mr. Fisher's attitude on the question.

Mr. Fisher: You know we can mobolise under our present Act for local defence.

Mr. Cohen: There would be no need for conscription for the defence of Australia.

Mr. Fisher: None whatever.

Mr. J. Holloway (ex-President of the Council) said he regarded conscription as one of the most inhuman and brutal of all laws, and he hoped that Australia's statute book would never be soiled by it.

Mr. Fisher: We have it now for home defence. What you are against and what I am against is that men should be trained by vested interests to fight against nations or parts of nations at the will of a few people instead of the whole. Whether it is called universal training or conscription every one of us would be prepared for the sacrifice to defend our country.

Mr. J. Cosgrove thanked the Prime Minister for his pronouncement against conscription. There was a fear among many workers that pressure was being brought to bear to engineer a public opinion in favour of conscription at the dictates of the Allies of Great Britain.

Mr. Fisher: That is not true. To do them justice, they do not take so much notice of us. Do not let us be conceited; they hardly know we exist. Britain's Allies would not be allowed such an impertinence as that. There is a dignity of nations, you know. In a final reply Mr. Fisher said that in his opinion the only system of world government worth thinking of was a congregation of nations, with a socialistic organisation and the establishment of international courts to determine in equity the rights of the nations with power to punish nations, just as individuals were now punished for violations of the law. He was sorry if he had been somewhat raspy, but he was rather tender in regard to suspicions that the Ministry would make a change of policy without first telling the people who put them in power. The people would be told the reasons for any change before any was proposed, and nothing that other people outside did or said would affect that position. He was irrevocably opposed to conscription, and he was sure he could say his colleagues were. Before any change of policy was made the people to whom the Ministry owed its position would be fully informed, and given an opportunity of expressing their opinions.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—One of the things I most regret in the attitude I have taken up in regard to the advocacy of conscription at this stage and before the responsible Government has intimated that voluntary recruiting has failed to meet the demand of the military authorities, is that I find myself in opposition to such men as Professor David and Mr. Edward J. Loxton, alongside of whom I felt it an honour to speak at recruiting meetings. I have some comfort in the knowledge that, however much I may disagree with their method or they with mine, our aim is one—the best interests of our country and the best practicable way of meeting the danger to our Empire and to the sacred cause of freedom. I have read Mr. Loxton's letter in to-day's issue with much respect. Its reasonableness and its courtesy are in contrast to another of your correspondents, who has taken me to task, but whose letter I do not intend to notice.

I may relieve Mr. Loxton's mind on one point. I have never said that under all circumstances I am an opponent of compulsory universal service. I clearly indicated in my first letter on the subject that I did not hold this view. I may re-state my position on that point in a sentence. If the Commonwealth Government, who alone have access to full information, intimate that in their judgment nothing less than this will meet the situation, then I would consider it my duty as a loyal citizen to acquiesce and in my own sphere to support that momentous decision. I feel that it would be my duty to trust the Government who represent us in the prosecution of this war. But I am not prepared to accept the verdict of a self-constituted body. Mr. Loxton's argument as between a legal and moral obligation is therefore, as far as I am concerned, beside the mark.

As to a distinction being made between voluntary recruits and conscript soldiers, that distinction has been made, in a somewhat unfortunate way, by Mr. Holman, in threatening that a very radical distinction in pay would be so made, and Mr. Holman is a vice-president of the league.

Neither need I discuss abstract questions of liberty of the subject. I have steadily looked at this whole subject from the practical point of view of our immediate duty. It seemed to me that, as we had gone so far with the voluntary system, and that, as far as responsible government was concerned, there was no declaration that this method had failed to meet the call of the Defence Department, and that with better organisation and less blundering by the military authorities, and these things were being righted, the voluntary system could answer much greater calls, our duty was to throw all our energy and enthusiasm into the system we had adopted. The change proposed would, I felt convinced, seriously divide the nation where all should be united, and distract energy from the one great work before us, the prosecution of the war. There are many who have given of their sons, and made the last great sacrifice, who are utterly and bitterly opposed to conscription in every form, and, seemingly, under any circumstances. That view is not mine, but why throw this bone of contention into our midst at such a time, and by other than the only party which knows all the facts? I may, of course, be mistaken, but it does seem to me that the programme of the league, if given effect to, will cause such an upheaval, especially in the ranks of industry, as will gravely militate against our successful prosecution of the war. I know nothing of the Anti-conscriptionist League further than is reported in your paper to-day, but, impressed as I am with the tremendous issue we are up against, I mourn over what, from the first, I apprehended as an inevitable division in our ranks. I felt, and still, feel, that the agitation set afoot by the Universal Service League would injure recruiting, and the recruiting reports within the last ten days have been most disheartening, and in to-day's issue of your paper we have the heading, "Slackest Day Yet." It is not the theoretic question but the practical which is before my mind. I stated my views as a citizen, and I would be well content to leave it there, but when my friend Mr. Loxton reasons with me I feel that it is probably due to him to make some acknowledgment of his effort to make me see what to him is the error of my ways. I am, etc.,

Sept. 24. RONALD G. MACINTYRE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Some very mild meanings are being given to the term conscription. Experience bids us beware lest, once adopted, and the principle riveted upon us, a much sterner interpretation will be attached to the term.

Paul, writing to the Thessalonians, laid it down very clearly that the man who did not work should not eat. If universal service means that, then I am prepared to be enrolled among its advocates. The present is a time when each should be doing his part, either at the front or in providing for the men there, or fulfilling the duties to their dependent ones which would be theirs had they remained at home.

It needs not all the fuss and flurry which are being manifested. Like all great problems, its solution is simplicity itself.

It is a time when all who do not work should be made to feel they are transgressing a law, not altogether unwritten in our legal codes, but written large in the Law Book on which all legal enactments are founded. It is a time when the wealthy should do their share in the production of the necessaries of life as well as the man whom hunger forces to the field or workshop. Let that be the prevalent unwritten code, and little else, if anything, will be necessary. The sending of a white feather to a young man who does not enlist is sometimes the acme of injustice and cruelty; but the ostracism of the known lazy lout, wealthy or penurious, is absolutely defensible.

If it should need a written enactment the very smallest amount of force necessary should be resorted to. All the provisions could be written on one sheet of notepaper. Let it be provided that all capable of working shall be honestly engaged for 60 or a less number of hours a week in some useful occupation. The result would be the cessation of all strikes, the production of abundant food and clothing and housing for our men at the front; and myriads of men to stand in the trenches and fight our battles.

All that is needed is that each person capable of working should keep a record of each day, showing how many hours of useful toil he has done, and be able to prove his entries if called upon.

The industrious would no more fear such a law than an honest man a thief-catcher; but what of the "Five-to-one-bar-one" fellows who infest racecourses? And the heroes who pander to the worst instincts of the people in the stadiums of the land? Their record of useful labour at the end of each week would be a blank. They should, then, be told to find something useful to do. If it came to a choice with most of this class between a hayfork and a rifle they would gladly take the latter. The ranks would fill up. Let those who still remain unemployed be hewers of wood and drawers of water and scavengers in general to the worthier men who have enlisted in the forces of the land.

There is in every country a large proportion of labourers unemployed, partly employed, or employed in unproductive channels. Let us see that these are all usefully engaged, and the leap in production would astonish humanity. Permit this latent power to remain inert, and the conditions of the present will continue, despite all the compulsion which can be resorted to.

Some think compulsory service will send the wasters to the front. There is no walk of life in which there are not wasters. Labourers, artisans, farmers, lawyers, doctors, and parsons each provide a quota. Who are to pick these fellows out? If this be not done, and lots are drawn, if it be granted that one in fifty is a waster, there will be 49 good fellows sent to the front for every shirker alike of duties on the battlefield and the harvest field. I am, etc., HARRY BOWDITCH.

Parkes, Sept. 23.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Mr. E. J. Loxton, in his criticism of Professor Macintyre's attitude to the Conscript Service League, says:—"Professor Macintyre, in one of his letters, speaks of a conscript as if he was something inferior to a volunteer. Why so?" And Mr. Loxton asks: —"Is a man less a man of honour because he, at one and the same time, performs a moral and legal obligation?" This is the same as asking:—"Is a man who pays his accounts through the Law Courts as worthy of our respect as the man who pays on receipt of a statement?" Many Australians have heard the nation's call, and have counted not the cost in answering it, and yet, according to Mr. Loxton, these brave boys are not more worthy of honour than those forced to do their duty by Act of Parliament.

I am, etc., JUSTICE.

THE PREMIERS.

ADJOURNED CONFERENCE.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

Though six subjects are set down for discussion at the adjourned meeting of the Premiers' Conference on Monday, the loan requirements of the States and the method of raising money overshadows all others. The subjects to be considered are as follow:—

Loan requirements of the States, and the method of raising money.

Freedom from Federal taxation of interest on securities of State Governments.

Action taken by the States in fixing the price of wheat.

Operation of Acts in respect of the price of goods, and the restriction of interstate trade.

Export duty on tin.

Railway travelling by returned wounded soldiers during the period of their incapacity, and the request of the Commonwealth for concessions.

CENSUS CARDS.

The Commonwealth Statistician, Mr. G. H. Knibbs, has already ascertained that certain persons have not yet sent in personal cards, and in one case a material fact has been misstated. Until the alphabetical register has been compiled prosecutions, of course, can be undertaken only in cases coming specially under notice. All persons who have either not sent in cards, or who having sent them in, have made any misstatement, are advised by the department to send in at once a properly filled in personal card with an explanation of the delay or of the error, as the case may be. Any amended return sent in should be marked "amended return."

NEW ZEALAND LOAN.

AUCKLAND, Friday.

The City Council has raised a loan of £240,000, which is placed as follows:—In Australia, £150,000 at 4½ per cent.; Bank of New Zealand, £59,900 at 5 per cent.; Auckland Savings Bank, £30,000 at 5 per cent. The result of the loan is considered highly satisfactory.

RECRUITING.

TESTING ROUGH-RIDERS.

ADVICE TO LOOKERS-ON.

The chief centre of interest, as far as recruiting was concerned yesterday, lay on the old rifle range between Park-road and the Agricultural Show Ground, where men who had been passed as fit for positions in the new Remount Unit were put through their paces before Captain Bell, S.O.V.S., and Farrier-sergeant Ochs. Nine men offered themselves as recruits to fill the positions of rough-riders; five came from the country and four from the city, and the city men failed to make good.

But with the countrymen it was a different story. They were of the long, sinewy class, that showed they had been born and bred among horses out-back. They handled the animals in a masterly manner before attempting to mount, and once in the saddle it did not trouble them whether their feet were in the stirrups or not.

That was the first part of the day's work, and once the rough-riders were settled a move was made further down the ground to where a hurdle had been erected. Here were some quiet old stagers in the equine line on whose backs "the old buffers"—to use the sergeant's expression—were to be given a chance to show that they could at any rate keep in the pigskin over an easy course. These recruits were the men between 40 and 50 years of age, who hope to go to Egypt to look after the horses the Light Horse have left behind them. They were ordered to mount in parties of six. In the first batch five went off in a not unbusinesslike manner, but the last horse took charge of its rider, and after rearing and hitting him a nasty blow on the nose with its neck declined to walk, trot, or jump, and the rider was requested to dismount and give someone else a chance.

"There is one matter I would like to draw attention to," said Captain Bell, at the conclusion of the work, "and that is that there appears to be a big crowd of loafers all apparently of military age, who can afford the time to come down here and waste a couple of days watching our work. It is a disgraceful thing to see so many young hoodlums, as most of them show they are by their remarks and behaviour, wasting their time here in civilian clothes, instead of being in khaki in one or other of the camps. In future these tests will not be a free show to this class of individual, even if we have to call a guard and have them removed."

The following are the figures for the four metropolitan depots for the week to Friday:—

VICTORIA BARRACKS	291
TOWN HALL	199
BOARD OF HEALTH	209
REMOUNT DEPOT	202

COUNTRY DEPOTS.

The following figures have been supplied to the Premier by the military authorities, showing recruiting at the following centres for four days up to Thursday:—Newcastle 61, Goulburn 36, Armidale 34, Narrabri 8, Dubbo 20, Cootamundra 38, Lithgow 15, West Maitland 13; total 225.

CARPENTERS' UNION.

ATTACKS THE MINISTER.

"TRAITOR TO ELECTORS."

MELBOURNE, Friday.

A telegram from Perth, conveying a communication sent by the Amalgamated Society of Carpenters in that State to the Labour Federation, was keenly resented by the Minister for Home Affairs (Mr. Archibald). In the communication the society called upon the Federal Labour party to remove from the Cabinet Mr. Archibald, Minister for Home Affairs, for notifying a reduction of wages on the transcontinental railway below the maximum, and that he is therefore a menace to the Labour party and a traitor to the electors who returned him.

Mr. Archibald complained that there had been an unwarranted attack made upon him. There had been no such reduction of wages as suggested. The facts were that the Commonwealth railways some weeks ago issued staff regulations, dealing only with the permanent running and workshops staffs, omitting the casual labour employed in construction. These were similar regulations to those in force on every State railway. The rates were made uniform with those paid by the State in the same locality to employees similarly employed. In the case of the carpenters referred to the Commonwealth railways rate was 13s 8d per day. The Western Australian railways rate was 12s 6d per day, plus 7s per week goldfields allowance, the result being exactly the same. In addition to this, Mr. Archibald continued, he had already offered to bear the expense of an appeal to the Arbitration Court if the employees considered that they had good grounds for going there.

"OUR DEBT TO FRANCE."

ADDRESS BY THE PREMIER.

AT THE UNIVERSITY.

Last night the Premier, Mr. Holman, addressed the Sydney University Union on "Our Debt to France," in the Union Hall. Professor Vonwiller presided.

In the comparatively recent revolt against the aggressive supremacy of German culture, backed up by German arms, Mr. Holman said, the leadership came from France. The world owed it to France that the tyrannical domination of Germany in the intellectual sense had been challenged and overthrown. Keeping abreast in the march of science, France rapidly recovered from its humiliation in 1870, when it was crushed by Germany. With this revival or resurrection came the determination of the French nation to rely entirely upon itself, and the outcome was the establishment of well-ordered method and organisation in national affairs. Originality, always the keynote of the French character, manifested itself not in light literature or in trivial music, as in the days of the second Empire, but in wrestling with great problems, and in triumphs in the fields of invention and engineering. During the past 10 years French diplomats had asserted themselves, and had regained for the French nation the first place in diplomacy. The advance of the nation in what is called military science accompanied the advance in other things, which helped to give the people renewed energy and increased strength.

Proceeding, Mr. Holman said it would seem as if the forgotten secret of Napoleon's strategy had been discovered by the brilliant commanders of the French army in the magnificent effort which was now being made to rid Europe and the world of a military domination which was fatal to all that had been fought for in the name of liberty and humanity. It was acknowledged that France at the start of the war was the one Power that stood between Continental Europe and German domination. They could hardly realise how much they owed to the national spirit and the military courage of France in the present war.

Mr. Holman went on to say that France should not be judged by its politics, which, unfortunately, were not in good hands. The people themselves should be judged by their national characteristics. While England was honoured as the classic home of liberty, in France equality and fraternity were joined with liberty in the national ideals of the people. That democracy had played a large part in creating what was sometimes spoken of as the new France could not be made a question. In the present war the French nation had staked its existence upon a definite logical process. With a serenity of soul which was proof alike against fear and the consequences of failure, soldiers of France had shown that they did not count the cost or the self-sacrifice in devotion to their country. Without a word of whimpering the French soldiers had shown their determination to hold their ground and even to face another winter while waiting for the long-delayed British reinforcements. The example which had been set in steadfastness and in unflinching valour made Englishmen and Australians proud of such an alliance. It should also inspire them to play their own part worthily until the victory of the Allies was completely and gloriously accomplished.

ELECTORAL REFORM.

A lecture on "Proportional Representation and a National Parliament" will be given on Monday next at 8 p.m. in St. James' Hall, by Mr. John H. Humphreys, the general secretary of the Proportional Representation Society of Great Britain, of which the president is Earl Grey, whose visit to Sydney a couple of years ago will be remembered by many. The meeting will be attended by leading members of all political parties, and a demonstration will be given of the new method of voting proposed.

WILLOUGHBY.

SECOND BALLOT TO-DAY.

The second ballot for the seat at Willoughby rendered vacant by the death at Gallipoli of Sergeant E. R. Larkin will take place to-day.

At the first ballot, on Saturday last, the Labour representative, J. L. Chambers, headed the poll with 1753 votes. For the other five candidates the polling was as follows:—John Haynes, 1659; J. G. Willson, 269; T. B. Redgrave, 232; E. M. Clark, 216; and M. J. Rowland, 4. Altogether there were only 4133 votes recorded out of a total roll of 12,459 names.

For the second ballot, all but the two candidates receiving most votes automatically drop out of the election. To-morrow's contest, therefore, will be between John L. Chambers and John Haynes.

The polling places will be the same as at last Saturday's election—at Blue's Point, Crow's Nest, Lane Cove-road, Greenwich, Miller-street, and Naremburn. The hours for recording votes are between 8 a.m. and 7 p.m.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Allow me direct a few words in disgust of the remarks made by a gentleman who signs himself "J. Capple Shand" in a letter published in your valuable paper of the 23rd instant. Whilst Dr. Shand gives credit to the amiability of the late Mr. Larkin, in the same breath he gives discredit to the dead hero, by saying that he thought that Mr. Larkin's action in going to the front was to save the face of the Labour party only.

If remarks of this kind are to be tolerated, I shall be surprised if any relatives or friends of the late Mr. Larkin enlist to save a man like Dr. Shand from German rule. In the interests of the Empire, Dr. Shand ought to apologise. I am, etc.,

Sept. 24. TOM LONG.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Mr. Holman wants Mr. Wade to mount the platform for Mr. Chambers, the Labour candidate for Willoughby. He says it is the Liberals' duty to see that Labour gets the seat. He further asks Mr. Wade to denounce Mr. Haynes' candidature. Well, I hope Mr. Wade will do none of these things. Why should he? Mr. John Haynes has as much right to stand for Parliament as both Mr. Holman and Mr. Wade, and if the electors think he will represent them better than Mr. Chambers they have a perfect right to vote for him. As to the Liberals voting for Mr. Chambers, as he desires, all I can say is I hope they vote for what they think is for the best interests of the country, but vote by all means, for every vote unrecorded allows of an opportunity for unscrupulous persons to practise impersonation. I am, etc, FAIR PLAY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Allow me space in your columns to say a word or two with regard to how I view the above, and it is from a sense of duty I feel called upon to do so. I have been a labouring man all my life, and I have voted the labour ticket or the democratic ticket all my life since I have enjoyed the franchise. The Labour movement is a great movement for reform, and the Labour platform is a broad platform, but the personnel is not what it ought to be to represent such a great policy. The present party, who are pledged to carry out the platform, have not done so. It seems to me that the Premier is overlooking the platform and its principles. I am aware how essential it is that Mr. Holman should be checked. When it is so, a duty lies at the door of every Labour elector not to give Mr. Holman and party greater power to abuse their positions; therefore on this occasion I am going to cast my vote for the democratic candidate, Mr. John Haynes. The Government of to-day is probably the strongest we ever had in this country—strong not in ability but in the large amount of automatic support it receives from the party pledged to support the party in majority in caucus. The Labour party have eliminated a great deal of support by a series of the most questionable acts, spending large sums of the public money without the sanction of Parliament, treating the people and Parliament with undisguised contempt. Did I thing for a moment that by casting my vote for Mr. Haynes I would place the Wade party in power again I certainly would suppress my feelings, and vote, against my grain, for the Labour candidate. In voting for Mr. Haynes I take this view, that if there were half a dozen bulldog men with his admitted ability it would be an incentive to force Mr. Holman and his party to carry out their platform, and not to be repeatedly violating every known principle of democracy, and at times the Constitution of New South Wales.

If this state of things is allowed to continue by the labouring classes shutting their eyes to the fact, and voting for the nominee of Labour, it simply means the decay of the great Labour movement. A more scandalously disgraceful act in every sense could not have been done by the most Tory party than was done recently in handing over the public works of this State by the Labour Government to the Norton Griffiths Company. The Labour electors of Willoughby will fail in their essential duty if they fail to check a continuance of the present condition of things, and it is from the investigations that may be made by Mr. Haynes, and such as him, being free of caucus, that will throw light upon this subject, and save the Labour movement and the State.

I am, etc, ARTISAN.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—I have just read a letter, dated September 2, and signed "J. Capple Shand," which appeared in your columns of the 23rd inst. This writer, who professes to have a very high opinion of Mr. Larkin, does not, however, hesitate to attempt to befoul his memory for purely party reasons, when he states that he has "reason to think that Mr. Larkin did not go to the front of his own initiative, but almost entirely to save the face of his party." To make a statement of that sort a man must be possessed of a more than ordinary mean and suspicious nature, and can have very little regard for the feelings of Sergeant Larkin's widow or of his friends. The late Sergeant Larkin was a very dear friend of mine. Not only was there no effort made by the members of his party to induce him to offer his services for the defence of Australia and the overthrow of the enemy of the Empire, but, on the contrary, I and others attempted to dissuade him, and advised him to remain at home with his family and his many heavy responsibilities until the ranks of the eligible single men had been depleted. Mr. Larkin replied on every occasion that he felt it his duty to go, and to set an example to those who, like himself, belonged to great athletic organisations. He said that he feared the footballers and other athletes would stand back unless some example was set them by their leaders, and that he felt it his duty to make what he knew to be a great sacrifice, and to run a great risk, which he did willingly, because of his recognition of the duty he owed to Australia, and because of his belief that no sacrifice could be too great to make for a country in whose future he so strongly believed.

INCOME TAX.

ASSESSMENT OF DIVIDENDS.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The Federal Income Tax Assessment Act provides that the dividends paid by companies to shareholders shall not be taxed in the hands of the company except when the company is assessable as agent for absentee shareholders. The individual shareholders must, however, include dividends from companies in their returns, and they will be taxed on them.

Questions have been asked of the Federal Commissioner of Taxation as to the course to be followed by shareholders in returning dividends received by them. It has been pointed out to the Commissioner that many shareholders received during the year commencing July 1, 1914, to June 30, 1915, dividends declared by companies out of profits derived by the companies during the 12 months months ended June 30, 1914. In the Federal Income Tax Assessment Act the shareholder derived his dividends during the same period as the company derived the profit out of which the dividends were paid, so that the dividends received by a shareholder after June 30 in any year out of the profits derived by the company during the year ended June 30 in that year should appear in the shareholder's return of income derived during the 12 months ending on June 30, and not in the return of the income for the financial year in which the dividend was actually paid by the company.

In connection with this question the point arises as to the course to be followed by companies and shareholders when the company's balance is made up to a date other than June 30, and that balance is accepted by the Federal Taxation Department in lieu of a statement for the 12 months ended June 30, when the commissioner accepts a return based on a balance-sheet made up to a date other than June 30. The law deems the income disclosed by the balance-sheet to have been derived in the financial year for which the return is made. The financial year commences on July 1 and ends on June 30. The dividends declared out of the profits disclosed in the accepted balance-sheet are therefore deemed to have been derived by the shareholders during the financial year mentioned, and should be shown in the return of income for that particular financial year.

RIFLE FACTORY.

MINISTER SETTLES THE STRIKE.

EMPLOYEE REINSTATED.

LITHGOW, Friday.

Last night Senator Gardiner, Acting Minister for Defence, concluded his work here for the present. The Minister left by this morning's train for Sydney, after having visited the recruiting camp.

In regard to the inquiry into the recent trouble, the Minister found as follows:—(1) That Mr. Sedger was talking, and when checked by his foreman, displayed a disposition to argue the point; (2) that Mr. Snowden very properly and promptly discharged him; (3) in view of his previous good record, and other circumstances, I recommend Mr. Ratcliffe to reinstate Mr. Sedger.

The Minister read his findings to the whole of the employees, and added a few remarks. He said, in announcing the decision arrived at: "I desire to say to the Unionists here that we are interested in the success of this great factory. To me this factory is a tangible result of many years' earnest work by thousands of men, who believe that collective effort is better than private enterprise. Our opponents have said that we cannot make a success of these enterprises. We are confident that we can. But our only hope of success is efficient management and the hearty co-operation of all. To the young men, who resent control, and claim more freedom, I say, if you cannot learn to obey orders you will never be called upon to give orders. Your condition in this factory will compare favourably with the best factories in the world. Be sure you do your best to make a success of this great enterprise, and when I return to my colleagues in Melbourne I will tell them I found the men here a sober, steady, intelligent body, working long hours to get the best results, and to keep up the supply of rifles for the men in the trenches.

The manager (Mr. Ratcliffe) said: While I am still of the opinion that the action of Mr. Sedger, in disputing with the foreman in regard to the instructions given him, rendered him liable to discharge, and if there are any repetitions of this conduct it will be necessary to discharge the offender, yet, in view of the whole circumstances, I am ready to accept and act on the recommendation of the Acting Minister.

WAR COMMITTEE.

RECRUITING CAMPAIGN.

N.S.W. ARRANGEMENTS.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

Interesting subjects were dealt with at the meeting of the Federal Parliamentary War Committee, held on Wednesday. The Minister for Defence (Senator Pearce) presided. Mr. J. C. Watson informed the committee that the arrangements for the New South Wales War Council were nearly completed. The recommendations from the Federal Medical War Committee were received and adopted. The proposed recruiting campaign in New South Wales was considered, and it was decided that Mr. Hughes and Mr. Cook should be asked to address an opening meeting at the Sydney Town Hall about October 8.

An intimation was received from the Postmaster-General's Department that an illuminated recruiting sign would be installed at the General Post Office in each of the States.

Sir T. Anderson Stuart wrote, offering his services on the New South Wales War Council. The offer was referred to the Premier of New South Wales.

Mr. Clarke survived his wife by only ten weeks. There are two surviving children, Mrs. E. Strahan, of Chatswood, and Mr. W. H. Clarke, of Manly, and one grandson, Mr. H. G. Clarke.

WOUNDED RETURNING.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

It is expected by Colonel G. Cuscaden, Principal Medical Officer for Victoria, that two hospital ships will arrive in the bay next Thursday, one having broken a propeller and been delayed. The names of the men on board the delayed vessel have been published. On the other are 20 officers and 354 men of other ranks, wounded and sick. About the middle of next month another vessel is due with 14 officers and 297 men, all injured.

MAN SHOT.

ORANGE, Friday.

On Monday afternoon a report was made to the police that a man was lying on the Orange Common, suffering from bullet-wounds in the head. An investigation by the police showed that one wound had been caused in the forehead by a bullet, which had been deflected on the bone, and had merely ripped the flesh open. A second wound had been made in the left side of the head, and the bullet had apparently lodged inside the skull. The man, whose name was discovered to be Henry Hall, was removed to the hospital, and has been unconscious ever since. In his pockets was the sum of £65, and a bank book showed a credit of £50 in a Sydney bank. In addition a portmanteau was found containing clothing.

MR. TUDOR'S VISIT.

QUARANTINE STATION INSPECTED.

The Minister for Trade and Customs (Mr. Tudor) yesterday paid an official visit to the quarantine station at North Head.

Mr. Tudor also visited the cardboard-box factory of J. Fielding and Co., Surry Hills, in order that he may have first-hand knowledge of the industry when he frames the tariff.

The Minister will be out of town to-day, but on Monday he is to receive several deputations, including one from the Master Butchers, one in connection with the export of tin, and one concerning the export of hides and skins to America.

LAND FOR SOLDIERS.

MR. WATSON'S SCHEME.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

Details made available to-day of the scheme of Mr. J. C. Watson, honorary organiser for the Federal Parliamentary War Committee for the employment of returned soldiers and their settlement on the land, show that an organisation covering every town in the Commonwealth is aimed at.

Mr. Watson suggests that to enable the State War Council to see exactly what new ground must be broken a circular should be addressed to every former employer of an enlisted man, inviting him to say if he would undertake to employ that man in his old or any equal position, or in a lighter capacity if disabled. In the event of the soldier being killed the employer should be asked if he would be prepared to put on a returned soldier in his place. Generally, employers should be asked what work they would be prepared to offer returned soldiers.

Regarding settlement on the land, Mr. Watson pointed out that in all the States, excepting probably Western Australia, the area of Crown lands of good settlement quality was not large, thus private lands would have to be acquired, and then there was the difficulty of putting them into a producing condition, with stock, improvements, and so on. Mr. Watson suggested that all holders of more than a living area of land might be asked to state what area they would be prepared to place at the disposal of the State. He thought that there would be a ready response. A little would be offered without payment, but most of it would be at a price. Payment might be arranged by long-dated bonds. The local committees might raise the funds to equip the farms, and organise working parties to give a day's labour a week in clearing, ploughing, building houses, fencing, etc.

CASUALTIES.

MAN FOUND SHOT.

The body of Lionel Neave, 30, a gardener, was found in Farrelly's-lane, Bondi, yesterday. There was a bullet wound in the head, and an automatic revolver was picked up near by.

A FATAL FALL.

Robert Dobson, 29, wharf labourer, fell down a flight of steps in a Sussex-street hotel yesterday, and died in the ambulance on the way to the hospital.

ACCIDENTAL DEATH.

"Accidental death" was the verdict in the inquest upon George Sydney Mullen, discovered in the harbour on September 9. Deceased was in charge of the waterworks at Broken Hill for some years.

SHOOTING ACCIDENT.

On Friday morning it was reported to the Parramatta Coroner that on Thursday afternoon a travelling draper was doing business from his vehicle at Galston, when three little children got into the vehicle. One of the children found a revolver between a partition and some drapery. John Radband, aged 10 years, took the firearm from his little sister and was playing with it, when he pulled the trigger, and the cartridge exploded, the charge entering the body of his brother Robert, aged 5 years, killing him instantly.

FEDERAL STORES.

MR. ANDERSON'S REPORT.

MELBOURNE, Thursday.

Mr. Anderson, who was engaged by the Federal Government to act as advising financial expert with the object of achieving economy and efficiency in the various departments, has concluded his work, and left Melbourne for Sydney.

It is understood that Mr. Anderson found much circumlocution and waste of effort in this department, as in the department of the Postmaster-General.

It is considered unlikely that Mr. Anderson will recommend the creation of two entirely new departments to take over the control and supervision of stores and public works respectively.

DEATH OF MR. A. M. WHITE.

ACCIDENTALLY SHOT.

TENTERFIELD, Friday.

Whilst cleaning a revolver at his residence, Bolivia Station, yesterday, Mr. A. M. White accidentally shot himself. The bullet entered the abdomen. Medical aid from Tenterfield and Glen Innes was quickly summoned, but there was no hope from the first. Mr. White died the same evening. He leaves a widow and two children. Widespread regret is expressed, as he was the foremost public man of the district.

Mr. White had been president of Tenterfield Shire Council since its formation, ex-president of Tenterfield Agricultural Society, and one of the vice-presidents, president of the local jockey club and picnic race club, and captain of the Sandy Flat Rifle Club.

Son of the late Edward White, of Martindale, near Denman, one of his brothers, Major J. F. White, of Shannon Vale Station, is on active service; another, E. Reginald White, of Merton, who has booked his passage to England by the Osterley. The remaining brother, Mr. Harold White, lives at Martindale.

The late Mr. White was the most deservedly popular man in the Tenterfield district. Since taking up his residence on Bolivia Station, 20 miles from Tenterfield, he took an active interest in the district's welfare, and brought it to the fore for producing the best beef cattle in the State. He introduced the best strains of Shorthorns, and freely sold progeny to small holders. The deceased had the honour of holding the record price for fat stock at Homebush—obtained only a month ago.

The breeding of good horses, principally blood and galloway stock, was a business hobby of Mr. White's. Winners on the turf on many occasions carried his colours, his most notable win being with Midge B., when the latter won the Brisbane St. Leger.

When polo was a favourite sport in the district, Mr. White was an enthusiast, and also took part in the various polo carnivals in Sydney.

Deceased's wife is a daughter of the late Hon. C. B. Dutton, of Brisbane, and latterly of Cooredulla, Tenterfield. One of his sisters is married to Major White.

RECENT GAS STRIKE.

ARBITRATOR'S DECISION.

With regard to the recent strike of gas employees at North Sydney owing to the suspension of a trimmer for refusing on the 11th inst to assist the foreman when the stormwaters were flooding the furnace cellars, on the ground that he was engaged only to truck and trim coke, the following is the decision of Mr. J. B. Holme, Under-Secretary for Labour and Industry, to whom the dispute was referred:—

"I decide, without the slightest hesitation at all, that the company's position in the matter is entirely vitiated by the fact that Hush was not immediately suspended by the foreman Guy when he refused, as Guy supposed, to do work which became necessary in a grave emergency for the purpose of preserving the company's property. I also think that Guy was completely and entirely at fault in not explaining to the man when he refused to do work other than the work he had contracted to do during that shift that the work had become necessary by reason of the occurrence of a grave emergency. My decision is that the punishment imposed upon Hush was unjust."

PATRIOTIC CLERKS.

The clerical staff of the office of the Inspector-General of the Insane has offered to work beyond the ordinary hours without overtime payment, when required, so that arrears owing to the absence of officers on active service may be prevented.

DENTAL BOARD.

At the meeting of the Dental Board, held on Friday, the result of the second section of the Dental Board examination was considered, and resulted as follows:—Pass, W. Low, H. Arnott, Robert Foster, V. de Boos, James Parkins, W. H. Riding. Student granted a post: Perry Redman.

TRADE EXPANSION.

The Minister of Customs (Mr. Tudor) has requested the Interstate Commission "to furnish, for the information of Parliament, a report as to the new industries which, in its opinion, could, with advantage, be now established in the Commonwealth."

MERCHANT SERVICE.

FRESH CLAIMS PREPARED.

INCREASES 17½ TO 35 PER CENT.

Shipowners will receive, within the next few days, a new log of claims by the Merchant Service Guild of Australasia. The claims, dated September 21, have been printed, and are now being addressed to the different owners throughout Australia. They represent what the owners will call another "bombshell." It is suggested that the minimum rates to be paid per calendar month to masters and navigating officers shall involve the following increases on existing rates:—Under £15, 35 per cent.; £15 to £20, 30 per cent.; £20 to £30, 25 per cent.; £30 to £40, 20 per cent.; over £40, 17½ per cent.

There is a new classification for vessels of 5000, 6000, 7000, 8000, and over 9000 tons, and the increase asked is £6 per 1000 tons for master, and £4 for officers.

For passenger vessels the new rates for master, chief officer, and second officer, respectively, are suggested as follow:—

125 tons and under	25	6	18	8	16	16
Over 250 and not over 500 tons	28	12	20	14	18	0
Over 500 and not over 1000 tons	31	15	20	14	18	0
Over 1000 and not over 1500 tons	32	11	23	0	18	8
Over 1500 and not over 2000 tons	35	14	23	0	18	8
Over 2000 and not over 3000 tons	38	17	23	2	19	11
Over 3000 and not over 4000 tons	44	1	24	4	20	14
Over 4000 and not over 5000 tons	50	4	25	6	21	17
Over 5000 and not over 6000 tons	56	7	26	8	23	0
Over 6000 and not over 7000 tons	62	10	27	10	23	3
Over 7000 and not over 8000 tons	68	13	28	12	24	4
Over 8000 and not over 9000 tons	74	16	29	14	25	0

In the case of vessels other than those engaged carrying passengers, masters are started (125 tons and under) at £24 4s, and go up to £56 7s, for vessels over 7000 tons. Chief officers range from £18 to £26 8s, and second officers from £15 12s to £23. It is suggested that when a vacancy exists in the grades of master, chief, or second officer, the position shall be filled, all other things being equal: 1. From among those already in the service of the employer in whose service the vacancy exists; and 2. In accordance with the principle of seniority of service. In the case of a port removal commencing before 7 a.m., or finishing after 5 p.m., or taking place between 5 p.m. and 7 a.m., no overtime is asked, but in substitution therefor a special payment is suggested, as follows:—

Gross Registered Tonnage.	Master.	Officers.
2500 tons and under	£1/1/	7/6
Over 2500 tons and not over 5000	£2/2/	10/
Over 5000 tons and not over 8000	£3/3/	12/4
Over 8000 tons	£5/5/	15/

The holiday overtime scale, now 5s for masters and 2s 6d for officers, has been changed to a sliding allowance per tonnage—3s to 10s per hour for masters, 2s 6d to 4s 6d for chief officers, 2s 6d to 4s 3d for second and third officers, and 2s 6d to 3s 9d for fourth, fifth, and sixth officers.

A clause, entirely new, is one dealing with personal injury by accident in the course of the employment by a master or officer. It says:—

(a) Where death results from the injury, a sum equal to three years' earnings, computed at the rate of the earnings of such master or officer at the time of the accident.

(b) Where total or partial incapacity for work results from the injury, a monthly payment during the incapacity or for the first three months thereof of not less than the earnings computed at the rate at the time of the accident. After three months and during the incapacity, a monthly payment of not less than 50 per centum of such earnings.

Captain W. G. Lawrence, general secretary of the Guild, explains that this clause has been inserted because of the unreliability of the law relating to seamen's compensation, and to the fact that innumerable cases of ships in the Australian trade are outside the jurisdiction of the Commonwealth Seamen's Compensation Act.

It is proposed, in another clause, that relieving officers shall either be paid at a rate not less than 2s 6d per hour, with a minimum payment of 12s 6d, for any engagement, or be employed by the month, and paid not less than £18. If employed by the month and required to work more than eight hours in any twenty-four hours, a relieving officer shall be paid 2s 6d per hour for the overtime. Except during his leave of absence, a master or officer shall, it is suggested, be entitled to meals and accommodation on his ship, or receive an allowance, as follows:—Victualling allowance only: A master, 10s per day; an officer, 6s per day. Accommodation only: 5s per day. Victualling and accommodation: A master, 15s per day; an officer, 11s per day.

A board of reference is proposed for dealing with the following subjects:—

(a) Payment of wages or overtime; (b) leave of absence or time off duty; (c) promotion; (d) discharge or dismissal; (e) punishment; (f) accommodation, and clause 21; (g) preference of employment; (h) liability to pay, or amount of compensation payable, under clause 15 hereof; (i) the obligation of any master or officer to perform any manual labour under clause 18 hereof; (j) the liability of any employer under clause 20 hereof, which arises between any of the parties hereto; (k) the employment of relieving officers.

If arising out of and in the course of his employment a master or officer should be sued, proceeded against, or called into question for default or non-observance of any maritime law or regulation, or any port or harbour regulation, or for any other reason whatsoever, it is suggested that the employer shall, unless personal negligence or misconduct is proved against the master or officer, bear the whole of the cost of such action, proceedings, or inquiry, and shall reimburse and compensate such master or officer for all expenditure and loss connected therewith.

The general secretary says these fresh claims have been forced on the Guild by reason of the increased cost of living.

THE AUXILIARY CRUISER.

OCEAN TRIAL TRIP.

The auxiliary cruiser which has been in port here since early in August proceeded outside the Heads yesterday for a trial trip after having been docked and re-fitted.

The vessel was present at the sinking of the German cruiser Dresden off Juan Fernandez, and came direct to Sydney from the South American coast.

The large grey vessel attracted much attention for some time after her arrival, when she was moored at the flagship's buoy in Farm Cove. She afterwards moved over alongside Garden Island, where extensive re-fitting was carried out. The big guns, with which the vessel had been fitted, were thoroughly examined, the mechanism being removed, tested, and repaired. The platforms of the guns also received attention.

After the army of workmen at Garden Island had finished with the vessel she was docked and further overhauled. From the dock she was again taken to the flagship's buoy in Farm Cove. She left yesterday in order to give her engines a trial outside the Heads, and returned again later on to the buoy in Farm Cove.

COMMODITIES.

PRICE OF COAL.

The Necessary Commodities Control Commission intends inquiring further at an early date into the question of prices, especially as they affect the western coal fields.

PRICE OF MILK.

Complaints have reached the secretary of the Necessary Commodities Commission that 6d per quart is being charged at Manly for country milk delivered. Mr. Ovington points out that 6d is the declared price of local milk, and 5d that of country milk, and that the application before the Commission for an increase of country milk from 5d to 6d has not yet been decided, so that a higher price than 5d is illegal.

The Necessary Commodities Control Commission will consider on Monday, at 10.30 a.m., prices of chaff and hay; and at 2 p.m. the price of chickwheat.

SUPPLY OF TRUCKS.

With reference to the letter from Mr. W. E. Abbott, of Wingen, published in our issue of yesterday, the railway authorities state that that gentleman has been written to for dates and particulars of the three instances in which he claims to have been refused trucks during the past four or five weeks to convey stock to the Flemington market. At the present time about 60,000 sheep per week are being brought to Flemington, and in response to the heavy demand for stock trucks, 1810 "D" waggons have been used for this service during the present month, in addition to carrying on the ordinary goods business of the department.

The authorities state that Mr. Abbott is quite wrong in his assumption that scarcely any wool has yet begun to come in. The department states that up to date, 171,887 bales of wool have been invoiced to Darling Harbour, Newcastle, and Morpeth, an increase of 75,477 bales on the quantity invoiced during the corresponding period of last year, and no complaints of any kind as regards transit have been received. There is certainly no congestion at the present time, nor any appearance of congestion.

FIRE BRIGADE.

NEW WORKSHOPS OPENED.

The opening of the new workshops at the headquarters of the Metropolitan Fire Brigade by his Excellency Sir Gerald Strickland marks an epoch in the history of fire-fighters in New South Wales. The Fire Brigade is now practically a self-contained institution, and can turn out anything from a tomahawk to a motor truck.

Mr. F. Flowers, M.L.C., president of the Board of Fire Commissioners, welcomed the Governor, and said that owing to the different conditions in New South Wales, particularly in inland towns, they had suffered serious disadvantages. They had found it necessary to do for themselves what others had failed to do for them, and in future the work would be done within the walls of the new workshop. "This tomahawk, with this casket, made out of the original timbers of the old warship Nelson," said Mr. Flowers, "was made here. I only wish your Excellency could test it upon the disturber of the world's peace." (Laughter.)

The Governor, in returning thanks, said: "I realise more every day that it is science and machinery which enables the community in New South Wales to maintain so high a standard of wages and efficiency." The keynote of success, he added, was industry. The generals of industry were the sort of generals the nation was crying for.

Mr. G. Black, Chief Secretary, paid a tribute to the work of the Fire Brigade, which, he said, had improved greatly within the last few years.

The works contain blacksmiths' shops, with forges, drop hammers, punching and shearing machines; fitting shops, equipped with lathes, milling and drilling machines, benches and vyces; painting and plumbing shops. The assembling hall is equipped with a 4½-ton overhead crane, which can travel to any corner of the shop.

Previous to the opening of the workshop long-service and good-conduct medals were presented by the Governor to the following:—Firemen N. G. Sparks, S. Watson, J. Ford, T. Nance, S. H. Lister, G. Grimmond, G. Cox, K. Arthurson, F. A. Tack, A. Murray, J. Sorlie, G. Fletcher, W. O'Toole, A. G. Reeves, A. Wickham, C. Riddell, W. M'N ven, O. R. Pickering, A. Gerrett, P. Robinson, W. M'Laughlin, F. J. Smith, P. Henry, E. Henry, T. C. Amor, W. Wylie, F. Whitehouse, P. Finnegan, R. W. Joyner, Divisional-officer Gorman, Station-officer Harper, Sub-station-officer Butcher, Ex-firemen A. Dickinson, J. Stanchell, J. Etherington, G. Gray, and J. Chambers.

An exhibition of fire drill was given by the members of the brigade. A striking display of articles turned out in the workshops attracted the attention of the guests.

A MILITARY NIGHT.

His Excellency the Governor, Sir Gerald Strickland, the Chief Justice and Lady Cullen, Mr. Justice Ferguson, Mr. Tom Rolin, K.C., and Major L. A. Curtis (the last three as hon. treasurers) were amongst the crowded audience at St. James's Hall last night in the interests of the funds of the 20th Battalion Committee. The evening was chiefly devoted to an assault-at-arms, smartly carried out by the Sydney Fencing Club and Professor Frank Stuart. In this way the assemblage saw upon the platform the champion swordsman (foil, sword, and bayonet) of the Royal Navy. Mr. Stuart was also for five years chief instructor-at-arms (and in physical exercises) of the Royal Navy at the headquarters gymnasium, Portsmouth, and in 1907 was decorated by King Edward with the M.V.O. (Medal Victorian Order) for the excellence of his work. Besides acting as referee last night, he engaged in many bouts himself, notably in sabre v sabre with Mr. George H. Williams, whose fiery attack makes him formidable; in a foil encounter with a girl pupil from his Sydney fencing school, who justified his description of her as one of the most promising he has met anywhere; and with Mrs. F. Stuart, who wields the epee gracefully. Rapid foil exchanges between Mr. Rolin and Mr. N. de H. Rowland also pleased the audience. Probably the realism of the bayonet v bayonet duels proved the most exciting, the suggestion of danger being especially vivid. Lieutenant Keith A. Ferguson and Lieutenant M. T. Allan fought in deadly earnest with these weapons, or seemed to, disarmed each other simultaneously, and at once engaged in a wrestling match, "Turk against Turk!" It was all strictly within the rules, and was scored up to Lieutenant Ferguson, who was busy strangling his opponent before shaking hands! Mr. Wrenn Sutton, Corporal R. A. Barton, Lieutenant H. G. Meek, and many others took part.

Captain Kane, A.A.M.C., was warmly applauded for a really interesting description of the "Landing at Gallipoli, April 25, 1915." He landed as a surgeon with the 2nd Battalion, just after the 3rd had stormed the steep hills and routed the enemy, a wonderful achievement, which, he said, was rightly attributed by General Sir Ian Hamilton to "sheer audacity." Captain Kane was very much under fire, and his simple personal touches had a thrill in them which he doubtless little suspected. Eugene Ossipoff, the Russian baritone, with Miss Esther Kahn as pianist, was encored with enthusiasm, and the humorous dialect monologues by Mr. Frederick Ward were equally appreciated.

GENERAL RAIN.

During Thursday night or early yesterday morning unsettled conditions affected the western areas of New South Wales, and extended rapidly eastward until the whole State came under the operations of the big disturbance from Central Australia.

Light to moderate rains, with thunderstorms, were recorded generally west from a line joining Walgett, Orange, and Kiandra. The only amount exceeding one inch, however, occurred at Wilcannia, where 150 points were registered. Still, a number of the other falls in various parts of the western half were substantial, and should prove of benefit. Wentworth Hill had 85 points at Wentworth, Broken Hill 84, Cobar and Pooncarie each 80, Mount Hope 78, Ivanhoe 70, and Euabalong 60. On the central western plains, Nyngan 60 points, Condobolin 46, and Ungarie 40: in Riverina, Hillston 58 points, Moulamein 55, Cudgellico 39, and Deniliquin 33. On the south-western slopes Grenfell received 25 points and Wyalong and Morangarell each 17. Further eastward the falls were only light and scattered. But up to 9 a.m. yesterday the rainstorm had not affected the far eastern districts, although the weather generally there, except on the north coast, was of the type usually heralding its approach. A little prior to noon yesterday light showers, with thunder and equally north-easterly winds, set in at Sydney, and are probably also prevailing in other parts of the coastal areas.

The following additional rainfall had been reported up to 6 p.m. yesterday:—Dubbo 41 points, Gabo 32, Goulburn 18, Newcastle 6, and, up to 9 p.m., Sydney 10.

The present indications favour temporarily fine weather in the western districts, but unsettled, with rain and thunder, in the eastern half; squally north-easterly winds. Later, however, there should be a return of the rain to the west.

BROKEN HILL, Friday.

Splendid rain fell last night. The city was for a time in a state of flood.

VOLUNTARY SYSTEM.

NOT FAIR.

Mr. F. Hartley Sargent, managing director of Sargent's, Ltd., who enlisted as a private in the Australian Imperial Expeditionary Forces, but who now holds the rank of sergeant, was honoured with a banquet in the vestibule of the Town Hall last night, at which about 200 were present. He was presented with an elaborate address, which was illuminated with scenes of battle, ambulances at work, and ships far out doing their duty, while his own photo occupied the topmost position.

Sergeant Sargent, replying to the toast of his health, said the sergeant-majors at the camps were the mainstay of the army. "These men," he added, "do more good here, as instructors, than they could do if they were called upon to go abroad and fight." Good, however, as the volunteer system is," he went on, "it is not the fairest in the interests of the Empire. Some mothers gave two and three children, while others, who could give, gave none. Therefore, I honestly think that conscription should come in. Some people would give their money. But we don't want only their money. We want their sons, their husbands, and their sweethearts." (Applause.)

SUBMERGED OBJECT.

The master of the steamer Clan Davidson reported yesterday to the Superintendent of Navigation (Captain Cumming) that shortly after passing through Bass Strait at 5 a.m. on September 18, while bound to Sydney from Durban, the chief officer, who was on watch, reported to the master that the vessel, in his opinion, had touched a submerged obstruction. The position of the obstruction is lat. 38.50½S, long. 147.15E. The agents for the vessel state that she sustained no damage.

BELOVED FRANCE.

HOW HER PATRIOTS DIE.

MR. BEALE'S OBSERVATIONS IN EUROPE.

GERMAN ATROCITIES

Mr. Octavius C. Beale returned by the Makura yesterday after an extended European trip. He journeyed through France on three occasions, and comes back imbued with a strong regard for the people of that country.

"It is impossible," he said yesterday, "to express adequately one's admiration of the cheerful courage and actual gaiety with which the French soldiers go to their death, in the assurance of ultimate victory for their country. From end to end of France there is one feeling only—a mortal resolution to re-establish the freedom of their beloved country, which the Germans themselves very much admire. The Government is doing all in its power to maintain the life and industry of the country, and it was very delightful to see, as I have seen, factories that had been closed reopened, preparation made during the winter for cultivation, and, finally, in the summer, the whole country under crop. They have shown to the world an astounding solidarity in all walks of life. Crime has vanished, and vice hides its head. The French women dress with all their former taste, but with gravity suited to the time of sorrow and danger. Though they mourn in their hearts, they exhibit a splendid fortitude in public. And they are all unstinting in their gratitude to the British, and acknowledge with enthusiasm their indebtedness to the British navy."

Mr. Beale was very wroth at the propaganda which he claimed was being conducted in this country to suppress the truth regarding German atrocities. The feeling in France and England, he said, was very different. His travels through France had convinced him that the accounts of atrocities were in no wise exaggerated, and he had collected numerous photographs bearing them out in every detail. "I understand also," said Mr. Beale, "that there is a very strong tendency on the part of certain business men and a portion of the Sydney press to work back to German commerce, and to prepare for a rapid development of that trade as soon as ever peace can be declared. Such an attitude will arouse the strongest indignation in Great Britain, where the whole feeling is to the contrary. In France, too, all German interests are sequestrated, but out here, although the most exacting questions are asked as to the incomes and possessions of our own people, no adequate attempt is made to find out particulars regarding the possessions of aliens. We know, for instance, that Germany holds absolute control of zinc here, and Great Britain pays 250 per cent. more for that commodity than does Germany. From this fact alone it might surely be deduced that instead of smoothing things for a resumption of German dominance the leaders of commercial thought should at once adopt the most vigorous methods to provide against it. We should decline to listen to the promptings of those who would have us take the Germans into our arms again, in commerce and in private life. Let us, first, help our noble allies (the French particularly), and try to bring back to England her former supremacy.

"We might well take a lesson from Queen Elizabeth," said Mr. Beale in conclusion. "My direct ancestor, Robert Beale, acted as her private secretary, and clerk to the Council, for 30 years. Amongst the many State documents and historical records left by him is an account of how Queen Elizabeth dealt with the German Kaisers of her day—Mathias and his successor Rudolph—and the methods adopted were most efficient in protecting British interests against German aggression."

MINING TROUBLE.

REFERRED TO THE COURT.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

As a result of a conference to-day with Mr. Justice Powers, the representatives of the employers and employees in connection with the mining industry at Mount Lyell and the gold-mining areas in Victoria and the New South Wales metalliferous areas, agreed that no settlement of the questions in dispute could be obtained by the conference. The dispute was referred to the Arbitration Court. October 11 was fixed as the day for hearing.

GERMAN INTERNED.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

Rudolph Schmidt, who was employed as a letter-carrier and telegraphist at Traralgon Post-office, has been apprehended by the military authorities for internment. An inquiry was held a few days ago at Traralgon under the War Precautions Act, 1914, and a suspected persons inquiry order, 1915, as to whether Schmidt was a person believed by the Minister for Defence to be disaffected or disloyal. In the evidence it was stated that Schmidt had said that the Germans had done right in sinking the Lusitania. Schmidt also made abusive references in public to the King of England and to England's fighting ability.

STOCKS AND SHARES.

Speculation yesterday was on a restricted scale, with most of that transacted showing fractional decline. This, however, was largely counterbalanced by the other quotations indicating steadiness throughout. Variations in prices were as follows:—

FINANCIAL.

STATE FINANCES.

AUDITOR-GENERAL SUMS UP.

The Auditor-General, in his report for the financial year just passed, commences by again excusing the Treasurer for not adhering strictly to the schedules of the Audit Act, and declares that he calls attention to the fact of divergence only formally. At once arises the question if it is impossible to carry out the Audit Act, why not amend it? The Act has for its purpose the proper control by the Auditor-General over the spending of the public funds as determined by Parliament. It is his duty to see that Ministers do not divert the funds which they are charged with administering to purposes not contemplated by Parliament. The Audit Act is his authority, and if the Audit Act is not carried out, then the Treasurer is supreme, and the position of the Auditor-General is merely that of an official of the Treasury, and not an officer responsible directly to Parliament.

Of course, it is not the duty of the Auditor-General to criticise financial policy as far as its political aspect is concerned, though he has a duty in pointing out which way we are drifting and how the future is affected. It is true that on this occasion he has done this, but the pointing of the moral could have been done far more vigorously. We are in the midst of a great war; the State revenue has to make no contribution to the carrying on of that war, except the very small one of providing trains for transport, yet the taxation was so increased that the revenue attained a height never before reached. The increase on the taxation was £600,000. As the report states, the expected retrenchment considered in many quarters as inevitable when the war broke out was not only avoided, but the expenditure was actually increased by, in round numbers, within £200,000 of the new taxation. Revenue proper amounted to £18,928,551, and expenditure to £18,435,156. By reason of the surplus on the year's transactions thus disclosed, the deficiency, which reached £1,167,017 at the end of June, 1913, was reduced to £363,931. As to future revenue, it is known that the Government intends to re-enact the super-tax on incomes and the motor vehicle tax, which originally were imposed for the year. The return from the Commonwealth cannot be expected to progress in the same proportion that it has increased in the past few years, both on account of the practical stoppage of immigration and because of the cream of our manhood going to the front.

On the expenditure side, administrative accounts increased £77,304. Railways and tramways increased £34,231, wholly due to increased interest; while the revenue decreased £24,055. The expenditure of the Sydney Harbour Trust advanced £16,737, while the revenue went down £6092. The total increase of expenditure in the business undertakings was £110,339, as against an increased revenue of £88,160. Now, if ever there was a time when economy was needed, it is to-day. It was during the past year no less than in the present year. But the accounts now under consideration show little evidence of it. Some departments, the Auditor-General points out, did keep a tighter hand on the outgoings, but it was not characteristic of all the departments. He takes leave to doubt whether a reasonable explanation would be forthcoming as to the indispensability of some of the expenditure. He acknowledges that financial stringency is approaching, and his remedy is "to make an effort to compel economy in loan expenditure," while in the departments "the growth of cost should be severely checked." The way which he points out is by "economy in materials" in the great public works.

The loan capital invested in the business undertakings of the State was on June 30 £93,107,928, an increase of £5,896,147 on the year. The capital expended on railways to the date mentioned was £72,778,384, or an increase on the year of £4,736,067. The total amount of loan money spent on public works to the end of the year was £124,339,359, and the total public debt on the same date was £117,585,299.

The capital expenditure of the State industrial undertakings was £485,725. These undertakings include the brickworks, limeworks, blue metal quarries, joinery works, timber yards, clothing factory, building construction, Monier pipe works, bakery, and motor garage. Receipts were £787,950, expenses £743,199, and the total expenditure £787,950, showing a loss of £727. The accumulated loss is now £21,212.

INVESTMENT MARKET.

Business done on 'Change this week has been small, and there has been some fall in prices. War Loan lost 5/ of its premium, but afterwards recovered. Variations on the rates of the previous week were:—

AUSTRALASIAN BANKING.

A compilation of the last published balance-sheet of the 22 banks, not including the Commonwealth Bank, transacting business in Australia and New Zealand, made by the "Australasian Insurance and Banking Record," shows the total of £270,458,687, an increase of £9,978,977 compared with the total of the previous six months, and £8,217,972 in the 12 months. Shareholders' funds have increased by £1,828,596, to £39,657,380; deposits amount to £206,220,950, which is £6,170,000 greater on the year. Coin, bullion, and notes are £73,885,521, against £69,769,467 of a year previously. Discounts, loans, advances, etc., are £15,082,482, an increase of £4,100,000. Immediately liquid assets are 41.49 per cent. of the total, compared with 41.25 on June 30, 1914, and 36.16 on June 30, 1912. The season was against a growth in the bank balances, and that growth has taken place is largely due to the stimulus to certain classes of industry and employment given by large Government expenditure. To that extent the progress shown is of an artificial nature. The strong cash position of the banks not only facilitated banking operations in abnormal circumstances, but also enabled the banks to give substantial assistance to the Commonwealth and other Governments.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

Australasian Pioneers' Club has been registered. It is a company limited by guarantee, and its objects are to establish a club for the accommodation of members and their friends.

The following companies are being voluntarily wound up:—Cafe Venice, F. G. Orford, liquidator; Barrier Investment Company, Ltd., J. Harold Cameron, liquidator; Justus Scharff, Ltd., Horace B. Allard, liquidator.

WAR CENSUS PROBLEMS.

COMMERCIAL TRAVELLER'S EXPENSES.

P.H. puts the following case:—

I am a traveller in receipt of a salary, out of which I pay my own travelling expenses, amounting to about £250 per year. Could you tell me if I would be wrong in deducting this sum from my salary? I can see no other clause where I can make this deduction.

The expenses may be deducted from the salary.

A COMPLICATED CASE.

"Darlinghurst" writes:—

(1) Three members (two sisters and one brother) own a small house property. A, one sister, takes her share weekly; B, the brother, has always given his share to C, the other sister, who takes all and pays rates, taxes, and all expenses. B also pays her for board. Will C fill in on her card all she actually receives, or must B do so on his? He is on municipal roll as part owner. (2) I am a paying guest; can I add to my expenses, rates, etc., on my card.

(1) B must include what he receives from the property, less his share of the rates. C includes all her share, less her share of the rates, and anything of the sum given her by B, which may be left over after paying expenses. (2) Living expenses cannot be deducted from income. The rates should be deducted from the gross rental, and only the net rental shown.

JOINT OWNERSHIP.

"No Income" declares:—

My husband purchased a cottage for £650, paying £100 deposit, and the balance at 6 per cent. In purchasing the cottage he got the deeds made out in both our names. Will I have to fill in a census card, as I have no income (only what is allowed me for household expenses)? If so, how shall I do it, as all debts caused by the transaction are paid by him, and in his name?

Each will fill out a card, giving half the value of the property in assets, half the liabilities under that heading. The income and deductions will be included, also halved. In addition, one of the owners must send in a return of the whole income and whole value and liabilities on a separate card in column B.

ON ACTIVE SERVICE.

Wives of men on active service should make a return of their income in column A, and their assets and liabilities, and in a separate card in column B the income and property of their husbands.

PUBLIC COMPANIES.

"G.F." writes:—

A note on the wealth and income card says that, "With respect to trade assets and liabilites only, the particulars as per the latest balancing date since June 30, 1914, and prior to June 23, 1915, may be used for the purpose of this schedule." Does this note apply to income also, or is it necessary to state exactly what the receipts and expenses were for the year ended June 30, 1915? The latter would mean the balancing of the books at that date, entailing considerable inconvenience to large companies.

The note applies both to trade income and trade assets.

BENEFIT CLUB.

Percy Tinkler writes:—

The railway employees in Sydney have a benefit fund called the New South Wales Railway Mutual Sick Club. They pay one shilling per week as contributions, and receive 25s per week when sick. The surplus, if any, at the end of the year is divided, the club terminates. On the first of the next year it is reformed on the same lines, and so we go on year in and year out. Will you please inform me if I have to furnish a war census on 1 or 2 schedule?

A return must be furnished by one of the officers in column B.

NO INCOME.

G.T. wants to know:—

During the last 12 months ended June 30, I have been out of work and living on my savings. How shall I enter this on the card, asking for the amount of income received during the 12 months ended 30/6/15?

If you had no income you cannot render an income return. But you have savings; presumably you have some interest allowed on them, and that interest would be income.

A MORTGAGED PROPERTY.

Trustee states his case:—

I purchased a house for £650, and paid a deposit of £100. A first mortgage for £400 was arranged, and the amount paid to vendors, who held a second mortgage for the balance, £150. Of this amount I have paid £50 by instalments, leaving a balance of £100, payable by instalments.

Re item xi (a)—Is the value of my property £650, less unpaid instalments £100, viz., £550?—and is the first mortgage only (£400), to be shown at a liability?

You place the value of the property (as if it were free) opposite (xi) (a) and (b) assets, and under liabilities (iii) the amount owing on the land, £500. The value of the land is what it would bring to-day. Probably the municipal valuation is fair.

TRUSTEE FOR A SOLDIER.

Mrs. J.W. wants to know:

If I have to send in a war census paper for my son, who is at the Dardanelles. I collect 5s a day of his pay, and pay it into the Commonwealth Bank for him. The account is in my name, acting as trustee for my son. We arranged it so that if he needed money I could draw and send it to him.

Make a return for your son on a card separate from your own in column B.

COMMERCIAL.

THE MARKETS.

The further beneficial rains which have fallen over the State have put new heart into holders of cornsacks. Yesterday few merchants were prepared to do business in any position under 8/6 net to rails. "The country" made fairly substantial purchases at that figure. Branbags were quiet, but supplies were difficult to secure under 7/9 net to rails. There was no improvement in the position of woolpacks, and some importers refused orders rather than accept 2/9 net to rails, with the c.i.f. price in the region of 2/11½.

Trade in tea was dull. This was due, no doubt, to the many disquieting rumours which were current as to the position of the producing markets. One Melbourne journal says that "the absence of Russian support has made a material change in the situation abroad, and as other consuming countries are also inclined to stand aloof from the producing markets prices for common teas have come down with a run, despite the inherent strength of the statistical position."

The hardware houses were busy with orders for all descriptions of harvesting requisites, and hay forks and other such lines were very firm. Stocks of No. 8 black fencing wire were still light, and requirements could not have been filled under £16/10/ a ton. No. 8 galvanised wire was also scarce, and was generally quoted at £19 a ton. For supplies ex the Marie, due shortly, £18/15/ would have been accepted. Wire netting moved out freely at full rates.

The market for heavy chemicals was firm. Bicarbonate of soda sold at £8/10/ and £9/10/ a ton. For caustic soda, 70-72 per cent., £26 was usually asked. There was a steady inquiry for cream of tartar, and small lots of 95 per cent. brought to 1/11 per lb. Parcels could have been secured at 1/9. Tartaric acid was looked upon as good property, and realised 2/4 per lb.

BONDED STOCKS.

Tartaric acid is scarce, with heavy demand. Linseed oil and whitelead are unchanged. Methylated spirits advanced a penny. There was fair business in cement to arrive.

PRODUCE.

DAIRY.

Generally quiet conditions marked the operations in the dairy trade of Sussex-street yesterday. Butter was in barely sufficient supply to fill orders. There was every prospect of a short week-end. Rain has fallen in small quantities on the North Coast, and hopes are entertained in some quarters of a recovery in the output of this most important producing centre. On the other hand, the view is held that the rainfall was not sufficient to materially benefit the affected regions. Bacon and cheese were scarce. Bacon was particularly short, and stocks were totally insufficient to cope with the demand. Lard was unaltered.

The egg market showed no change. Supplies were exceedingly heavy, and the demand was not so vigorous as in the early part of the week, but, despite this fact, prices were steady. New-laids 1/1, choice 1/2. Case were quoted at 1/1. Pastrycooks and biscuit manufacturers were fairly active.

Messrs. Mossman and Ellis report having obtained the following prices at auction:—Eggs: New-laid, /13½ to /14; railway and rivers, 1/1; ducks, choice large to 1/2, case 1/1. Roosters: Extra choice to 10/6, good 8/ to 9/, medium from 7/, small from 6/. Hens: Extra heavy to 7/3, good 6/ to 6/9, medium and light from 5/. Ducks: English, choice suburban to 6/6, good 5/ to 6/, medium and old from 4/6; Muscovy, choice suburban to 8/, good 8/6 to 7/6, medium and light and old from 5/. Drakes: Muscovy, choice young to 15/, good 10/ to 12/, medium from 7/6, and old from 5/. Turkeys: Hen, choice heavy to 16/, good 12/ to 14/, medium and light from 10/; gobblers, choice heavy to 33/, good 22/6 to 27/6, medium and light from 20/. Guineafowls to 6/. Geese to 9/. Pigeons, young to 2/6, old 2/ to 2/6 per pair. Carcase pork to /10½ per lb; carcase veal to /6½ per lb.

FORAGE AND GRAIN.

The forage and grain market was unsettled yesterday owing to the effects of the recent proclamation. Evidence is to be taken on Monday—five days after the proclamation was issued. It appears at the present that the Government, through the Necessary Commodities Commission, intend to retain its hold on the fodder trade. The question is a vital one. The new season's chaff will be on the market shortly. If Government action is intended, a most thorough and minute investigation of present and future conditions should be made ere any definite action is taken. Chaff dealings were absolutely dislocated in the "street" to-day.

South African maize attracted plenty of support. The grain, both yellow, flat and round, and white, is of choice quality, and with river maize stocks practically depleted, the concession of 3d per bushel on local maize was often accepted. The bulk of the white is booked for re-export. Oats were offered at late rates. Grey peas found buyers at from 7/6 to 7/9, and blues were scarce at from 10/ to 10/6 per bushel.

Derrick straw remained stationary at from £5/15/ to £6 for Tasmanian. New Zealand was scarce at £1 less.

At the firewood auctions only 12 trucks were yarded. Prices were on a higher basis of exchange, all kinds of bakers' wood being in good demand.

RAILWAY MARKET.

With the new proclaimed prices for produce in force, it is not to be wondered at that the Railway Market was anything but settled yesterday morning. Although the £12 proclamation was in force, the Railway Market, prior to the announcement in Wednesday's Government Gazette, was undoubtedly governed by the law of supply and demand. Despite occasional shortages, £12 was very rarely realised in the yard, even in private transactions. Now the supply is on the short side, but the maximum price is down £3/10/. This, of course, had a big effect on the market yesterday. The bidding in the majority of cases reached 8/6, at which figure the auctioneer had, perforce, to close. Of the 37 trucks of hay, straw, and chaff in the shed, over two-thirds were disposed of privately, or held over and stored.

The first consignment of new season's wheaten chaff made its debut this morning. It was from Cantrill, of Trundle. Though well cut and green, it was somewhat moist and hot: it realised 8/6.

Six trucks of medium quality potatoes were to hand. Prices were on the poor side.

Consignments manifested to arrive:—Hay, straw chaff, 55; grain, 1.

STAGNANT MARKET.

Extreme stagnation characterised the market yesterday morning. It was a case of "much cry for very little wool," for stocks were freely called and quoted at the morning call and high 'Change, but business was confined to two tin stocks and five sales. An examination of the quotations will show that values generally were unaltered.

The business record was slightly better during the afternoon, whilst values were fairly well maintained, with quotations mostly wide, as buyers and sellers did not show a disposition to get to close quarters.

MINING NOTES.

According to a telegraphic report from the manager of the Black Range West gold mine (W.A.), the reef in the face of the No. 3 south level is 5ft wide, showing more mineral, but no visible gold. The reef in the rise from the same level is also 5ft wide.

During the past month the Vulcan tin mine (Q.) crushed 529 tons 16cwt 3qr of ore, producing 23 tons 3cwt 1qr 7lb of concentrates, realising £1470/2/11.

In addition to doing a large amount of developmental work in the past fortnight at the Occidental gold mine, 1202 tons of ore, worth 40/3 per ton, were raised. Some 1437 tons of slimes were treated at the cyanide works, containing 609 fine ounces, the recovery being 489 ounces fine gold. Five and a half tons of concentrates, containing 110 ounces of fine gold, were produced and bagged for transit.

WILD CHERRY TIN MINE.

Report for week ended September 16:—No. 1 level: No. 2 stope, containing payable ore, rise over north drive extended 4ft; total 18ft 4in; improving in tin values. No. 2 level: North drive extended 5ft, total 48ft from crosscut; ore in face improving in value; leading stopes in progress north and south of crosscut. Burns' Block: Mark shaft, driving north on lode in good values. Surface: High values of porphyritic and detrital material, near battery, is maintained; slight improvements are in progress on the plant.

WALLAROO AND MOONTA COPPER.

According to the report of the directors, to be presented at the half-yearly meeting of the Wallaroo and Moonta Mining and Smelting Company, Ltd., to be held in Adelaide on September 28, the ore and precipitate despatched from the Wallaroo mine during the half-year was 29,769 tons of ore, averaging 9.25 per cent., containing 2753½ tons of fine copper, and from the Moonta mine 3884 tons of ore, averaging 15.92 per cent., equal to 618½ tons of fine copper; also 519 tons of precipitate, averaging 72.25 per cent., producing 375 tons of fine copper.

The total weight of fine copper received from all sources at the Wallaroo smelting works was 3785 tons, including 64 tons obtained from purchased ores. The quantity of ore, matte, and precipitate smelted was 33,911 tons, producing 3862 tons of refined copper. The acid plant was in commission for 19½ weeks, the output being 2346 tons of sulphuric acid. During the six months 3780 tons of refined copper and 2¾ tons of bluestone were disposed of.

The liquid assets of the company on June 30 totalled £257,838, and the liabilities £24,480, leaving a balance of £233,358 in favour of the assets.

In the concluding paragraph of their report, the directors remark:—"Our London agents (Messrs. Elder, Smith, and Co., Ltd.), assisted by Mr. David H. Ladd (our metallurgical expert) have, during the past six months, been urgently engaged in establishing the 'Wallaroo' brand of copper in England, and in this work have received, through the Premier, valuable assistance from the Agent-General for South Australia, as well as the cordial support of the Commonwealth Government. The result of their exertions has been that the whole of the copper shipped to England to date has been sold at satisfactory prices. As long as these favourable conditions continue there should be no difficulty in paying quarterly dividends to the shareholders."

MANAGERS' REPORTS.

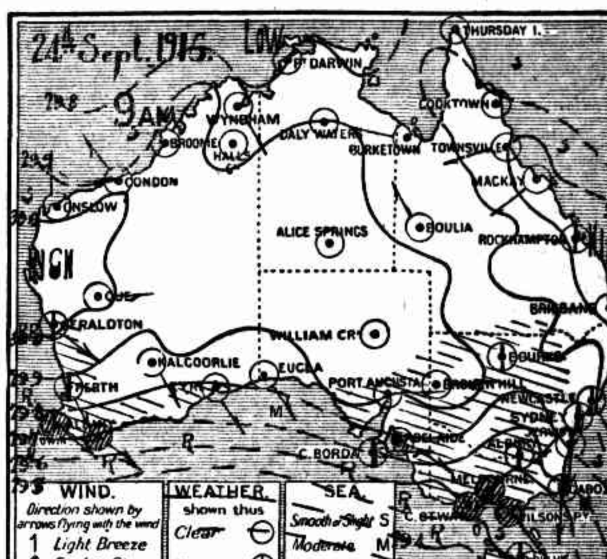
AUSTRALIAN WEATHER.

THE "HERALD" MAP.



Since 9 a.m. on Thursday, the [illegible] high pressure has contracted from the western border of New South Wales to the north-east districts, its centre being now to the south-east of New Zealand, or about [illegible] miles to the south-south-east of its former position.

This easting of the "high" has given inducement to the advance of the big disturbance from Central Australia, and this has produced unsettled weather generally in New South Wales, some of the falls being very gratifying.

Owing to the rapid movements, however, although further good rains, with thunder, are likely in the eastern half, finer weather should rule in the west.

A high pressure of but small energy, occupies the western half of Australia, the centre being in the north coastal parts of W.A.

Owing to the congestion of isobars over the Southern Ocean, westerly gales should be experienced, with moderate to rough seas there.

Evidence of monsoonal activity is shown over the North Tasman Sea, near New Caledonia.

Ocean Forecast.—Squally west to north-west winds to gales, between the Leeuwin and Gabo, with moderate to rough seas.

THE TURF.

Metropolitan sporting folk will this afternoon have the choice of horseracing at Clarendon, where the Hawkesbury Race Club holds its spring meeting, and trotting at Victoria Park, under the auspices of the Australian Trotting Club; while those who prefer going further afield will be catered for at Boolaroo; Victorian sportsmen assemble at Moonee Valley, where the Melbourne Hunt Club holds a reunion, and, similarly, the Adelaide Hunt Club provides a meeting at the South Australian capital; while the Albion Park Jockey Club furnishes an outing for Brisbane racegoers.

The liberal bill of fare provided by City Tattersall's Club for its spring meeting at Randwick on the 16th prox., demands the attention of owners and trainers on Monday next, when at 4 p.m. nominations close with the secretary, Mr. Frank Walton, for the half-dozen items on the card. The added money aggregates 1750 sovs, of which 500 sovs goes to City Tattersall's Handicap, 300 sovs to the Flying Handicap, 250 sovs each to the Club Mile, Steeplechase, and Flying Welter, and 200 sovs to the Welter Handicap.

A trotting meeting in aid of the South Sydney Hospital takes place this afternoon on the Victoria Park racecourse, under the auspices of the Australian Trotting Club, and the programme for the occasion should be responsible for interesting sport, inasmuch as high-class performers are engaged, the track is excellent going, and the general arrangements up to the customary standard. Visitors will be accommodated with special trams to the racecourse gates from Circular Quay and the Railway-square loop, while the ordinary service to Zetland will also be available. The first race is timed to start at 2.30 p.m.

The Boolaroo racing fixture for this afternoon foreshadows a pleasant outing for racegoers, as the management has made all arrangements for the comfort and convenience of visitors at that popular trysting place. Large fields are indicated, and the quality of the contestants assures sport of a highly interesting nature. The transit arrangements include a special train starting from the Central Railway Station at 10.5 a.m., stopping en route at Strathfield, Hornsby, Woy Woy, Gosford, and Wyong, and returning to Sydney after the last race.

A lengthy catalogue is now in the course of compilation for the spring sale of bloodstock, to be held at Payten's Newmarket Stables, on Thursday, October 7, by Messrs Wm. Inglis and Son, and intending vendors will materially assist by sending early particulars of horses for sale. Included in the list are the imported stallion Hermes, and the brood mares Black Chat, Dainty Girl, Althra, Lady Dunboyne, Marcotina, Blanche Marie, and King's Fancy—all imported and members of the Oban Stud. The sires Ballantrae (imp.), Prudent King (imp.), Plaundes (imp.), and Sylvanite are responsible for the untried stock, and the race horses Tawdry, Bob Bunsow, Cacique, Lingard, Fizzing, and Highland Band will also be brought under the hammer.

"W.A.J.": The second division of the Encourage Stakes run at Rosebery, on August 28, started at 2.20 p.m.

Under instructions from the executors in the estate of the late Mr. T. H. Cooper, Messrs. H. Chisholm and Co., in conjunction with Mr. A. J. Morton, will offer for sale by auction, at their stables, Randwick, on Monday next:—Br m Florrie II., by Hyman from Festival, 4yrs; b h Akel, by Hyman from Chotaranee, 4yrs; br m Picoreur, by Havoc from Georgina, 6yrs; and br f Bridal March, by Bardolph (imp.) from Orange Blossom. The blood stock, ch h Clash of Arms (imp.), by Polymelus from Blue Blood, and b f Perdita, by Merv (imp.) from Redwing, will also be brought under the hammer. Clash of Arms has several important engagements in connection with the A.J.C. Spring Meeting next month.

Dubbo Amateur Nursery Race Club (October 19, 20) and Heddon Jockey Club (October 13) have been granted registration by the A.J.C.

HAWKESBURY RACE CLUB.

SPRING MEETING.

The Hawkesbury Race Club brings off its spring reunion at the well-appointed Clarendon course this afternoon, and, as usual, the management has made ample provision for the transit, by rail, of a large gathering; while the catering department has received special attention. Special trains start from the Central Railway Station at 10 (horses), 11, 11.22, and 11.56 a.m., 12.17, 12.27, and 12.56 p.m. The track at Clarendon is reported to be excellent going, good fields are indicated, and the fact that a number of A.J.C. Derby candidates, and other horses holding important engagements at Randwick next month, will be out under colours, the sport should be of a high-class character.

Racing commences at 2.15 p.m., with the Rowley Mile, in which the brunt of the battle should fall to Gigandra, Brattle, Relievo, Giru, and Fend, and the places may be filled by Relievo, Giru, and Brattle.

On public form, Cetigne should win the Hawkesbury Guineas, and he may be escorted home by Loved One, and Panacre.

Housewife, Ickle Lass, Hecate, and Miss Martian should have most to say in the settlement of the Park Stakes, and the judge may declare for Housewife, Miss Martian, and Hecate.

An interesting contest is promised for the Hawkesbury Spring Handicap, owing to the number and quality of the horses engaged. Should St. Carwyne start, he must be very hard to beat, but in his absence, the battle may be fought out among Limelight, Ravello, and Sir Vive, who may pass the post as named.

The meeting will be brought to a close with the Highweight Handicap, in which La Balfour, Boureong, Lady Blacksand, and Karool should run prominently, and Karool, La Balfour, and Boureong may pass the post in order.

AMUSEMENTS.

CRITERION THEATRE.

The new American farce "Stop Thief" at the Criterion to-night will include four artists from America new to this country, Mr. Arthur Greenaway, newly-returned from New York and London after nearly two years' absence, and various Australian actors back from the J. C. Williamson tour at the Cape. The cast will be as follows:—Joan Carr (Esther Mitchell), Mrs. Carr (Fanchon Campbell), Caroline Carr (Elma Royton), Madge Carr (Katie May), Nell (Beatrice Nicholls), William Carr (Edwin Lester), James Cluney (Herald Harcourt), Mr. Jamison (Herbert Leigh), Doctor Willoughby (Arthur Greenaway), Rev. Mr. Spelvin (Plumpton Wilson), Jack Doogan (John Webster), Joe Thompson (Charles Wheeler), Sergeant of Police (Tom McCarthy), Police Officer O'Malley (Ronald Riley), Police Officer Clancy (Fred England), Police Officer Casey (J. Watson), a chauffeur (F. Williams).

THEATRE ROYAL.

The Theatre Royal will re-open to-night under the Beaumont Smith and Leslie Hoskins direction, with Rex. Beach's powerful drama of life in snowbound Alaska, entitled "The Barrier." In this exciting border play Mr. Cyril Mackay will appear once more in one of his best characters as "Poleon Doret," the gay and good-hearted Franco-Canadian trapper, and the cast will further include—John Gale (Winton Hall), No-creek Lee (Harry Hodson), Alluna (Margaret Linden), Necia (Olive Wilton), Mead Burrell (Reynolds Denniston), Runnion (Reginald Kenneth), Corporal Thomas (Harry Halley), Dan Stark (Arthur Styan), Skagway Jack (Reginald Conrad), Skin Pete (Percy Walshe), Trader Thomson (Gordon Sinclair), Chick (Hal Norton).

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.

"Potash and Perlmutter" took so kindly to its new home at Her Majesty's Theatre that scores of people were unable to gain admission both on Thursday and again last night. Mr. Paul Burns as the good-natured, simple Abe Potash, and Mr. Samuel Le Bert as the clever and irascible Mawruss advantageously dominate a cast in which Miss Margaret Vindon successfully appears as the highly-salaried designer who appeals as the quasi heroine of the realistic comedy.

PALACE—THE ROYAL STROLLERS.

The final matinee of the Royal Strollers' season at the Palace Theatre will take place to-day at 2.30 and on Wednesday next, after which the coterie of clever artists will enter upon their last three nights. For these farewell programmes the travesty on "Faust." The train trip, with chief stroller Sydney James as guard, "Two Curates," with song and dance; the motion of the band, and a scene with "Billy" by Mr. James, and the Spanish bullfight, will be included.

ADELPHI THEATRE.

"From Millgirl to Millionairess" has proved so successful that the Marlow management has decided to run Mrs. Morton Powell's remarkable story of Lancashire mill life for another week. On Saturday night next, however, "Robbery Under Arms" will be staged, with a realistic hold-up of the Royal mail coach, a real rain scene, and the race for the Goldfield's Cup. The attraction is bound to prove popular.

Mr. Marlow is now in Melbourne completing arrangements for the Adelphi Christmas pantomime, a spectacular production of "Dick Whittington."

TIVOLI THEATRE.

The Tivoli management announces "an extra contingent of stars" for this afternoon and evening. The first appearance in vaudeville of Miss Ella Caspers, the best contralto Australia has produced during the past decade, who has filled important concert engagements in London, should prove of especial interest; and another concert artist who has joined the Tivoli is Hector Goodsink, an Australian operatic tenor trained in Italy. There are two newcomers on the regular vaudeville side, namely, Jack Birchley, "the versatile chap," and Desmond and Dalton, patter comedians. Stafford and Co. in their pretty hunting story with their wonderful dogs, Rox and his mate, Mary Elizabeth, the racy raconteur, and a long list of artists will reappear.

BLASCHECK'S SEASON EXTENDED.

Mr. Joseph Blascheck having decided to extend his season at the Little Theatre for another week, will make an entire change of programme to-night. Mr. Blascheck will give "Quick Work," "Not Such a Fool as He Looks," "Invictus," "An Old Sweetheart of Mine," "A Fallen Star," and "Spotty—the story of a Cockney Soldier." Miss Alyce Austin will contribute "I Don't Seem to Want You," and other pieces, besides joining with the principal in various laughable duets. On Friday night by arrangement with the Irish Society, an "Irish Night" will be given.

THE SYDNEY SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA.

The third concert of the Sydney Symphony Orchestra will be given in the Conservatorium this afternoon at 3 o'clock, when 75 professional players will assist, under the baton of Mr. Gustave Slapoffski, with Mr. Cyril Monk as leader. The programme will include the "Oberon" overture, Ernest Truman's "Lasca," the "Italian Symphony" of Mendelssohn, and the "Dance of the Hours" from "La Gioconda" (Ponchielli). Mr. Arthur Appleby will introduce "The Hero's Death," by Christian Helleman, and Mr. Bryce Carter will render an "Adagio" by Isidor Seiss for 'cello solo with orchestra. The plan is at Paling's.

SYDNEY CHORAL SOCIETY.

The Sydney Choral Society will give a performance of Mendelssohn's dramatic oratorio "The Elijah" at the Town Hall to-night, when Mr. W. Reginald Goud will conduct a chorus of nearly 350 voices, with an orchestra of some 65 players, led by Mr. Cyril Monk. The principals will be Miss Muriel Barton, Miss Emilie Fenn, Mr. Bridge de Looze, and Mr. A. K. Jamieson. The plan for this revival of an attractive masterpiece, in aid of the fund for our wounded soldiers, is at Paling's, at popular prices.

MME. CHARVIN'S WAR CONCERT.

Increasing interest is being taken in the great concert which Mme. Charvin (Yvonne Leverrier) is organising for October 9 at the Town Hall in aid of all the Regimental Comforts Committees. The Governor-General and Lady Helen Munro Ferguson, the Governor and Lady Edeline Strickland, and all the allied Consuls have accorded their patronage. In addition to the Franco-Australian pianist herself, Mrs. Hugh Ward, Misses Emilie Fenn, Gertrude Lambert, Messrs. Malcolm M'Eachern, W. J. Coad, Ernest Truman, and Lawrence Campbell will assist. Mmes. Alex. Jobson, Herbert Kerdolf, and Zlotkowski are joint honorary secretaries, with Mr. J. E. Brownlow as honorary concert director.

REVUE FOR BLIND SOLDIERS.

Heavy booking at Paling's promises well for the success of the Eastern Revue and variety entertainment at the Repertory Theatre next Friday and Saturday nights. This feast of gaiety and fun will be in aid of the Red Cross section devoted to soldiers blinded in the war. The chorus of 22 smart and pretty girls urged on their wild career by Misses Thelma Maddrell, Dora Alexander, and Phyllis Nicholson, will be a leading feature. Miss Dorothy Galbraith will sing and dance, Mr. Montague Stephen will have some characteristic dances, and Mr. Gordon Lowe and Miss Maddrell will be heard in a duet that captured London. Mrs. Gordon Lowe is responsible for the stage management.

MR. BROWNLOW'S MATINEES.

At the Town Hall to-morrow afternoon, at 3 o'clock, a grand sacred concert will be given under the direction of Mr. J. E. Brownlow. The artists will be Miss Vera Tasma (soprano), Miss Geraldine Ward (contralto), and Messrs. C. Murray Gibbes (baritone), Aneurin J. Morris (tenor), Frederick Whitlow (elocutionist), Claude M'Glynn (violinist), and Vera Barnett (accompanist).

ARMY SERVICE CORPS MATINEE.

On Monday, at 2 p.m., an entertainment will be given at the Palace Theatre, kindly lent by J. and N. Tait, in aid of the Army Service Corps Comforts Fund. In addition to Mr. Sydney James and the Royal Strollers and artists from the National Theatre, there will be other attractive items by Mrs. Hugh J. Ward, pupils from Miss Sara Collins' studio, Mr. Sam Le Bert, and Mr. Joseph Blascheck, and Miss Alyce Austin. The plan is at Nicholson's.

CHAPLAIN-COLONEL G. E. ROWE.

At the Town Hall on Tuesday evening next Chaplain-Colonel Rowe will repeat the interesting story of "Active Service on Land and Sea," illustrated by electric views descriptive of camp life in Cairo, the lonesome desert, the shores of Gallipoli, the military hospitals, and Red Cross nurses. The musical programme will be contributed to by Miss Ruby Drury, Mr. Marsh Little, and the New South Wales State Military Band, under Captain W. G. Bentley. The proceeds will be in aid of the 19th Battalion Comfort Funds. The plan is at Paling's.

MASTER HOUSTON'S RECITAL.

Master Willie Houston's violin recital to help a young Australian musician ill-treated in Germany (Joseph Vial), by no means attracted the large audience such a cause would have justified. Charitable appeals are too frequent these days, and though Houston is an especially sound and clever player, owing to his youth (14 years) the actual achievement is not calculated to draw a crowd. Veracini's beautiful "Sonata in E minor," the first movement of which possesses many of the majestic qualities of Handel's style, was rendered with sympathy and care to an accompaniment finely played by Mrs. F. Mowat Carter. One of the young player's best efforts was the "Meditation from Thaïs" (Massenet) marked by tenderness of expression and considerable breadth of tone. The difficult Tartini-Kreisler "Variations on a Theme by Corelli," were accurately and even brilliantly rendered, and there were a host of big repertoire pieces not all of which were as successfully handled. Master Houston, who is from the studio of Mr. Wm. J. Grieves, has advanced further along the road which will probably make of him a sound artist possessed of many good qualities.

THE LYCEUM.

Bret Harte's famous story, "Salomy Jane," will be presented as a photo. play at the Lyceum all next week. Apart from the dramatic interest, the redwood forests of the Yosemite Valley, in California, are pressed into service for the scenic settings. Beatriz Michelena and H. Peters play the two principal parts. One of the episodes is the sensational flight of the lovers down the river on a log. Monday's programme includes the English Pictorial Gazette, and a comedy, Blugged Nickel. To-day "Her Shattered Idol" will be shown for the last time.

WEST'S THEATRES.

There will be the usual Saturday matinee at the Glaciarium and Olympia Theatres. At both houses "The Absentee" will illustrate one of the problems of life. The programme in the evening will include the latest Australian Gazette, a drama "Strength," and comedies. On Monday, at both houses, "The Courage of the Man" will be the attraction, and with it will be shown Thanhouser, Keystone, and Vita comedies. De Groen's Orchestra supply the music.

PICTURE BLOCK THEATRES.

"The Loyal Rebel," a story of the Eureka Stockade, by Arthur Wright, will be presented all next week at the Crystal Palace. The cast of this Australian photo play includes Miss Maisie Carte, Mr. Reynolds Denniston, Mr. Percy Walsh, and Mr. Charles Villiers. Topical and comic pictures will also be shown. From Monday to Thursday patrons of the Lyric Theatre will see "Sons of Satan," "Safety First," and a topical budget, "When the Fleet Sailed," is in reserve for Thursday and the two following days. "The Straight and Narrow Path" is to be screened on Monday at the Colonial Theatre, with American Battleships and "Little Boy That Once was He." "Underneath the Paint," "In the Bank," the Warwick pictorial chronicle, and Birds Feeding their Young, are four of the film selections at the Empress Theatre.

"THE WAYBACKS" AT THE PALACE.

At the Palace Theatre on Saturday next Mr. Philip Lytton will present, for the first time in Australia, a dramatic version of Henry Fletcher's famous Australian stories, under the title of "The Waybacks: At home and in town." This popular series, full of humorous incident and dialogue, affords ample scope for stage production, and so many people have read of and loved Dads Wayback and his rustic friends that the opportunity of seeing them portrayed in the flesh can hardly fail to appeal to playgoers.

BLUE CROSS.

Mr. H. Chisholm, hon. secretary of the Blue Cross Fund, 30 Castlereagh-street, acknowledges the following subscriptions:—Already acknowledged, £1868/2/9; collected by Mrs. Sabine, through Grafton branch Red Cross Society, £5/18/7; subscribed by ladies at Mrs. R. T. Hole's afternoon tea, £3/10/; and smaller amounts, making a total of £1880/18/6.

Y.M.C.A. FIELD SERVICE.

Advice has been received from Mr. William Jessop, general secretary, Y.M.C.A., Cairo, of the great demand by wounded men in the hospitals in Cairo and Alexandria, and also by men in the trenches, for Australian illustrated papers. Mr. Gillanders asks that several hundreds of people might send a paper each every week. They should be addressed to Mr. William Jessop, general secretary, Y.M.C.A., Cairo.

The Y.M.C.A. in Egypt has landed several cases of writing material in Gallipoli, and the men in the trenches are not now short of letter paper. The Sydney Y.M.C.A. has answered 300 inquiries in the last four weeks; 110 by cable.

The financial needs of the Y.M.C.A. military operations are £60 weekly and money is badly wanted. The following additional contributions are acknowledged:—Already acknowledged, £2644/15/; canteen trust account Liverpool, per Colonel G. H. Kirkland, second donation, £15 13/7; and smaller sums, making a total of £4672/9/11.

FRENCH-AUSTRALIAN LEAGUE.

The Loaf Fund committee wishes once more to warmly thank the faithful anonymous donors, amongst whom are Louisa, R.J.M., Linda, Louise, and "Little Elsie." Already acknowledged, £11,698/16/2; Miss Gladys W. Cooper, £5; G. Earp, £10. Total, with other amounts, £11,721/8/3.

The Loaf Fund has now reached 79,910 loaves—4 loaf costs /4.

CHRISTMAS GIFTS.

The committee of the 18th Battalion and Reinforcements Comforts Fund are making special efforts to send Christmas gifts to the soldiers now at the front, and have arranged a gift entertainment, to be held at St. James's Hall, Phillip-street, on Friday afternoon. It has been decided to make up in special tins a small plum pudding, Christmas cake, dates, prunes, boiled lollies, and chocolate.

The committee for providing comforts for the 3rd Battalion wish to send a Christmas gift if possible to every man at the front, and the hon. treasurer is Mr. Justice Street. The Battalion room is situated at M'Ilraith's-buildings, 124 Oxford-street, Darlinghurst. A general committee meeting will be held on Wednesday, at the room, Mrs. Philip Street presiding.

The friends of those in the 20th Battalion have decided to send each soldier a Christmas gift and a plum pudding. A gift afternoon is to be held on October 5, and goods may be sent to the depot at No. 63 Pitt-street, until October 9.

TANNED SHEEPSKIN CLOTHING.

The hon. treasurer, Mr. W. H. Fletcher, Equitable-building, 350 George-street, Sydney, acknowledges the following additional donations:—Miss Flora I. Macansh, £2/2/; Richmond and Tweed District Patriotic Carnival Committee, further donation, per L. R. Davis, £103/1/9; proceeds third social held at Combaning, per J. J. Fitzpatrick, £6/16/6; residents of Anna Bay, donations and proceeds of concert and social, per W. G. Rae, £16/3/; Mrs. R. M. Bell, £7/7/; principal and employees of T. Taylor and Co., Ltd. (seventh donation), £2/10/; proceeds of sale of flowers from garden of Mr. R. M. Pitt, per Dr. Smith, on behalf of Mrs. Hugh Ward, £53; T. Roy Morse, proceeds tennis tournament, £2/5/; W. Neville, Bendall, £5; Miss L. E. and A. Christian, £5/5/; G. S. Bussacott, £4/5/; Leslie M. T. Seacombe, hon. sec. Namoi Picnic Race Club, per Pastoralists' Union of N.S.W., £49/10/; employees Johnson Bros. and Co., Ltd., £8/8/9; Mrs. E. Greville Grainger, £5/5/; Hugh McMaster, £2/15/; Dalgety and Co., Ltd., proceeds sales of donated skins, £61/19/7. Total, including sales of vests and small sums, £14,865/19/11.

The Commonwealth official correspondent cabled on the 3rd instant:—"Winter at Gallipoli is very severe, beginning with heavy rains, and later northerly winds and intense bitter, blinding snow, which covers all the higher hills, if not the whole country." As many sheepskin vests will be sent to Alexandria for our boys as the committee can provide with the funds at their disposal. More suitable sheepskins are coming into the market, and an effort will be made to send at least 20,000 vests in addition to over 6000 sent to London to Sir George Reid.

Tickets for the art union to be drawn on October 18 for a 12-h.p. Berliet 4-seater motor car, presented by Captain A. W. Pearse, are selling rapidly. The car, which Captain Pearse values at £500, will be a great adjunct to the fund for vests for our soldiers at the front.

A garden fete, to be opened by her Excellency Lady Helen Munro Ferguson, is to be held on Friday, October 8, by permission of Messrs. T. F. and E. W. Knox, in the grounds of Leura and Rona, Bellevue Hill, in aid of the Tanned Sheepskin Waistcoat Fund.

AUSTRALIA TO THE FRONT.—After very many years of practical experience with Incubators, I am now offering to the public the most up-to-date Incubator that has ever been put on the market. It will be known by the name of THE HARRIS HATCHER. This Incubator has come to stay, for it embodies all the most up-to-date improvements necessary for successful hatching. It is simplicity itself. The Regulating Gear is perfect and self adjusting, and will keep the machine at an even temperature right throughout the hatch. The tested Lamp is absolutely safe and reliable, which is most essential to good hatching. The egg tray is fitted with a neat trap. The Thermometer, which is of the best tested class, swings nicely over the eggs, and can be plainly seen through the double glass door, and need never be handled throughout the hatch. The Incubator itself is an article of furniture, being neat and well finished, and made of the best seasoned material.

Be sure you inspect THE HARRIS HATCHER at work before purchasing any other Incubator, and we know what your choice will be.

We guarantee it a perfect hatcher of strong, vigorous Chicks and Ducklings.

THE "MARSH" RAIN MAKER

would prove a splendid investment for your Farm, Field, Lawn, or Garden. Its reliability and all-round usefulness make it the choice of all who recognise the importance of effective watering.

The "Marsh" Sprinkler can be adjusted so that the flow can be readily regulated from a heavy rain to a fine mist. This entirely eliminates the danger of under or over watering—a most important matter.

The water falls exactly as the rain does, so that the effect is as near to that of real rain as it is possible to secure.

FACE MASSAGE,
which has been proved to be the best means to restore the contour of a withering face and drooping complexion. By its means the skin is cleared of retained sebaceous matter, intermingled with dirt and infective germs that cause inflammatory skin lesions, such as PIMPLES, BLACKHEADS, DISCOLORATIONS, Shrivelling, and premature WRINKLING, and at the same time a new life is given to the sluggish circulation with a persistence that eventually builds up the sunken hollows, and produces a HEALTHY GLOW and TEXTURE.

SHORTHAND IN 30 DAYS.
The BOYD System.
Taught personally or by correspondence.
(Success guaranteed.)

It would not be proper to claim that a person can learn Shorthand in 30 days by the old method where characters represent single letters, any more than it would be right to claim that a person may travel 60 miles an hour on a stage coach. But it is true that a person may travel 60 miles an hour by means of an electric car because its make-up is different. So it is with BOYD SHORTHAND. It is based on principles entirely different from any other system. The word "impossible" does not belong to the vocabulary of progressive people.

Every day emphasises the need for Ice Chests, so that it is by no means too early to purchase.

which are ideal in every particular. The lining of "Notaseme" Refrigerators is made of granite wood, a composition of stone which will not break, leak, or rust, nor absorb dampness or germs. It has no seams, therefore it can have no cracks or crannies to harbour uncleanliness. Moreover, in the "Notaseme" Refrigerator all parts, including shelves and ice chamber, may be thoroughly and easily cleaned in a few moments. This special consideration for reducing daily work will strongly appeal to every housewife.

AN OUNCE OF FACT

IS WORTH

A TON OF THEORY.

I mean to convey that if every woman could reason a little more, and not be misled by people who really don't understand in nine cases out of ten what they are talking about when they say that there is not any cure, and if done by an electric needle it is painful; it is not painful, and the treatment can be given by an expert without any inconvenience to the client. Now, just think how foolish it is of you to buy an expensive dress and wear it for your pleasure, and possibly while partaking of the pleasure you hear the remark

SUPERFLUOUS HAIRS

LOOK AT THAT WOMAN'S FACE.

She has quite a moustache; or it will be, quite a beard. Then you may hear, as I did while at the theatre one night, the remark passed by some young men about a woman who came in and sat in front of them—"That woman looks as though she should use the razor." No, remember the dress can be bought any time, and it will only attract attention to your blemishes. If you do not take them in time they become worse, and it will be a longer case to cure, and more expense.

YOUR CHANCE IS—

COME NOW, THE FIRST TIME YOU ARE IN TOWN, AND HAVE A FEW HAIRS REMOVED FREE.

THE EXPERT OPERATOR OF FIFTEEN YEARS'
CONSTANT PRACTICE IN SYDNEY.
A SPECIFIED NUMBER OF HAIRS WILL BE REMOVED FOR £1 1s.

I make mention of this, as many clients think the fees will be exorbitant.

MOLES OF ALL KINDS

WRINKLES.

Wrinkles in general may depend upon an unnatural use of the muscles, but also upon a lack of this use, with the result that the muscles become flabby, sinking below their natural level, and allowing the skin to fall with them, thus causing hollows, furrows, and folds.

It is well known that exercise strengthens faculty, but care must be taken not to over exert a muscle or a group of muscles. A muscle is built up by gentle systematic massage, but can be rendered entirely useless by rough, unnatural manipulation. If you call I will demonstrate to you the right and wrong methods.

NETTOYER CREAM
will also help you to clear the skin of all secretions. It will clear and make a rough skin soft, giving it a natural, healthy appearance, 3/6 small pot, 6/ large.
SUNBURN AND FRECKLES
NETTOYER FRECKLE CREAM

MEASLES AND FLUENZOL.

Mrs. R. L. Lovick, Annandale, writes to us as follows:—

"I wish to let you know how good I have found FLUENZOL. Some six months ago I purchased a bottle, as my little girl had a very bad sore throat. This it soon cured. Noticing from the printed matter enclosed that it was good to prevent any germs attacking the throat, I made my daughter gargle her throat with it night and morning. She was the only child in her class at school who did not take MEASLES. I am sure that FLUENZOL prevented her getting it, as she is not strong.

"I will never be without a bottle in the house. I am sure it is better than you say it is."

"Yours truly,
"R. L. LOVICK."

There is no doubt that the antiseptic qualities of FLUENZOL killed any microbes of measles that entered the nose and throat of Mrs. Lovick's daughter. FLUENZOL is absolutely the very best remedy for COUGHS and ALL THROAT AFFECTIONS—Sore, Relaxed, or Diphtheric Throat, Swollen Glands, Bronchial Catarrh, Tonsilitis, Whooping Cough, Singers' Throat, Smokers' Throat, Quinsy, etc.

All Chemists and Stores. Price, 1/6 and 2/6.
